Forecasted Key Milestones:

Date Customer Must be Ready to Receive Post-Conversion Material:	February 25, 2021
--	-------------------

Description of Change to the Customer:

Due to tooling end-of-life constraints, discontinuing supplier support and process simplification, Intel will be changing their process for placing lids during the cure portion of the assembly process. This change will result in the following two visual changes to the package:

- There will be some additional sealant on the edge where the Lid meets the substrate
- There will be a break in the sealant placed on the substrate just under the lid

Note: The lid process referred to as "old placement process" in the pictures below uses an older technology placed by a specific tool that will end of life. The process referred to below as the "new placement process" although similar, is the next generation. Both the old placement process and the new placement process attach lids to units, accomplishing the same function. However, moving to the new placement process results in the two changes named within this notification.

1. Additional Sealant noticeable on edge where substrate and lid meet, causing a squished-out appearance.

New Placement Process

2. A break in the sealant opening on the substrate on the underside of the lid

These minor changes are visible to the customer upon inspection and will occur on the Select Intel® Xeon®, Intel® Core™ and Boxed Intel® Core™ Processors listed in the Products Affected / Intel Ordering Codes table below.

Customer Impact of Change and Recommended Action:

This is a Minor change. There is no change to the Form, Fit or Function of the product as a result of this change. This is strictly a result of using different toolsets to accomplish the same task. Customers do not need to do anything as a result of this change.

Intel will not do a hard transition off of the old placement process to the new placement process. Therefore, customers should expect to see a limited mixture of finished goods until fully transitioned. The changes will start as early as February 25, 2021 as noted above.

Once Intel begins to transition, the older placement process will be discontinued and only the new process will be in place.

Please contact your Intel Representative with any questions or concerns regarding the change detailed in this notification.
