FOR GOOD SHOOTING IN 1943 DEPEND ON DU PONT CINE FILM

SUPERIOR 1 (Type 104)

Fine grain Cine Film. Ideal for background negatives and outdoor use. This film has moderate speed and requires normal development.

SUPERIOR 2 (Type 126)

High-speed, fine grain Cine Film, with long scale gradation and well-corrected panchromatic color response. A balanced film for general use.

SUPERIOR 3 (Type 127)

The Film for use under adverse lighting conditions. Although it is approximately twice as fast as Superior 2, it retains remarkably fine grain size.

Foreword

BY THE EDITOR

THE FORWARD MARCH of historic events which in the last 12 months have cast the motion picture in a major war role perforce take precedence in this, the Silver Anniversary Edition of the Year Book of Motion Pictures.

FATED BY ITS ATTRIBUTES to be a principal weapon, both offensive and defensive, in total, global war, the motion picture and the American industry to whose business genius it largely owes its present perfection together have fully met the tests incident to the first year of conflict.

THE RECORD, as set down in detail in the Industry at War Section for immediate reference as well as for the enlightenment of those who later will take up the trade's banner, speaks, and compellingly, for itself. Parenthetically, it may be observed that the unity of purpose and of effort manifested by all arms of the industry is a hopeful sign of the times—an augury that the trade is not indifferent to the principles which find expression in the phrase, United Nations.

THE INDEX of editorial contents further reflects the many new features and changes designed to improve the encyclopedic volume's service to the trade. Innovations in style and format likewise have as their purpose the staff's ruling purpose, the presentation of an all-embracing reference book whose voice in its given field is that of authority.

IF A FEW OMISSIONS are noted, the explanation is a simple one. Some statistical information is now subject to military restrictions; in other instances, the censorship regulations rule against inclusion.

AS IN THE INSTANCES of the 24 preceding editions, the contents of the Silver Anniversary Volume reflects the zeal and work of many contributors, whose number indeed grows with each compilation. To all of them, and especially to the MPPDA, the IWAC, the Industry Service Bureaus, East and West, the Academy, the AAA, the studios, distributors, guilds, unions, Federal agencies, the daily press and foreign collaborators the Editor acknowledges his indebtedness for assistance cheerfully and painstakingly extended.

Jack Olierate

22 OUT OF 148!

... and 2 Out of the Top 10!

Donald M. Nelson, center, with the two members of the RCA Family, Edwin Tracy, right, who received the highest Citation of Individual Production Merit conferred by the President, and Stanley Crawford, left, who received a WPB Certificate of Individual Merit from the President.

When the President of the United States and the War Production Board honored America's leading heroes of production, 22 out of a National total of 148 were members of the RCA Family. And of the 10 winners of the nation's highest production awards, 2 were men who were doing their share for Victory at RCA!

Here is further proof that RCA is an organization with the skill, the men, the resources, and the determination to do the best possible job that can be done in making radio, sound, and film equipment.

Today, that organization and that skill is devoted to but one task and one goal—swift and final Victory.

Films for the fight

AMONG the highlights on the Home Front have been the educational and morale-building films that have come out of Hollywood in recent months.

We're glad that Agfa Ansco 35mm. films—including the famous Supreme and Ultra-Speed negative stocks—have had a part in this great work.

You may also be interested in knowing about some of our other wartime production which includes, among other products, aerial and camera gun film, as well as x-ray films and sheet films for the Armed Forces.

To the war effort, also, goes 100% of our production on Ansco Color Film. You'll hear more about that remarkable product after the war.

LISTEN!

Victory is not coming to us solely from the gallantry of our courageous youth around the world's far-flung battle fronts.

Victory will also come because of loyal, self-sacrificing Americans, who would give up anything, that the boys in the field may have the best there is, to finish the job quickly.

Victory therefore must monopolize the daily thinking of every one of us on the home front. Don't let the boys in the tanks and planes and trenches do it all.

Victory will be speeded too, by the Theatre-man who refuses to see valuable film wasted, or other badly-needed materials sabotaged by careless handling and neglect.

Victory—it must not be forgotten either—can be retarded too, by whining and fault-finding and complaining. We are all soldiers in a common cause, and there must be but one thought ever in our minds—

Victory!

PHYSICALLY FIT

There is no place for weaklings in this war. It's a war for survival, survival of the fittest.

That goes for materials, too. Even carpet, because the longer-wearing the carpet, the greater the number of looms freed for essential war materials.

So consider yourself lucky if you have Crestwood in your theatre. Crestwood will see you through. It has what it takes to stand the gaff!

The skills that made Crestwood possible have enlisted for the duration . . . for the production of duck, blankets, ordnance and other materials needed for the theatres of war.

in the service for the duration

USAIRCO is building a great many items for Uncle Sam. A great many of them we've been making for many years—Blowers, Washers, Coils, Blast Heaters—and they're finding important uses at Army and Navy air bases; airports; on ships; in powder plants; airplane factories and hospitals.

USAIRCO is manufacturing many other items essential to the war effort—things about which we can't write, save to let you know that USAIRCO personnel and facilities are all out for the war. Whatever we can make that can contribute, we'll make—and we hope that it will equal the record of the Motion Picture industry.

REFRIGERATED KOOLER-AIRE

will be back after the war so that your House can have refrigerated cooling at the lowest dollar cost. This ingenious unit combines every phase of refrigerated cooling in a single unit, engineered and built to make profit for the man who owns it. Books, describing this system are still available. We'll be glad to send you a copy.

When Victory Comes

A MERICAN MOTION PICTURES, with their universal appeal and their self-regulation, are so wholly a part of democracy that dictators hate them as they hate democracy. This reaction of these blood-stained and violent men strikingly demonstrates the service rendered by the screen to free peoples, and the significance of the film as a major tool of total war.

APPRECIATION in high places has been shown of the motion picture's ability both to maintain its business of entertainment and also to give the public that necessary information which leads to understanding and brings home to each of us what this conflict means to all.

WHEN VICTORY COMES, as it must and will come, it will bring motion pictures another great responsibility and opportunity. Significant in the war, they must be significant in that "tomorrow when the world is free," and must do their part in physical, economic and spiritual rebuilding.

ANY FUTURE PEACE not understood by different peoples and cross sections of peoples will not be acceptable and will not endure. What is read or spoken is translated into various meanings by various minds, but far flung groups may sit before countless screens and see exactly the same picture.

SO, in visualizing what is of mutual interest, in maintaining a flow of healing entertainment, in dramatic presentation of many of the problems sure to arise, the motion picture will continue to render vital service in a world which it is devoutly to be hoped will hold kindness and liberty and justice for all.

GARY COOPER

The Man of the Year

By CHESTER B. BAHN

Editor, THE FILM DAILY

SHARPLY etched against the thrilling patriotic background of the motion picture industry at war stands the staunch figure of the average American exhibitor as the trade's own Man of the Year.

The achievements in behalf of the nation's war effort by production and distribution forces in the first year of global conflict have been prodigious. No assignment was voiced by Government but was unhesitatingly accepted and quickly fulfilled with that purposeful spirit which is, indeed, the industry's distinguishing badge of unselfish national service.

Yet for reasons readily apparent it is the showman, whether he directs the destinies of a far flung circuit or operates the town's only theater, who is the key figure. Upon his all-out participation in the industry's war program depends, largely, its success. Others may supply the grand strategy—he and he alone can translate that strategy into effective action.

This he has done and this he will continue to do for the duration. It has not always been easy and he understands that in the months to come, the task will become increasingly hard. Depleted personnel,—already 18,000 theater men in all categories are estimated to be in uniform—more rigid and more drastic rationing, the pinch of priorities, heavier taxation, higher overhead—all these are inevitable. The exhibitor accents them as the price of ultimate victory, coupling his acceptance with the high resolve that nothing shall interfere with the full performance of his many-sided war role.

Many sided? Exactly. His community, whether large or small, looks to him for entertainment and the vitally needed relaxation which entertainment provides. Just as the man in uniform requires the motion picture to break the tension—and his reliance upon the screen for surcease is eloquently attested by those who lead him into battle—so do the "home folks." Call it escapism or call it morale-insurance as you please, the mental, yes and the physical health, of those on the battle front and those on the home front is dependent to a marked degree upon the product which flows from Hollywood studios. Essentiality and the motion picture may be said to be synonymous.

But the exhibitor does far more than provide the medium by which comedies and dramas work their magic of surcease. His screen has an equally important duty—the presentation of informative messages, some direct, others indirect, designed to enlighten the people on various phases of policy and purpose. Here again is to be found signal recognition of the motion picture's pre-eminence in a democracy where knowledge in truth is power.

Another facet of the theater man's wartime role relates to civilian defense, and in that sphere his is a major chore. First, he is charged with responsibility for the safety aspects of his theater, the adequate training of his staff as wardens, fire fighters, first aid workers. The task is complicated by the fact that personnel is ever-changing under the stress of the war's demands.

His theater, too, is a center for drive activities, whether for funds for Army and Navy Relief, the USO, the Red Cross, the United Nations and other relief agencies, the sale of War Bonds and Stamps, or the collection of books for the armed forces, scrap rubber and metals as well as silk and nylon.

Nor is that all. In his lobby or mezzanine are to be found enrollment booths for blood donors, facilities for war workers, accommodations for draftees, sub-stations for recruiting details. Add to that the availability of his stage for induction ceremonies, free tickets or reduced admissions for service men, special shows as benefits for war causes, cooperation in the conservation program and the exhibitor easily emerges as a civilian dough-boy—the man who carries the load.

In the matter of conservation alone, the exhibitor's aid has transcended mere cleaving to regulations imposed upon him. Theater operators and managers are engaged in a program to make everything last longer, so that all sorts of materials which they would ordinarily consume can go into tanks, guns, planes, ships, and other sinews for the struggle. Too, they continue to comb their theaters for scrap metals, rubber, and additional materials whose shortage is pronounced.

In the performance of many of the services, the exhibitor shares with those engaged in production and distribution, while the two latter have their own sizeable individual contributions. Hollywood has been called upon to maintain production's quality despite the requirements of the conservation and priority program, the expansion of the Army training film schedule and the serious loss of manpower. The record of achievement, detailed elsewhere, speaks for itself.

Distribution's physical setup has been effectively employed to speed the release of films deemed essential to the war effort, while the many-sided activities of home office and branch executives and employes have meshed with those of production and exhibition.

In early 1943, the industry, taking stock, confronts several perplexing problems. Most pressing is that of manpower. Already, the number of men contributed to the services approaches the 28,000 mark and there have been hundreds of other withdrawals, both of men and women, to fill urgent needs of war factories.

Approximately 15 per cent of the men and women normally employed in the industry have left its ranks to don uniforms of the various services, according to the latest information available. Inasmuch as the number of women leaving is comparatively small, the actual contribution of manpower by the trade entails a much greater percentage—close to 29 per cent in the instance of production and undoubtedly a still higher percentage in the instance of exhibition.

As of Jan. 1, 1942, there were approximately 190,900 men and women engaged in the three industry arms—145,600 in the theaters, 14,300 in the home offices and exchanges and 31,000 in the studios.

On the basis of available figures announced as the 1943 YEAR BOOK goes to press, the industry's national honor roll figure for men in uniform stands at 27,677. The number of women who have joined the WAACS, the WAVES, the SPARS, the Marine Corps auxiliary and other service divisions is unknown, but a fair estimate would be several hundred.

The number of theater withdrawals for military service by men is said to total 18,000; or about 12 per cent of the 145,600 employees of both sexes. Men contributed to the armed forces by home offices and by exchanges are reported at 4,500, roughly 31 per cent of the 14,300 men and women engaged in the distribution sphere.

Men who have left the production side to respond to the continuing call to the colors thus far approximate 5,177. The three talent guilds alone have lost an aggregate of 1,197, of which 941 are actors, 224 are writers and 32 are directors.

Top executives and producers to the number of 40 additionally have departed from the studios to take war posts.

Guilds and unions representing essential crafts in Hollywood are training replacement personnel, in some cases with and in others without studio equipment, and have arranged to provide those who qualify with work permits for the duration. Trainees are being drawn, for the most part, from more advanced age groups and from the ranks of those who, because of physical handicaps and dependents, are not likely to be subject to call in the draft. In the forefront in this respect has been the sound men's local.

In the war's first year, more than 3,000 studio employees—camera men, electricians, craftsmen of all types—joined the armed forces. This is one out of 10 workers from the production end, the significance of that is emphasized when it is remembered the industry always has employed a large percentage of women.

In addition to coping with its own problem in the matter of camera personnel, through the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences the industry is training photographers and laboratory workers for six complete units of the Signal Corps. Thus far, 150 motion picture cameramen have been turned out and more are in training; 176 still photographers have been graduated and others are in training. The courses are conducted without expense to the government or to the student, except for living expenses.

The most disturbing side of the manpower problem remains the loss of established "names"—talent, producers, directors, writers—to the military. While Hollywood still has a backlog of male actor talent, and new names are being constantly added to the list of stars, further losses are certain. How will that be met? These approaches are already well-defined: By framing leading roles for older actors, by greater emphasis upon feminine stars, by resort to so-called "subject matter" pictures—pictures in which the story has the maximum mass appeal.

Under the new War Manpower Commission program, the industry's status remains to be fully clarified. As this is written, only 12 studio occupations—all technical—have been classified as essential. Previously, the Commission had so classified technicians in the newsreel field. For the 14,300 employed in distribution, the 145,600 engaged in exhibition, and those grouped as talent, there will be no Selective Service general exemption on essentiality ground, and the Commission may call upon both fields for civilian war workers.

Thus the problem of manpower in the studios, in the home offices, in the exchanges and in the theaters can only become increasingly grave as the war is prolonged unless there are radical changes in policy.

The first opportunity for such a change in policy was presented when the IATSE asked the WMC's Essential Activities Committee to rule projectionists "necessary." The committee declined.

A second opportunity was afforded when M-G-M appealed the I-A draft classification of Mickey Rooney on the basis of essentiality. Rooney, however, was rejected by the Army on physical grounds and deferred by his draft board. Thus the issue of players essentiality remained undetermined.

No report upon the Hollywood aspect would be complete, of course, without reference to the brilliant first-year accomplishment of the Hollywood Victory Committee. Consider the record: 1,141 stars were drawn from the free talent pool to help the war effort; grand total of individual appearances for the 12 months was 6,828; mileage massed by the players in their travels is estimated at more than a million; 474 players participated in 222 live broadcasts, 507 took part in the recording of 111 radio transcriptions, 56 of which were for the War Department.

In September, when the entire industry was engaged in the year's greatest War Bond drive and 270 players participated in the "Stars Over America" tours, the Victory Committee, nevertheless, found the talent and the time to make this record possible:

Sixty-eight players featured in special radio programs and transcriptions for the armed forces in combat zones. 16 players headlined in traveling USO Camp Show units, 184 in personal appearances in USO "spot" shows in the Pacific Coast area, three in camp appearances in Aleutians and Alaska, and five in overseas flights to entertain American service men in England and Ireland.

1942 News Highlights

THE WAR: Through the instrumentality of the industry's all-embracing War Activities Committee, under the chairmanship of George J. Schaefer and the direction of Francis S. Harmon as executive vice-chairman and co-ordinator, the forces of production, distribution and exhibition established a distinguished record of national service, performed both abroad and at home.

UMPI: The unity program for trade reforms and industry "peace-in-our-time" advanced so hopefully by the United Motion Picture Industry under the leadership of William F. Rodgers was rejected by the Department of Justice, thus dooming it, as had been earlier, the projected Trade Practice Code.

EXIT, "BLOCKS OF FIVE": Failure of the Government to successfully prosecute its New York anti-trust suit against the "Little Three" within the time period specified in the consent decree signed by the "Big Five" freed the latter companies from mandatory selling in blocks of five and compulsory tradeshow. Earlier, Minnesota's anti-five statute had been held invalid by a State court which heard the contesting suit of distributors.

ANTI-TRUST LITIGATION: Status quo prevailed insofar as prosecution of the New York equity action against the "Little Three" and the Government's suit against the Griffith circuit and "Little Three" was concerned. Trial of the Government's suit against the Schine circuit, et al, by agreement was deferred for two years.

TRAGEDY: Twenty-two industryites, among them Buck Jones, Charles Stern, Edward Ansin, Harry Asher, Paul Baron, Phil Seletsky, met a tragic death in Boston's night club holocaust on the night of Nov. 28.

$25,000 SALARY CEILING: Action of the Office of Economic Stabilization in establishing a $25,000 salary ceiling confronted the industry with an exceedingly grave problem—a problem whose full weight will not be felt until 1943. In question especially are long-established industry contractual practices and compensatory arrangements.

NEW ADMINISTRATIONS: At 20th-Fox, Spyros Skouras succeeded the late Sidney R. Kent as president; Wendell L. Willkie joined the company as board chairman; Tom Connors was elected vice-president in charge of sales. . . . N. Peter Rathvon became the president of RKO Corp. and Ned E. Depinet of RKO Radio, with Charles W. Koerner, production chief, elected vice-president of the latter.

U. K. REMITTANCE AND QUOTAS: The British Government released American distributors' frozen sterling balances and eased the quota requirements. Under the new quota order, American companies need make only one British feature annually, meeting the remainder of the quota by purchasing the American rights to other British product.

ALTHOUGH the total cost of Coast-produced films made by industrial producers for private companies dropped to $600,000 from the 1941 figure of $1,000,000, orders from the Government for training films more than filled the void, according to industrial operators.

An interesting development of 1941 has been the growth of motion picture producing departments maintained by several airplane and shipbuilding plants. At Douglas, Pat Dowling, who with H. H. Brownell, operated one of the first industrial picture companies on the Coast, is head of the department.

Higher costs of labor and material for set construction have resulted in a 20 per cent rise in the cost of industrial subjects. One-reel films, black and white, are billed at $10,000 each, while in Technicolor the figure is $15,000.

Roland Reed Productions face a busy year. The company is completing a four-reel subject, in Technicolor, dealing with the preservation of wire rope, for the American Steel and Wire Co. The organization will also make three one-reel subjects for Westinghouse, pertaining to nutrition. One of the three will be shown in theaters. Reed will also make a film on nutrition for Servel, Inc., manufacturers of refrigerators.

Reed produced "The Power of God," for the Lutheran Evangelical Synod and has an assignment to make two more features for the same organization.

Hamilton MacFadden, who directed "The Power of God," has formed Church on Film, and will make and distribute features for religious organizations. Jack Boland, long with 20th Century-Fox and who produced a color feature for the American Railway Association, continues active in the industrial field.

Wilding Pictures Productions and Jam Handy, veterans in the advertising and industrial fields, are continuing their Hollywood activities.

Due to the restrictions on raw stock, the industrial producers are now required to submit all their scripts to the War Manpower Board, in Washington, and the proposed films must be of a morale-building nature before any film is allotted.

There was very little activity on the Coast during 1941 as far as the educational field is concerned, although Harris & Roberts, who in 1941 made 10 one-reelers dealing with bird life, continued active. The field of documentary films remained dormant, as did that of religious short subjects.

The distribution of short subjects was given impetus early in 1943 by announcement that the Government had reduced several training films, originally made for the army on 35 mm. film, to 16 mm. for circulation in high schools and colleges.

Television In 1942

THE FILM DAILY Staff

CURTAILMENT of television to meet war's demands and exigencies marked the oral-visual science's calendar year, whose initial months, nevertheless, signaled the high point to date in its progress and application.

In the Spring of '42, following several successive months of high service to the war effort, particularly through the transmission of Civilian Defense and other programs, many of which utilized motion pictures, television as an industry huddled, via its representatives, with the Federal Communications Commission to seek solutions of wartime problems affecting the trade. Chiefly on the agenda were the questions of strategic materials shortages and possibility of halting operations for the duration, a point upon which all delegates were not in agreement, it being proposed that the Government relax its rule requiring stations to devote a minimum of 15 hours per week to programs.

While the situation was generally admitted to be serious, the conviction, however, was expressed that if television research were permitted to continue unfettered, the science might well blossom into a great war industry, and emerge in peacetime strong and healthy, and with the promise of solid service to the nation.

But a week later,—on April 16,—whatever hope had been held out for the construction of additional television facilities received the "kiss of death" when the Defense Communications Board announced that it had recommended to WPB and FCC that no further authorizations for such construction be issued. This proved the harbinger of other restraining directives, an important one of which was to come in mid-May, paradoxically at the instigation of tele leaders who had already represented the disadvantages of the 15-hour-per-week minimum transmission arrangement, up to then in force. FCC, accordingly, slashed the time to four hours per week.

Even in the wake of this cut, there was apparent throughout the balance of the year a fatalistic attitude on the part of station engineers that when certain key and irreplaceable equipment ceased to function, all operation would terminate, any period of decreed transmission hours notwithstanding. But a strong determination, to "carry on" in the face of all difficulties and expectations, prevailed. Under the four-hour "law" adjustments of varying nature were undertaken, some stations telecasting for that length of time on one day per week, others splitting the time over a number of days,—but all to best serve, in their estimations, the good of set owners.

As of Jan. 1, 1943, the following commercially-operating television broadcast stations, having financial association with filmland or considered within the general framework of the industry, held FCC licenses: WABD, Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Inc., New York (Paramount affiliate); WBKB, Balaban & Katz Corp., Chicago; WRGB, General Electric Co., Schenectady; and WNBT, National Broadcasting Co. (RCA affiliate), New York.

Experimental licenses held were by Balaban & Katz Corp., Chicago, for W9XBB, W9XBK, W9XBT, and W9XPR; by Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Inc., Passaic, N. J., for W2XVT, in New York for W2XWV, in Washington for W3XWT, and for W10XKT, the firm's Portable-Mobile Unit in the New York Area; by General Electric, Schenectady, for W2XGE, and for company's New Scotland, N. Y., operations via W2XI; by National Broadcasting Co. for its two Portable-Mobile Units in the New York Area, W2XBT and W2XBU; and by RCA Mfg. Co., Camden, for W3XEP and the Portable Unit in that sector, W3XAD.

Foreign Film Markets

• By AL STEEN

Associate Editor, THE FILM DAILY

FOREIGN departments of American film companies have felt the full impact of America's entrance into the war to a greater degree than any other branch. While those departments have been faced with gigantic problems and have received an unending series of mighty blows, they have, nevertheless, come out very definitely on top.

Since Dec. 7, 1941, almost insurmountable transportation problems have beset foreign traffic, but somehow the foreign departments have managed to get the films to their destinations, by plane, boat, railroad, street car and horseback. There has been no instance in any open country that a theater has been left dark due to the failure of an American picture to arrive.

For the time being, the Orient as a whole is a lost market. But to the everlasting credit of the American industry, pictures have broken through Japanese rings of steel and are being shown regularly in Free China. How this has been accomplished must await the end of the war for explanation.

In Sweden, Switzerland, Spain, Portugal and Turkey, American films continue to entertain the theatergoers. Even in Finland, American pictures are reaching the screen to the despair and amazement of the German propaganda machine.

Foreign organizations have suffered greatly; there have been casualties, prisoners of war and many key men are in the armed services. The problems arising from the manpower pinch have been met by the redoubling of effort on the part of those remaining so that the offices abroad have continued to function without a hitch. From the financial viewpoint, the principles of fair dealing and fair play have somehow been maintained. An outstanding deal was reached with the British Government and most of the companies have brought home more cash than in any year since the depression.

All of this has been defensive, indicating the manner in which the industry has set itself to meet adverse conditions. More important, less publicized and extremely effective has been the industry's contribution to the war effort. Concededly, the propaganda war is of vast importance and, until this year, the Axis supporters have dealt heavily with the democracies. Since America entered the war, there has been a sharp reversal of their efforts, due, to a great extent, to the foreign distribution of American propaganda films. In the newsreels, in the shorts and in the features, American films have found their way to show to foreign peoples the truths about our way of life, the creed of the four liberties and the principles for which free people are fighting.

Even today, right on the heels of our troops in Africa, march the battalions of films—the "Wake Islands," the "Mrs. Minivers" and other epics of a similar nature.

Throughout Latin America, our sister republics are shown the increased interest in, and admiration for, their own countries through the medium of American newsreels which now include a tremendous amount of footage to the Latin American field.

Despite setbacks and problems in the foreign markets, department chiefs are optimistic. As one foreign department head remarked, "The future of the foreign film market is brighter today by far than it was a year ago. As the armies of victory move forward, so do our films."

Exploitation in 1942

• By L. H. MITCHELL
THE FILM DAILY Staff

HARNESSING of exploitation, not only to functionally serve motion picture product per se, but also to exert its power to the greater end of stimulating the war effort, achieved noteworthy results in 1942. Another fact of record, in light of the existing hostilities and the consequent need for cleaving to essential economy, was the virtual total absence of the so-called junkets, for which were substituted local premieres, with by far the majority having direct tie-ins with war welfare,—the latter gaining high benefits, financially as well as promotionally, therefrom.

M-G-M's "The Bugle Sounds" bowed in Louisville, with Army officials from Ft. Knox and Washington attending; "Joe Smith, American," in Memphis, attended by a real Joe Smith, a war worker cited by the President; "Mrs. Miniver" at Radio City Music Hall, with many keys according it Bond premieres; "The War Against Mrs. Hadley," debuting in Washington via a $1,000,000 Bond premiere; "For Me and My Gal," featuring a community war-song sing in Times Square, outside the Astor at midnight; the war-welfare premiere of "Journey for Margaret" in Memphis; "Stand by for Action" in naval base centers just before New Year's, etc.

Warners' superb "Yankee Doodle Dandy" War Bond premiere at the Hollywood Theater, New York, which sold $5,750,000 in those Government securities; the RCAF bow of "Captains of the Clouds" at the New York Strand; the bow of "Wings for the Eagle" in the Warner, Hollywood, with Lockheed Aircraft cooperating; "Across the Pacific," Strand, New York; "Desperate Journey," State, Harrisburg, and New York Strand; and the Fighting French premiere of "Casablanca," Hollywood Theater, New York,—to name a few.

War effort benefited hugely from the premieres of many 20th-Fox pix, notably "A Yank in the R.A.F.," "Iceland," "The Pied Piper," "This Above All," "To the Shores of Tripoli" and "Ten Gentlemen From West Point," each heavily war-flavored.

Paramount's ace releases with war stories or backgrounds included "Pacific Blackout," "Wake Island," "Torpedo Boat," "The Avengers," "The Fleet's In," "True to the Army," "Priorities on Parade," etc., aiding such causes as the Red Cross, Bond Sales, Navy Relief, Friends of Norway, and other agencies.

RKO Radio brilliantly tied in welfare with "Wings and the Woman," "The Navy Comes Through," "Seven Days' Leave" and numerous other features, while Universal struck martial and home front chords via "Eagle Squadron," "Saboteur," "Top Sergeant," "Paris Calling," "Danger in the Pacific," "Madame Spy," and a score more.

United Artists had the superlative "In Which We Serve" benefit premiere at New York's Capitol, the Correspondents' Fund of the Overseas Press Club getting the take; "One of Our Aircraft Is Missing," Globe, New York, for Dutch and British War Relief, and "Moon and Sixpence," at the Rivoli, New York, for Free French Societies.

War effort aid, and in several instances to specific agencies, was accorded by Columbia via top product, including the bond premiere of "My Sister Eileen," Columbus, O., and "The Invaders," Capitol, New York, latter strongly hitched to war activities.

Republic held the Criterion, New York, premiere of "Suicide Squadron" for Polish war prisoners; "Moscow Strikes Back," Globe, New York, to help Russian War Relief; and aided memorably, too, via "Remember Pearl Harbor" and "Flying Tigers."

Monogram highlights were "Black Dragons," "She's in the Army," "Foreign Agent," "War Dogs," etc., and Producers Releasing Corp. spotlighted the war and welfare with "Prisoner of Japan" and others.

A NEW high mark in the production of features in Technicolor was reached in 1942 when 25 pictures were turned out by seven producing companies; and 19 features already had been placed on the Technicolor schedule early in 1943 for current year programs.

In 1942, Columbia produced one in Technicolor for the first time, "The Desperadoes," while Walter Wanger's "Arabian Nights" was the first Technicolor feature to be made on the Universal lot since 1930. The studio output for the year was as follows: Columbia, one; Disney, three (including "Saludos Amigos"); M-G-M, four; Paramount, five; 20th Century-Fox, nine; Universal, two, and Warner Bros., one.

Technicolor's latest major advance was the use of the monopack process in feature pictures. As contrasted with the employment of three-strip negative in a Technicolor camera, monopack permits the use of a single negative in any standard black and white motion picture camera. Thus far, monopack has been used where greater flexibility is desired, such as on airplane wings, for storm and fire scenes, stampedes, etc. An example was the forest fire scenes in Paramount's "The Forest Rangers." Development work on monopack is being continued.

Technicolor also made a further advance in the utilization of studio stages to simulate location exteriors due to a greater knowledge of lighting. This assumed unusual significance because of wartime conditions which restricted location trips.

The Technicolor plant in England in 1942 showed an increase in business as compared with that of the preceding year.

During 1942, studios also placed increased emphasis on short subjects in Technicolor. Paramount utilized Magnacolor in two of its short subjects series.

Cinecolor had an active year. A sequence in "The Moon and Sixpence" was shot in the Cinecolor process, as were the Fox Magic Carpet of Movietone's "Valley of Blossoms," "Gateway to Asia" and "Royal Araby." It was also used in "A Wedding in Bikaner." A number of commercial films made by Castle were produced in Cinecolor.

Established in 1932, Cinecolor uses only two negatives in the camera and prints are made direct from the original negative without recourse to intermediate films. It claims to be the only studio that can supply three-color pictures outside of Technicolor.

Paramount currently is re-issuing two Phil Spitalny short subjects in Cinecolor.

1942 Labor Developments

• By LOU PELEGRINE
THE FILM DAILY Staff

FILM toilers' complete dedication to the task of helping win the war was perhaps the most heartening development in the field of motion picture labor in 1942. The unions' contribution to the war effort was considerable.

Shortage of manpower posed a serious problem. The theater end of the industry found a partial solution by hiring female help where possible. Some unions had no choice but to open their ranks to outsiders in an effort to meet the difficulty. Such persons, however, were not admitted to membership as a rule; they were simply issued work permits good only for the duration.

The labor draft proposed by Paul V. McNutt, war manpower czar, threatened to make matters worse. Richard F. Walsh, president of the IATSE, let it be known that the alliance stood ready to meet the situation—if and when.

The year was marked by sharper rivalry between the AFL-affiliated IATSE and CIO-controlled film unions. In a number of instances the contest reached bitter proportions. One of the hottest fights was over white-collar workers in the film exchanges. Opposing the IATSE was the United Office and Professional Workers of America. The latter got the worst of it, generally speaking. At the end of the year the IATSE held contracts with the majors covering front-office employees at exchanges in all key cities except New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco. Oddly, the IATSE was bucking an AFL union, the Screen Office Employees Guild, in Los Angeles and San Francisco. The CIO union which opposed the IATSE in the New York white-collar battle was the Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, Local 109, UOPWA.

The IA's sole victory over SOPEG in New York was at the Paramount exchange and Paramount News. The results of the collective bargaining elections at the two Paramount units impelled SOPEG to file an unfair labor charge against the alliance, which was accused of coercion and intimidation.

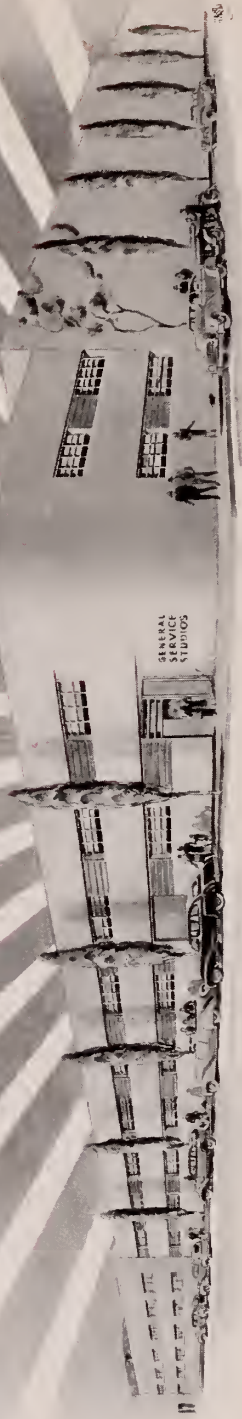

The success of SOPEG in New York was evidence of how fully the industry's white-collar workers had come into their own in 1942. At the year's finale the year-old SOPEG had won bargaining elections at the 20th-Fox home office, Movietone News, DeLuxe Laboratory, RKO Radio home office and warehouse, Columbia home office and exchange, United Artists home office, Loew's home office, Paramount home office and the company's music subsidiaries (Famous Music Corp. and Paramount Music Corp.), National Screen Service home office and exchange and Republic home office.

The union obtained contracts with all these companies except Paramount and Republic, with both of which agreements were in negotiation at this writing. The only two important companies whose office workers were not in some way affiliated with SOPEG were Warner Bros. and Universal. White collarites at the former came under the jurisdiction of the Motion Picture Office Employees, Local 23169, AFL, while those at the latter were covered by the American Federation of Office Employees, also an AFL affiliate.

The industry had its share of labor disputes in 1942. The most noteworthy was the strike of Warner Bros. home office white collarites caused by the failure of both sides to agree on a contract. The 10-day walkout ended when the company signed a pact providing for wage increases, retroactive pay and other benefits. Another Warner headache was a walkout of front-of-the-house employees at Stanley houses in Northern New Jersey. The strike was short-lived.

A strike of projectionists employed in home office, newsreel and studio screening rooms in the New York area was averted when new contracts calling for wage increases were signed between Local 306 and the major companies.

Threat of a strike of Coast white-collar labor ended following a series of conferences in New York between representatives of the studios and of the Screen Office Employees Guild, which had jurisdiction over the office workers involved.

Not content with strengthening its position in the white-collar field, the IATSE further extended its activities to include front-of-the-house personnel in the New York theater field, organizing for the purpose three new locals—B 170, B 171, B 172.

The year saw the coming-of-age of the Screen Publicists Guild of New York, which solidified its gains through affiliation with the CIO's UOPWA. The Motion Picture Laboratory Technicians Union, Local 702, IATSE, won new power by signing a contract with the Paramount lab., which had been the sole major one in the East outside the union's fold. Nineteen forty-two also witnessed another futile effort to consolidate Empire State Motion Picture Operators Union with Local 306.

A move was made to oust Walsh from the IATSE presidency. His opponents, who challenged his right to rule the alliance without benefit of an election by the rank and file, were led by Vincent Jacobi of New York Local 1, stagehands, who offered himself as a presidential candidate. Walsh had been elevated to the presidency by the IA's executive board to fill out the unexpired term of George E. Browne. The issue was settled on the floor of the IA convention in June, with Walsh winning a smashing victory.

Coast studio unions did nicely in 1942, negotiating increases providing for more than $5,000,000 annually. This, of course, was accomplished before the President's wage-salary freeze became effective.

The IATSE business representatives committee, headed by Harold V. S. Smith, of the Sound Technicians union, won its fight with the producers under the wage-hour law and forced them to deliver $1,500,000 in retroactive pay.

An important battle was that of the International Photographers, Local 1659, IATSE, and the American Society of Cinematographers, which for a time threatened cessation of all out-of-state location production. The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers stepped into the picture and, for a time, it seemed the ASC would join the IBEW in a body, but it later agreed to merge with Local 659.

Producers agreed to grant the request of Business Representative Herbert Aller of 659 for elimination of a "no strike" clause in the contract the producers have with the ASC and which is to be assigned to 659. The old ASC agreement expires in March, 1944.

Studio unions agreed to help train replacements for workers lost to the armed services, special Government projects and defense plants. The Sound Technicians union took the lead in this work, establishing classes to teach apprentices. However, none of the studios is opening its books to new members, granting only temporary work permits.

At this writing, the 48-hour work week for the film industry is still unsettled. The proposal for a voluntary agreement to shift from a 36-hour week to the 48-hour week hit a snag when studio projectionists, IATSE laborers, grips and prop men rejected it, contending the change would mean a saving of $1,500,000 annually to the producers. At present, unionists are being paid time and a half overtime after 36 hours, and under the proposal overtime would not become effective until after 40 hours.

Critics Forum~1942

A CROSS SECTION of journalistic opinion with many constructive suggestions was the result of the 1942 Critics Forum—the annual stock-taking by the motion picture critics and reviewers of America, conducted by THE FILM DAILY.

Twelve questions on a variety of industry problems were submitted and the critics were invited to answer as briefly or as fully as they pleased. Following are the questions and a digest of the answers:

NUMBER ONE

The film industry, as you know, is committed to "all out" co-operation with the Government in the war effort. Can you suggest any way that such cooperation may be furthered?

CRTICS generally had little to suggest in the way of additional industry war effort. There was some criticism but, many had no ideas on the question and 18 per cent commented that the industry is doing a good job.

Among the most mentioned suggestions were:

More personal appearances of personalities in War Bond selling campaigns.

Use of War Bonds for game prizes and giveaways.

More propaganda angle films.

Wider use of Government sponsored films.

Free admissions for service men, if only on a controlled basis.

There were scattered pleas for better pictures; less "business as usual"; that the industry refrain from a war picture cycle; for Army-Navy Relief collection boxes, and a counter proposal that theaters eliminate coin collections; for weekly USO or Army-Navy Relief benefit shows; for more war shorts, especially behind-the-scenes material; for service camp shots in newsreels; for more human interest interpretation in newsreels, for the use of theaters as war effort of community centers and for efficiency and the elimination of waste.

NUMBER TWO

As a war-time measure, would audiences in your city, in your opinion, favor the abolition of double features?

FIFTY-TWO per cent of the critics believed audiences would be willing to forego duals as a war-time sacrifice; 17 per cent said "no"; 13 per cent reported no double features in their cities and 18 per cent did not answer the query.

NUMBER THREE

Has attendance at film theaters in your city increased or declined since the U. S. entered the war? Is your city a war production center?

ATTENDANCE has increased in 61 per cent of the critic's cities, declined in 17 per cent, remained static in 11 per cent and 11 per cent did not comment. Broken down into production and non-production centers the survey revealed that since December, 1941, attendance increased in 85 per cent of the war production centers, declined in three per cent and held even in 12 per cent. Filmgoing increased in 47 per cent of non-production towns, declined in 40 per cent and was the same in 13 per cent. In many cases, critics in cities not producing material for the war effort, noted that near-by service camps were partly responsible for increased business. Others considered gasoline and tire rationing an important factor working for or against theater attendance.

NUMBER FOUR

Do film audiences in your city, in your opinion, prefer pictures with war themes or is it your belief that they incline to pictures of simon-pure escapism?

---

SLIGHTLY more than half of the critics gave definite answers to this query; 68 per cent thought their audiences preferred escapist entertainment and 32 sensed a preference for war themes. Many of the newspaper men reported that any good picture—either militaristic or escapist—goes over with their readers. Others commented that there have been few good war pictures so that no trend was discernible.

NUMBER FIVE

What changes, if any, in the treatment of war themes by Hollywood producers would you suggest?

---

REALISM is lacking in motion picture war stories, according to the critics, some 11 per cent suggesting more of that quality. Other suggestions, in the order of their frequency, were:

- Less clowning, fewer gags.
- An awareness of the war in all stories.
- Depiction of ways to aid the war effort.
- Less flagrant patriotism.
- More subtle propaganda in entertainment films and less of the obvious.
- Make enemy appear villainous.
- Fewer spy films.
- Intelligence.
- Plausibility.
- Keep war themes out of "B" pictures.
- More "back home" material.
- More patriotic stories.
- Hero stories.
- Less war sob stuff.
- More comedies.
- Avoid hysterical blackening of the enemy.
- Less "friendly enemy" themes in service pictures.
- Avoidance of the trite.
- More subtle approach in war comedies.
- More fighting pictures.

NUMBER SIX

Many critics recently have stressed the screen's urgent need of new talent. In your opinion, are film companies bringing forward and building new "names" with sufficient speed and exploitation?

OF THE COMMENTATORS who answered this query, 61 per cent thought "names" were being brought forward and exploited with sufficient speed. Not in agreement were 34 per cent of the critics, while five per cent thought "names" were being pushed too fast. Many complained of the number of "names" being pushed but noted little real new talent on screens.

NUMBER SEVEN

TERESA WRIGHT, who appeared in Samuel Goldwyn's "The Little Foxes" and M-G-M's "Mrs. Miniver," tops the list of newer screen faces whom the critics would like to see elevated to stardom.

Just behind the Goldwyn starlet were M-G-M's Katherine Grayson, of "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary," "The Vanishing Virginian" and "Rio Rita," and Van Heflin, who played in "The Feminine Touch," "H. M. Pullham, Esq.," "Johnny Eager," "Kid Glove Killer" and "Grand Central Murder."

Others on the list of feminine players were: Joan Leslie, Donna Reed, Patricia Dane, Veronica Lake, Gene Tierney, Janet Blair, Nancy Coleman, Michele Morgan, Dana Andrews, Betty Field, Kaaren Verne, Dorothy Comingore, Laraine Day, Anne Baxter, Donna Drake, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Marsha Hunt, Susan Hayward, Hedy Lamarr, Jean Rogers, Alexis Smith and Lana Turner.

NUMBER EIGHT

Do you believe that film advertising in national media has material effect on attendance in your city?

SIXTY PER CENT of the critics believe that attendance is favorably affected by national media advertising; 27 per cent thought not, while others conceded some good effects or did not answer the question. A number of commentators stated that all advertising does some good while others suggested heavier local advertising to augment the national campaigns.

NUMBER NINE

Are you impressed favorably by direct mail film advertising which you receive?

NEWSPAPER MEN are unimpressed with the film advertising they receive through the mails to the extent of 51 per cent of the contributors in this forum. Only 21 per cent said they were impressed, the others either not answering or claiming limited interest in the mailed matter.

NUMBER TEN

Do you consider radio a formidable competitive medium to the screen in your territory?

---

ONLY 26 per cent of critics believe that film theaters get much competition from radio. The others think theaters are holding their own. Many pointed out the competition afforded by radio on certain nights when the air waves are loaded with popular talent, or when the war news is particularly hot. Others noted that radio acts as a build-up for screen talent.

NUMBER ELEVEN

Are short subjects adequately exploited and advertised in your city?

---

SHORT SUBJECTS receive adequate exploitation in only 25 per cent of the cities represented in the forum. The balance of cities say "no", many regretting the situation and obviously of the opinion that exhibs. would benefit by stronger play for shorts.

NUMBER TWELVE

What do you consider the most urgent need today of the motion picture industry?

MANY and varied were the answers to this query, successor to the popular "Squawks" department of other forums. Most repeated "need" (according to 22 per cent of the participants) was the familiar lament of the scribes—a plea for better writing and new stories. Next in order were demands for the elimination of duals, and for fewer low-budget pictures—also old bugaboos of the critics. Other "needs" repeatedly suggested were:

- Freedom from censorship.
- Elimination of games, giveaways.
- More musicals.
- More lighter films.
- Less publicity on film colony private lives.
- Better pictures.
- More color in films.

Local "Ten Best" Polls

CLOSE agreement of the millions of American moviegoers with the 1942 "Ten Best Pictures" as determined by THE FILM DAILY's 21st annual poll, is indicated by a consensus of local polls conducted by leading American metropolitan and small city newspapers and by radio stations in conjunction with the national contest.

While the order of selection differs, the two lists single out eight productions for honors. But whereas the national poll included "One Foot in Heaven" and "Suspicion," the consensus substitutes "Now, Voyager," "Reap the Wild Wind" and "This Above All," the latter two tying for the tenth spot. "Reap the Wild Wind" was second on the national poll's Honor Roll, "This Above All" was sixth, and "Now, Voyager," ninth. Both "Suspicion" and "One Foot in Heaven" were among the runners-up in the consensus.

Of the 31 features found on the consensus, company breakdown shows: Paramount, 8; Warners, 7; 20th-Fox, 5; RKO, 4; Metro, 4; Columbia, 2; Universal, 1.

Consensus is on the basis of 15 newspapers and radio stations reporting on the tallies of ballots cast in their local polls. Many newspapers and some radio stations, however, make no count of vote cast, determining local contest winners by checking ballots against the official "Ten Best" list of THE FILM DAILY. Their number increased this year as newspapers more keenly felt the war's manpower pinch.

New high for prizes offered in local polls was set in 1942 with the $1,650 in maturity-value War Bonds which went to winners in the highly successful contest staged by A. De Bernhardt, Jr., drama editor of the Denver Post. All Denver first-runs cooperated with the Colorado daily. Top award in the Post's poll was a $1,000 War Bond.

* Ineligible in national "Ten Best."

Total number of polls represented in consensus, 15.

Total number of pictures, 31.

Note: Many papers, several radio stations conducting local polls do not tabulate votes, merely checking against the national "Ten Best" to determine their contest winners.

Speaking for the Record

The President:

"The American motion picture is one of our most effective media in informing and entertaining our citizens. The motion picture must remain free insofar as national security will permit. I want no censorship of the motion picture; I want no restrictions placed thereon which will impair the usefulness of the film other than those very necessary restrictions which the dictates of safety make imperative."

"In the months to come world conditions may cause the motion picture industry to play an even larger part in the war against Axis tyranny. I know that the responsibility this presents will be cheerfully and completely fulfilled, because no one has a greater stake in victory than you whose profession is so bound up with the maintenance of the American tradition of free communications."

President Roosevelt

Henry Morgenthau, Jr.:

Secretary of the Treasury

"From script to screen and from producer to exhibitor, the motion picture industry has been unfailing in its co-operation with the Treasury in the arduous task of raising money to finance the war. . . . We at the Treasury will continue to look to you for help in the future as in the past."

Frank Knox:

Secretary of the Navy

"Men of the naval establishment look forward to the films you make. That you are all continuing to do fine and important jobs under the restrictions imposed by the war is a tribute to the ability and ingenuity of your profession."

Lowell Mellett:

Chief, OWI Motion Picture Bureau

"In the crisis confronting our country, the motion picture industry is furnishing justification for the great importance it has been permitted to achieve through our democratic processes. When this war has been won, the industry will emerge still free and of greater stature than ever before. I make this prediction because of the character of the men and women in the industry, revealed by the crisis."

"So, the Government is not going into the motion picture business. The Government believes the motion picture business is in the right hands. That is the award the Government has to bestow—its faith in you. The Government has nothing of silver or bronze or gold to give, nothing you can exhibit on your mantelpiece. The Government has only this confidence in your merit; but that is something you can exhibit in sixteen thousand American theaters and innumerable thousands of theaters in other lands. And, unlike the well-earned Oscars that will come to some of you tonight, it is not bestowed for a single year, but I hope and believe, for all the years to come."

Secretary of War

"Military morale cannot be separated from civilian morale. . . . It is dangerous for us to rely too much on military equipment. All armament must be backed and inspired by invincible resources of the human soul."

Donald M. Nelson:

Chairman, WPB

"It is important that the motion picture industry be kept alive, strong and virile."

"The stars, the producers, the directors, the theater-owners and staffs—all branches of your industry—have done a splendid job in behalf of WPB activities. The screen has helped us inform the public on vital problems. The theaters have aided in scrap drives and have responded to every call for assistance. Your efforts have been appreciated and I know they will continue to a victorious peace."

Harold Hopper:

Chief, WPB Films Division

"From the beginning of the nation's war effort, this industry, which plays such an important role in all patriotic and charitable enterprises, has done everything requested of it by any department of the government. . . . Everywhere I have found a full realization of individual responsibility for conserving materials and at the same time preserving the industry that is so necessary to the country's morale."

Lt. Gen. Dwight Eisenhower:

Commanding the AEF in Africa

"Motion pictures are of the utmost importance to provide entertainment and build up the morale. Newsreels are especially of tremendous value, providing for the soldiers the means of keeping up with their friends in other theaters of war and with their families at home. The stories and the sets in the feature productions bring their home country vividly to their memories. Let's have more motion pictures."

Maj. Gen. Charles H. Bonesteel:

Commanding U. S. Troops in Iceland

"Due to the isolation of so many of our installations, I consider that motion pictures are among the outstanding means used to stimulate a healthy state of mind in my command in Iceland. I feel that they are as necessary to the men as rations."

Col. W. Mason Wright, Jr.:

Chief, Pictorial Branch, U. S. Army Bureau of Public Relations

"In times of peace, motion pictures are a luxury, but in times of war they are a necessity."

Lord Halifax:

British Ambassador

"I . . . thank this industry for its fine attitude toward, and its important assistance in, the British fight for democracy. Motion pictures are a vital element in maintenance of the high morale of both our civilian and fighting force."

Madame Chiang Kai-Shek:

The First Lady of China

"To my mind, few if any of the other agencies of public appeal and influence have done more than the motion picture industry in consolidating the will of the people to meet the war emergency and contribute to the victory of the United Nations."

Movies at War...

By FRANCIS S. HARMON

Executive Vice-President, WAC

EIGHTEEN months before the Jap dropped his sneaking bomb load on Pearl Harbor, the screens of this nation were picturing World War II for the movie-goer, and highlighting national defense needs. On that fateful December 7, the motion picture industry was alert.

By that very week the story of Sergeant York, a fine piece of inspirational Americana, had already been told to millions and was on its way to being seen by one of the largest audiences of all time. Theaters in the nation's capitol were then showing A Yank in the RAF and Parachute Battalion. In Los Angeles and Memphis programs for the first week in December included the excellent British documentary, Target for Tonight and Keep 'Em Flying. In New York and Chicago the same newspapers which told of the attack on Pearl Harbor also ran advertisements listing such movies as Dive Bomber, Man Hunt, Flying Cadets, International Squadron, Sergeant York, International Lady and A Yank in the RAF.

A glimpse into Hollywood's cutting rooms, scoring rooms and sound stages several days before the 7th, reveals such inspirational films as Mrs. Miniver, To the Shores of Tripoli; Joe Smith, American; Eagle Squadron, and Captains of the Clouds.

The newsreels reflected the international tension, picturing such "tid-bits" of history—from which future generations will reckon time—as Nomura and Kurusu on their "peace" mission; Prime Minister Churchill stating the British Empire's promise of unqualified support in the event of a Jap attack. Newsreels cameramen as spot news reporters had been bringing the tragedy of war to every American screen. On December 6th, President Roosevelt utilized this medium to proclaim December 15th "Bill of Rights Day."

That the industry was already aiding the government—via the organization known as The Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense—can be seen from a glance at just two of the stories appearing in the trade press. One headline read:

"STARS ON TOUR TO RALLY SALE OF DEFENSE BONDS"

The other:

"WAR DEPT'S PRAISE FOR HOLLY-WOOD CO-OP ON TRAINING FILMS"

Then came the 7th!

Within ten days the industry's cooperative organization became streamlined into the War Activities Committee-Motion Picture Industry, having two aims: to assist, with all possible vigor, the United States and its allied nations in the successful prosecution of the war, and the winning of the peace.

The WAC, in its seven divisions, availed itself of the services of virtually every person in the industry to fulfill those two aims. Its works are visible in the farthest corners of the world, and there is every reason to believe that the organization, in the carrying out of its self-realized duties, has been reviled in the capitols of the axis nations. Which, of course, gives the industry a figurative "E" for Excellence.

A summary of the industry's assistance rendered to day is set forth in the most recent divisional reports, which follow:

Theaters Division

S. H. Fabian, Chairman

On Dec. 7, 1941, some 12,000 theaters had pledged cooperation to this Division. To-day this number has been increased to 16,463, which represents almost every regularly operating theater in the country.

In part due to this increase, but mainly due to more efficient supervising, the Office of War Information Victory Films are achieving practically maximum distribution. Lowell Mellett, Chief of OWI's Motion Picture Section, has stated that he is convinced that almost all exhibitors are showing the films as frequently and as regularly as desired.

Many cities are provided with theater passes for service men: In New York the total often exceeds 40,000 free admissions a week.

Drives

The record of the industry on drives of various kinds has been singularly impressive. Another pre-Pearl Harbor activity was a fund-raising campaign for the USO, with the industry supplying one-twelfth of all the money secured; $977,000 came from theater collections, $200,000 from Hollywood and enough more from New York to bring the figure to $2,220,000.

In 1942 the industry registered a total of $1,450,000 in the March of Dimes collection in theaters. For the campaign for Army and Navy Emergency Relief, theater collections jumped to $2,126,000, while the Hollywood Caravan yielded well over $700,000. This was the largest sum ever collected in a drive of this kind.

The phenomenal September Bond drive is covered in another section of the FILM DAILY YEAR BOOK. (See "Thirty Dizzy Days!!!," by Oscar A. Doob.)

Salvage Campaign

The nation's exhibitors will have a hand in the bombing of Berlin. More than 200,000 tons of salvageable metal have been gathered by theaters, metal which even now is being turned into bombs and other equipment for waging war. It is hardly a breach of military etiquette to infer that one day some of this scrap will find its way to the Wilhelmstrasse.

The 200,000 tons includes both the immediate results of "scrap matinees"—free shows for which a bundle of scrap is the admission fee—and the yields of exhibitors whose special matinees were a part of communal activity. Scrap is sold at an average of $6.00 a ton, which means that about $12,000 was turned over to various eleemosynary and patriotic organizations.

From the end of October, when the salvage campaign began, up to the present date, 2,958 scrap matinees have been held and 11,479,000 admissions given away. The producing companies have donated hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of free film to make these shows possible. Donald M. Nelson, Chief of the War Production Board, personally told the Theaters Division that their aid was invaluable in the campaign spearheaded by the nation's press. In response to his request that scrap matinees continue, many theaters will hold one of these special every month for the duration, and free films will be made available as long as necessary.

December Bond Promotions

In December the Theaters Division, in line with its policy of staging patriotic national rallies to boost bond and stamp sales, conducted two such campaigns. One of these was to commemorate Pearl Harbor and was conceived about the slogan—"Avenge Dec.

7th—On to Victory," and the other attempted to persuade theater patrons that bonds make fine Christmas gifts. Both of these "show-men-style" efforts substantially increased direct sales, and were utilized by the War Savings Staffs in many territories to key their campaigns.

United Nations Week

For 1943 this Division has authorized several campaigns. January 14 through 20 was designated United Nations Week and had a dual purpose. The first was to weld together the peoples of the nations allied in the struggle against the axis. The other, to raise funds for the stricken civilians of these countries.

Red Cross Collection

Late in March a theater collection for the Red Cross will be held. With the world in turmoil, the need for increased contributions to this organization is greater than ever before. The Theaters Division hopes that it will be able to make the movie-going public realize this and anticipates a collection in excess of the record figure established for Army and Navy Emergency Relief.

"Extras"

Mention must be made of other cooperative efforts of this Division. The conservation program early in the year, with the aid of the IATSE, which resulted in "save vital materials" bulletins being posted in every projection booth and backstage of every theater in the land. Important to the war, too, is the distribution of special posters nationally for the Office of War Information, the Treasury and various other government agencies.

Newsreels Division

Walton C. Ament, Michael D. Clofine, Chairmen

This Division is composed of six companies—Movietone, News of the Day, Paramount, Pathe and Universal—releasing 520 reels a year, and the March of Time, with a monthly release. The extent of the Division's cooperation with a win-the-war program is revealed by figures which show that 80 per cent of all the companies' product from December 7, 1941 to December 7, 1942, treated of some phase of the war. The total output was 4,278 clips, of which only 924 did not reflect the crisis in which America finds itself. The latter dealt with domestic, non-war news events.

The complete breakdown of product of the five companies follows:

Subjects dealing with some aspect of the fighting of this global war..... 1004
Activities on America's production front, such as planes coming off assembly lines, etc..... 399

Our armed forces at home, such as scenes of soldiers on maneuvers.....	1127
Subjects dealing with the Treasury's War Bond and stamp campaign, including "Minute Man".....	206
Clips on other Government agencies, such as WPB scrap campaign, FBI round-up of aliens, etc.....	458
Clips portraying some phase of hemisphere relations, or showing Latin-Americans .....	210

Additional contributions of the newsreels to the war effort are the reels in Spanish and Portuguese, which are produced at a rate of one a week in each language by the various companies. These are distributed throughout South and Central American countries. In such reels appear subjects dealing exclusively with our Latin-American neighbors, photographed in Central and South America. In addition, the reels factually report the operations of the United Nations on the fighting fronts of the world, as well as the numerous phases of this country's own tremendous war effort. The Office of Inter-American Affairs, headed by Nelson Rockefeller, recently acclaimed the worth of these reels and noted with pleasure that permanent newsreel correspondents have been established in the principal countries of South America.

When the normal distribution of American newsreels to the rest of the world became impossible, United Newsreel, Inc., was formed, to distribute the best material of all five reels to such countries as Spain, Portugal, Sweden, Egypt, India and the Near East. United Newsreel produces approximately 15 reels, of each issue, in as many languages, which, in some measure, off-set the newsreel editorializing of the axis in these countries. Wide-world distribution of the United Newsreel is achieved by utilizing the foreign distribution facilities of MGM, Paramount, Universal, 20th Century-Fox, with aid from various Government services.

A wire from Lt. General Dwight D. "Ike" Eisenhower, received shortly after the victories in Africa, stresses the need for "more motion pictures," and adds: "Newsreels are especially of tremendous value, providing for the soldiers the means of keeping up with their friends in other theaters of war and with their families at home."

Hollywood Division

Mary McCall, Jr., Chairman

One hour after the radio announcement of the attack on Pearl Harbor, a call came to this division's office, from the commander of the California state guard. He requested 150 trucks and drivers from the studios to meet at the armory for the purpose of transporting men to important strategic points in case of attack. From that hour forth, the Hollywood Division has been in the war.

Through the Hollywood Victory Committee, 1,051 artists have made a total of 6,146 appearances on live radio shows, transcriptions, spot shows, benefits, personal appearances, bond drives, camp shows, both in America and overseas. These personal appearances have proved so important to morale that recently the Army requested the stars make appearances in as many of the military camps as possible.

Through the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, which was cooperating with the Signal Corps of the U. S. Army nine years before the war was declared, the industry has delivered 108 training films to the War Department, while 52 additional subjects are on the way. It now appears that the Government will need between 1,500 and 2,000 one-reel training films for the coming year. In this event, these will be made, as were the others, on a non-profit basis.

In cooperation with the Society of The Americas, a State Department agency, 94 films have been produced for non-theatrical release to the 26 South American republics. Several good will tours by Hollywood stars have been arranged and the Hollywood Caravan to Mexico City, which was the first of these, came in for special commendation from the Hon. Josephus Daniels, then ambassador to Mexico.

The West Coast's Permanent Charities Committee raised $1,984,421.29 during 1942, and is prepared to handle any activity of this nature which may arise during the coming year.

The various Hollywood guilds and unions, with the cooperation of all the studios, have done an excellent job with the Hollywood Canteen. Hundreds of thousands of soldiers have received the thrill of their young lives by "dunking" doughnuts, dancing and talking with the stars. And an uncounted number of "letters to home" have been typed by studio secretaries for the soldiers.

According to official military comment, the industry's Camouflage Unit can claim some of the credit for our land successes against the Jap, insofar as the camouflage of the individual soldier is concerned. With the studios contributing space and material and the heads of the art departments their time, this unit became a "school." Several detachments of officers received their camouflage training from this group.

The Hollywood Writers Mobilization Committee has done yeoman work for the war, much of which is of a confidential nature. In addition to this type of work the scribes are constantly supplying specially written material for radio broadcasts and camp shows.

Other contributions to the war effort by Hollywood include such varied activities as demonstrations for the Army of studio methods of creating smoke and fog; cataloguing and apportionment of studio fire-fighting apparatus, generators and dynamos for use in case of disaster; assembling of pertinent material by the research departments for the use of Military Intelligence; aid of all kinds to units of the armed forces stationed along the west coast.

Now it can be told. Months before American soldiers had landed in North Africa, the motion picture industry turned over to the Office of Strategic Services of the War Department more than 250,000 feet of film which dealt with this terrain, as well as that of other possible theaters of war.

Trade Press Division

Martin Quigley, Chairman

The trade press coverage of the industry's war activities has filled enormous scrap books and has served to keep the entire industry informed of the roles of each branch in these operations. It would literally have been impossible for any of the drives or campaigns to have achieved the success which has crowned our efforts, without the able assistance of the trade press.

Front covers heralding each new activity—news stories tracing the play-by-play account of the strategy of each campaign—more than 100 full pages of free advertising to sock home messages to readers—these phases mirror the trade press contribution. What other industry can point to such lavish cooperation?

Secretary Morgenthau, when shown the contribution made by the "trades" during "Salute to Our Heroes" month, singled out this branch of show business for special citation.

Distributors Division

W. F. Rodgers, Chairman

In the new short subject releasing schedule for the coming year, one war-inspired film will be distributed by the industry's exchanges each week. The Victory Films, produced by the Office of War Information, will alternate each week with the industry-made America Speaks series.

The Victory Films, which range in length from 200 to 1000 feet, are given to the industry to be distributed from the various exchanges at no cost to the Government, with even National Film Carriers' trucks contributing hauling service. Among this group are such subjects as Salvage, Manpower, Japanese Relocation, Colleges at War, Technicians Wanted, etc.

The America Speaks series is filmed in Hollywood around themes suggested by the OWI and released to the theaters on a commercial basis, with all profit going to charity. Some of these films are We Refuse to Die, Magic Alphabet, Keeping Fit, Conquer by the Clock, and Weapons from Waste. It is estimated that Mr. Blabbermouth, produced by MGM, will earn $50,000 for the Red Cross.

A check of the bookings and playings on these subjects reveals that they are viewed by many more people than the average feature-length film. For instance, Any Bonds Today played at 14,458 theaters.

Service to Army Camps

In the U. S. more than 700 Army theaters are now in operation in the various camps and training stations, with 500,000 seats and an annual attendance of 118,000,000. As the armed forces increase, 200 more such theaters will be constructed. Commercial 35-mm. entertainment films are provided by the industry under a mutually satisfactory arrangement, which enables these theaters to show today's movies at a 14-cent admission, with profits to camp mess funds.

Foreign Managers Division

Philip Reisman, Chairman

It is through this Division that the industry supplies 16-mm prints of current screen attractions to the War Department without cost, for free showings to members of Uncle Sam's uniformed forces overseas. So far, 4,700 prints have been turned over to the War Department. In this connection it is interesting to note the comment of Maj. Gen. Charles H. Bonesteel, commanding officer of U. S. troops in Iceland who says:

"Due to the isolation of so many of our installations, I consider that motion pictures are among the outstanding means used to stimulate a healthy state of mind in my command in Iceland. I feel that they are as necessary to the man as rations. All pictures here are screened to a capacity house and we deeply appreciate your efforts to keep us supplied."

Similar comments have been received from Maj. Gen. S. B. Buckner, in Alaska, Maj. Gen. Wheeler, in India, and Lt. Gen. F. M. Andrews, in Cairo.

The War Department received these films, complete with shorts, in 90 minute programs. The Hollywood product, along with projection equipment, goes right out on the transports along with guns, tanks and rations.

The industry is now engaged in assisting the War Department in finding and reconditioning projection equipment and screens for shipment abroad. It has also proffered the entire foreign distribution facilities of the various companies for the handling and servicing of films overseas.

It is interesting to note that Tarzan's New York Adventure had its world premiere in Iceland more than a month before its release in the United States. This premiere had many "firsts." It was the first premiere held in Iceland, the first on 16-mm., the first for which the print was flown by Army plane, the first to which the only admission was the uniform of the U. S. Army. Assuredly, it was the first world premiere in publicity and exploitation history about which nothing was said or written until two weeks afterward.

Public Relations Division

Oscar A. Doob, Chairman

The single thing which the Government realized that the film industry had in great quantity was and is—showmanship. An ability to dramatize events, to ballyhoo some thing or idea with the flair necessary to highlight the values. What the various official agencies who have asked (and received) aid from the industry wanted was an organization with the manpower to “showmanize” a given project.

That, in one newly minted word, is the function of this division—to “showmanize.” That the activities of this year were successful is a tribute at once to the Divisions which sired them and to the Public Relations Division, which, in a measure “inspired them.”

The coming year will undoubtedly mean increased activity for the WAC, and to this end the Public Relations Division has been enlarged and, at the same time, decentralized for greater effectiveness. Serving as a field publicity force are 31 Exchange Area Public Relations Chairmen, each with an area committee. They are now functioning. The area chairmen have appointed local chairmen in every city of 25,000 or over population. On the theory that a good national campaign is the sum of hundreds of good local campaigns, this will both simplify and enormously improve the WAC. United Nations Week, one of the year's most important activities, proved the effectiveness of the new arrangement.

A Look Ahead

Few, if any of us, could visualize a year ago the profound changes in our personal lives and in American business which actual involvement in this global war was to bring. Nor can we tell precisely today what this next year will mean to any of us. We know the cost in blood and treasure will be terrific. We feel in our hearts that no price is too high to pay for freedom.

Last December in his letter appointing Lowell Mellett to be Coordinator of Government Films, our Commander-in-Chief declared that he wanted no restrictions placed upon the motion picture except those dictated by military necessity. President Roosevelt's further statement that the motion picture is one of the most useful media for informing the public has been implemented by various rulings of federal officials designed to maintain production, distribution, and exhibition—not without wartime difficulties, it is true, but we are still functioning—and serving—and expect to continue.

Thanks to the foresight and patriotism of leaders of the motion picture industry, in requesting President Roosevelt last December to designate a coordinator of Government films to work with the industry's own coordinator, we have been able to increase and intensify our wartime cooperation while maintaining cherished freedom of action. I believe we have demonstrated the effectiveness of voluntary cooperation, thereby, making compulsion as unnecessary as it is undesirable, and distasteful.

Mr. Mellett, in a letter from him to a third party dated November 30, 1942, makes the following significant statement:

“I believe sincerely in the freedom of the screen, and everything I have done, or am doing is completely in line with that belief. . . .

“Our production is confined to a limited number of factual, informational films—four to nine minutes in length—presenting matters it is deemed important for the people to know, and for the Government to have the people know. These follow a pretty consistent pattern in which the responsible head of a Government agency presents this information on the screen—and takes the responsibility for it. We adapt also for American audiences similar presentations furnished by the governments of allied nations. The total is a tiny fraction of the total screen product of America. We are not planning to go deeper.”

I hope and believe that our industry's aid to the war effort will be even more vital and more varied in 1943 than in 1942 but frankly I am more interested in a better qualitative performance than in larger volume, hence, I'm glad that Mr. Mellett speaks of producing only “a limited number” of short factual Government films. Let every short subject and every trailer on a war theme be of the highest possible quality—whether made by the Government or by the industry. Let us increase their individual impact rather than their total volume. And let us make certain, both in Washington, and in Hollywood and New York, that we are putting first themes first, until the war is won and the peace made secure.

The more clearly the pattern of ultimate victory appears, the greater our responsibility as an important medium of communication for strengthening the ties between the United Nations, by adding to our knowledge of and appreciation for each other.

Our films followed our flag to the shores of North Africa. Every land freed from the dictators is another land opened to our newsreels, our informational shorts, our inspirational features. Ours is a universal art of world-wide influence. Let us rededicate our time, our talents, our artistry and our zeal to the supreme task of our lives—the winning of the war and the saving of the peace.

Thirty Dizzy Days!!!

By OSCAR A. DOOB

Chairman, Public Relations Division, WAC

SEPTEMBER, 1942, goes into motion picture history as the strangest, wildest thirty days in the annals of the industry!

It was the weird, woozy month of the billion-dollar bond-blitz! It was the month in which exhibitors worked like mad to "sell-out" free shows; when distributors urged theaters to put on no-admission and no film-rental shows; when producers delayed retakes and postponed picture-making; when stars deserted Hollywood and film moguls abandoned their offices; when press agents were urged not to get publicity.

September left the industry staggering, but happy.

When Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau suggested to the War Activities Committee that the motion picture industry act as spearhead of the War Savings Staff September bond-selling, film leaders welcomed the opportunity to do a concrete, definite job for the Government. It was known that September had a bad reputation as a bond-selling month, always falling short because of income taxes and other obstacles. It was also known that the bond quotas had not been met for many months. These handicaps were challenges to the industry; success would be all the sweeter!

The Treasury, in terms of cash, set a quota of $775,000,000. The industry, in terms of maturity value, used the more dramatic slogan! "Make It a Billion!" Washington experts, studying their charts, smiled and called the quota a miracle and impossible.

At a meeting of the Public Relations Divisions of WAC, general outline of the campaign was discussed. As might be expected of movie people, an emotional, heart-appeal was decided upon. The month would be dedicated to our men in service. "Salute to Our Heroes" month became the title of the drive. "Buy a Bond to Honor Every Mother's Son in Service" became the slogan and theme.

At a general meeting of all divisions of WAC—at which all producers, distributors, Hollywood Victory Committee and more than 8,500 theaters were represented—the campaign was approved and a tentative budget of $100,000 set up.

Out of that came an effort that united the industry—from star to usher, from producer to theater owner—as no other campaign had ever done. Never before had the industry been so nearly 100 per cent solidified in any one effort. And one lasting result of the drive may be the proof that the industry can be unified. It did it once; it can do it again and again!

Under the leadership of national campaign director S. H. Fabian, and the heads of all of the divisions of the WAC and the Hollywood Victory Committee, all branches of the industry snapped into action to "Make It a Billion!"

The 16,000 theaters of the country were mobilized. Around them most of the action would center. They prepared to sell bonds as they never had before. Nearly 5,000 of them qualified as official bond issuing agents so that they could function just as do banks and post-offices. All other theaters also prepared to sell bonds and stamps. Every city and village formed its committees of theater men to take bond-selling leadership in their communities, cooperating closely with the local War Savings Staffs.

A "30 days hath September" program was set up for daily and nightly events in the theaters. Just about every idea in the showman's bag of tricks was pulled out for adaptation to "Salute to Our Heroes" month.

The month started off with an amazing demonstration—some 8,000 theaters doing almost the same thing at the same time! At 9 p. m. Sept. 1, those thousands of theaters staged a "salute" ceremony—a tribute to local war heroes, with bands, speeches, flags—and bond-buying.

Several thousand exhibitors sent wires to Secretary Morgenthau that night, giving their bond sales and pledging a month's intensive effort.

And throughout the month box-office promotion was forgotten and bond-promotion took its place. "War Mother's Nights," "War Heroes' Nights," rallies of every description, with parades, broadcasts, bond dinners, mass meetings, ballyhoos—thirty dizzy days of 'em.

One of the most impulsive gestures was "Free Movie Day." Across the country, movie theaters offered free tickets to those who bought bonds at the movie booths. It was a huge success and was repeated by hundreds of theaters.

One fine phase of the drive was the fact that in each community the local theater men won the support and cooperation of all groups—the bankers, merchants, schools, women's organizations, labor, churches. They all worked together under guidance of the War Savings Staffs.

While the theaters cleared their decks for action, out in Hollywood the producers and the Hollywood Victory Committee, representing the actors, undertook what may always be known as the most astonishing "in person" touring effort ever attempted. "Stars Over America" was to be the spectacular, glamorous, "headline" feature of the campaign. More than 300 cities and towns were spotted on seven master-tours, criss-crossing the country, involving some 21,000 miles of travel. Close to 100 stars and favorite players had to be recruited for these tours. There probably never had been such a booking setup of "one-night stands." In relays of 10 days, stars went out on the seven routes to hit more than 300 spots in 30 days!

Productions had to be delayed in many instances. Some stars volunteered to forego paying engagements so they could participate. Without asking for priorities or favored treatment, using regular trains, buses, private cars and a few planes, the hundreds of scheduled visits were fulfilled, despite weather, illnesses, honeymoons, accidents, draft calls and studio necessities.

And, during those final days of the drive, when the "billion" goal seemed in jeopardy, the Hollywood Victory Committee called emergency, midnight meetings, organized more volunteer "tourists" and threw in another, eighth, tour to "mop up" along the Pacific coast!

The handling of the amazingly complicated tours in the field was directed by S. Charles Einfeld from Hollywood. To assist him, the studios contributed the services of a score of topflight men and women to act as advance representatives and tour managers.

There can be no estimate of how many millions of Americans gathered in the hundreds of cities to see and hear the stars—and buy bonds from them. In public squares, in auditoriums, in factories—the crowds became an inspiring demonstration of an awakened America.

Front pages of newspapers everywhere blazoned the visits of the Hollywood celebrities. Perhaps, the movie industry never before was on so many front pages in so favorable a light. And, yet, the industry purposely made little or no effort to promote this publicity beyond that needed to stimulate the sale of bonds. Rigid instructions governed publicity. "No kissing stunts"; "no cheesecake art"; "no interviews about movies"—those were a few of the restrictions that kept the entire effort in a serious, non-theatrical groove.

There were hundreds of extremely favorable editorials published during the month. Only three or four papers, not particularly anti-movie but definitely anti-Administration, used the bond drive as an editorial springboard to take a slap at Washington. They doubted that glamour could sell war bonds and they prematurely proclaimed the drive a flop. How wrong they were!

In deciding to make the "Stars Over America" tours, both the producers and the stars knew the risks they were taking. They knew that these "in person" appearances—at 6 a. m. after long train journeys, under the searching sun at noon, under the tired midnight moon—before the sharp eyes of millions of moviegoers could not enhance the glamour that is the screen's stock in trade. They knew the risk of accidents, temperaments, and even one unfortunate slip-up.

The stars handled themselves beautifully; did a great job—and came through with flying colors. Not to mention some $100,000,000 in bond sales credited to their inspiration!

A fine example of how distributors and exhibitors worked together were the highly successful "bond premieres" of important feature releases during September. Close to 1,000 of these special performances were given, at which the only admission price was the purchase of a bond. Distributors provided the film, foregoing percentage rentals for that performance. The exhibitors provided the theaters and sacrificed the potential box-office returns...and they worked harder to "sell out" those free shows than they would to get cash-customers. It is estimated that the bond sales stimulated by these "premieres" totalled close to $100,000,000.

Distributors, through the film exchanges, proved an important part of the field force, helping organize the drive, assisting in distribution of materials and in actual sales of bonds through film salesmen.

Sept. 1 dawned gray and chill in New York. At 8 a. m. there gathered some 100 of the industry's leaders—presidents of the producing companies; chiefs of the distributors; heads of theaters, circuits and independents. Through telegrams arriving at this gathering, representative leaders from all parts of the country participated. It was the "$31,000,000 breakfast" to start off the drive.

Those present in person and by wire were the "Commandos" appointed to make advance bond sales totalling $31,000,000—one thirtieth of that billion! When the wires and reports were totalled over $50,000,000 was in the bag! The industry leaders had turned bond salesmen—sold their friends and business connections and themselves some 50 millions of dollars' worth of bonds to start off the campaign.

That spirit held throughout the month! There were no honorary committees; all were working committees. Many a company president and circuit head in September could tell you the daily Treasury bond-sales figures much more readily than he could tell you his theater box-office returns for the day.

This enthusiastic support by the leaders made it possible for scores of industry executives and workers to give full-time to the drive. This man-power, contributed by the companies, provided a working force that could not have been bought.

The month's campaign—seldom, if ever, before had the industry ever undertaken so long a drive—soon developed into a battle that surged forward and sagged backward with all of the dramatic suspense of a movie script. Each day a wire from the Treasury told headquarters how the total sales stood in relation to the quota. The Treasury totals were often several days behind actual sales. One day the reported figures would carry the sales ahead of the quota; the next day it would fall back below quota. The see-saw bombardment ebbed and flowed with tantalizing nerve-wracking periods of optimism and despair.

It was through the trade press, the campaign's main line of communication with the industry that these exciting fluctuations reached the workers in the field and kept them frantically selling bonds to the last hour. The trade press went overboard on the campaign and did a magnificent job.

The last days of September—with the quota growing dimmer—brought forth the industry's finest effort...an effort that showed up in a final day's report of $120,000,000! And a grand total for the month of $838,540,000! More than a billion, maturity value!

The hysteria that swept the movie-world as the drive progressed finally became contagious and the excitement was reflected in the usually calm and dignified offices of the Treasury. High Government officials became ardent rooters for the industry to make its quota! They extended every possible co-operation to facilitate accounting of bond sales so that the September sales would surely go into the September records.

Treasury heads were particularly pleased with the fact that much of the industry effort was aimed at promoting the payroll savings plan in factories, even though such efforts could not be reflected in the September bond sales. A Treasury estimate said that more than 1,000,000 workers were added to the payroll savings plan during September.

And what did the month cost the industry? Nobody will ever know. An original estimate of $250,000 is undoubtedly far too low. A guess of $1,000,000 would be much nearer the real figure. The original $100,000 budget of WAC—to cover expenses of the traveling stars, printing, etc.—was soon exhausted. The money spent by theaters for bond booths, extra help, advertising, rally expenses and a hundred other items could not be less than $250,000. The loss of production time at the studios, the expenses of the stars above the nominal allowances, the extra expenses of the newsreels that did such a fine job in covering the drive in every issue, the space contributed by the trade press, the personal expenditures of men engaged in the drive—$1,000,000 is a conservative total.

"Whatever it cost, it was worth it," was the comment of one industry leader, when Secretary Morgenthau proclaimed the drive an outstanding success.

Theaters' Essentiality

To the Prosecution of the War

By CHRISTOPHER DUNPHY

Service Equipment Division, WPB*

WHEN the annals of this war are written, high up on the list of those "worthy of special commendation" will be the nation's 16,000 moving picture theaters. They have done a superb job in the past year in contributing to the national morale and to the general war program, and their service record promises to be equally outstanding in America's second year of war.

Theater operators were quick to understand what their duties and obligations were to the country and to the armed forces when the nation found itself suddenly and without warning precipitated into war. With a minimum of delay, the industry established its own War Activities Committee for sponsoring the sale of War Bonds, undertook salvage campaigns, cooperated with the Government in exhibiting films dealing with the war effort, and set up special facilities for the entertainment and recreation of service men in those areas where they were stationed. All of these programs and undertakings were taken almost entirely on the industry's own initiative, removing from the Government's shoulders part of the tremendous burden of providing means for maintaining home front morale at a time when transportation and other recreational facilities were either drastically curtailed or strained to the utmost.

theater industry and was set up as such by N. G. Burleigh, director of the division. The personnel of the Amusements Section feels a deep responsibility both to the Government and the motion picture industry.

The first coordinator and executive assistant for theaters was Paul Short, a former executive of Interstate Theaters, Inc., and more recently southern division manager of National Screen Service. Short responded to the colors and enlisted in the United States Navy in August, 1942, with the rank of Lieutenant, Senior Grade. He was succeeded by Allen G. Smith, a former executive of the National Theater Supply Company.

Reviewing the past 12 months, the industry has succeeded amazingly well in its efforts. There is hardly a community of any size where War Bonds are not sold next to the box office. The billions of dollars of War Bonds and stamps which have been sold through the cooperation of the theaters is already a matter of public records. So successful has been this program that direct expressions of appreciation and gratitude have been made by President Roosevelt, War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and other high Government officials.

In May of this year, this section foresaw the probability of fuel oil shortages and instituted a campaign in the 15 eastern seaboard states urging theaters to convert oil burning heating plants to coal, either hand or stoker fired types. Those who took advantage of this advice are thanking themselves now. It is estimated that nearly 5,000,000 gallons of oil will be saved as a result of the conversion program. Another program has resulted in a regular flow of precious copper scrap to the Government stockpile, amounting to approximately 242,000 pounds for the year, through recovering copper drippings and strippings from high intensity carbons. The millions of pounds of scrap rubber, steel, copper and other critical materials which have poured into the national scrap pile as a result of the efforts of individual theater owners have already gone into the blast furnaces and rolling mills and other war uses.

A principal function of the section is to provide for essential repair and maintenance insofar as the demands on critical materials for war production permit. This requires coordination of the various divisions of the WPB concerned with the problems as well as the complete cooperation of the theater industry. It is unnecessary to point out that manufacture of projection and sound equipment has been stopped. Some critical materials are available for manufacturing repair and maintenance parts to keep existing equipment in satisfactory operation. However, the theater owners themselves must give their full-fledged cooperation and assistance in using these parts sparingly.

These are not normal times. Replacement or repair of equipment is no longer a matter of calling up your supplier and sending him a check for your purchase. With few exceptions, theater projection machinery and other equipment is made of critical materials—steel, copper, aluminum and zinc, to mention a few.

The same problem arises in the case of construction or other structural work. Except when a theater is located in a war production center, can we consider applications for remodeling or new construction favorably. In all cases, these applications must be viewed in light of the WPB's policy of not permitting unessential construction which consumes both materials and manpower.

Against that background it is possible to discuss briefly our operational procedures. We have consistently urged conservation and proper maintenance of existing equipment by following fire-prevention rules, keeping machinery in repair and generally giving more attention to the care of the entire theater plant.

We have cooperated with other WPB divisions in the establishment of a maintenance program that so far has worked extremely well in meeting the problems which arise as a direct result of the curtailment on production of projection and sound equipment. That program provides for continued output of repair parts, but with restrictions on the use of these parts containing critical materials. These restrictions must be carefully administered to prevent any possible waste or unnecessary uses.

This places the burden of responsibility upon the individual theater operator. He must take every possible step to keep his equipment in good running order and defer requests for permission to purchase new parts or equipment except as a last resort. With their full cooperation, it is anticipated that all of the 16,000 theaters in the country may be kept in operation.

Suppliers of theatrical equipment should make use of service of the WPB which is available through the Distributors' Application for Preference Rating, known as Form PD-IX. With the use of this procedure, administered by the distributors' division, theater supply companies are permitted to stock from 30 to 60 days' supply of necessary parts. These parts may be supplied to theaters directly without the necessity of filing an application on Form PD-IA, Application for Preference Rating. The theater operator should mail the PD-IA applications to the WPB for original handling by this section.

Donald M. Nelson, Chairman of the WPB, in his speech of November 6, stated that "motion pictures are important to the morale of the people and it is an established fact that people fight better when morale is good". Grim days ahead were predicted by Nelson. "The public is aware of this, and seeks strong leadership so that the war may be over and done with as quickly as possible. No one will be asked to make sacrifices which are not necessary," Nelson said, "but industry and civilians alike eventually will have to make savings which now would be considered impossible. The motion picture industry must prepare itself to carry on at a minimum cost of essential materials. The War Production Board wants the industry to remain alive and virile, but it must be on as lean a basis as possible."

This nation at war has become powerful by demanding the utmost of its citizens in sacrifice and unselfish cooperation. Where the WPB has asked the theaters to engage in a little "belt tightening", it has done so as part of a universal program of curtailment and sacrifice which is being demanded of all businesses and all consumers. Accepted in that spirit, the hardships of our wartime economy will not fall too severely on the motion picture theater industry.

On Active Service...

HOLLYWOOD

FROM the home front to the farthest flung battle line, the motion picture industry was engaged in active war service in 1942, undertaking an unprecedented diversity of responsibilities and activities.

Consider this summary of the more important projects, some directly, others indirectly, concerned with the prosecution of the globe-encircling conflict:

The production of training films, on a cost basis, and the training of technicians for the armed forces at no cost to the Government.

The donation of thousands of reels of feature pictures and shorts, on 16 mm. films, for free screening before service men in all combat zones.

The distribution and exhibition nationally, without charge, of documentary films made by the Government and deemed of vital importance to the public.

The contribution of confidential reference material for the use of military intelligence.

Cooperation with and instruction of military personnel in camouflage undertakings.

Enlistment of hundreds of top screen personalities, as volunteers, to entertain in military areas at home, offshore and abroad.

Assignment of headliners to radio programs shortwaved to the fighting fronts everywhere.

Fund-raising for charities, particularly those identified with the war effort, through personal appearances, personal contributions, special screen trailers, theater collections and other means.

Active cooperation nationally in the scrap drives and other patriotic campaigns inaugurated by the Government.

Stimulation of War Savings Bond and Stamp sales.

Close cooperation with the Co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs, through the Motion Picture Society for the Americas.

Understandably, the tremendous importance of the industry's patriotic effort in feature pictures is not publicized because the effectiveness of these pictures would be minimized if the public thought of them as propaganda. However, more and more such pictures are being produced. No greater message could be told than Mrs. Miniver. Amazing reports of an increase in recruiting were received following the showing of To the Shores of Tripoli. Following the showing of Captains of the Clouds, Joseph W. B. Clark, Public Relations Director for the RCAF, reported a 25% jump in recruiting.

Every studio has pictures of this type as a major portion of its 1942-1943 and 1943-1944 programs.

The Government has shown its vital interest in these films by its close cooperation through the Office of War Information (Motion Picture Branch) and also through the Motion Picture Society for the Americas of the Office of the Co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs.

The vital necessity of motion pictures as morale-building entertainment is recognized by the Government. England learned this lesson well. The current plea of the Chinese government for the assistance of the industry in getting film to the interior of China is another recognition of the morale-building value of entertainment.

In the category of direct contributions to the war effort, the film industry's production of training films has won the high praise of ranking officials both in Government and the armed forces. Late in 1940, the industry offered its services to Washington for the making of such films, the first of them went before cameras in January, 1941, and by the time of the attack upon Pearl Harbor 100 reels had been completed.

According to the most recent report these training films, produced by the various studios in rotation, number 282 reels, covering 107 subjects, which have been completed, approved and accepted by the War Department. Four additional films have been submitted for approval, 21 are in production and 17 in preparation. Appearing recently before a meeting of studio heads in Hollywood, Col. M. E. Gillette, commanding officer of the Signal Corps Photographic Center, stated that the War Department would require 1,500 to 2,000 reels of training films during 1943 and indicated that the industry in Hollywood will be called upon for 1,000 reels of this total. Walt Disney, devoting fully 90 per cent of his plant facilities to Government films, additionally has completed more than 100 reels of training subjects, most of which are being used by the Navy.

Augmenting the Signal Corps' training film program also is the project headed by Col. Frank Capra, of the Special Service Branch of the War Department, which is charged with the responsibility of making orientation films and to which the industry has given complete cooperation. These films are used for advanced training, to acquaint the soldier with the origins of the war, the nature of the enemy, salient facts regarding America's allies and the natures and customs of the lands in which he will fight. On Jan. 1, 15 of these films were in various stages of production and preparation.

In addition to coping with its own problem of diminishing manpower in camera and still departments, the industry has trained for the Signal Corps, at no cost to the Government, 150 motion picture cameramen and 176 still photographers, according to Research Council records. Still more are now in training, the courses spanning eight weeks. After completion, a graduate is ordered to active duty with the First Signal Photographic Laboratory or with one of the Signal Corps Photographic Companies being sponsored by the Research Council. The First Signal Photographic Laboratory is now on active duty at Camp Livingston, La. The entire technical personnel of this organization is drawn from the industry or with industry training.

Of the five Signal Corps Photographic Companies, two have been activated and are now in training at Camp Crowder, Mo. The vacancies in the remaining three units will be filled by graduates of the Photographic Schools. These units will be called to active duty in the very near future.

Qualifications of applicants for enlistment in the photographic units, drawn mostly from the ranks of skilled amateurs, are passed on by the Military Personnel Committee at personal interviews. All approved applicants are given physical examinations and, upon passing, are enlisted as privates in the Signal Corps Reserve before starting classes.

The first four weeks of the eight-week course for motion picture cameramen are devoted to theoretical work in the Hollywood plant of the Eastman Kodak Co. The remaining four weeks are devoted to practical work, the entire class, usually comprising 30 men, being assigned to a single studio. Metro, Columbia, Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox have conducted classes for motion picture photographers.

Still photographers, whose training is conducted under the supervision of Clarence Sinclair Bull, M-G-M portraitist, are divided among the studios, usually being assigned to lots nearest their homes.

Services of studio camera and still department instructors are donated. Camera and laboratory equipment, and supplies, are provided by the Association of Motion Picture Producers, Inc., and the studios.

Except for living expenses, the entire cost of conducting the Research Council's training plan is borne by the industry.

For reasons of military secrecy, the industry is unable to report in detail on the material furnished the Military Intelligence Division, War Department, through the Office of Strategic Services. It may be stated, however, that this material included approximately one-quarter million feet of film clips showing plants, harbors, beaches, landmarks, etc., in countries with which the United States now is at war, in addition to quantities of maps and still pictures from studio reference libraries and other sources.

In the field of camouflage, another direct war aid, the studios have provided experts from the ranks of art directors and special effects technicians, than whom none are more skilled in the art of visual deception, to serve as instructors and cooperate in working out camouflage projects with both Army and Marine Corps units.

Other major aspects of the Hollywood war program are treated fully either in separate chapters or are introduced to fill out the overall picture of the industry marshalled in the nation's service. There remain, however, contributions peculiar to the studios which rate citation.

Prominent among the latter is the Hollywood Canteen, to which the uniform of any branch of the American service is a ticket of admission. In the beginning merely an idea, shared by a number of people in the industry who were eager to provide a big, new entertainment center for the boys in uniform, the Hollywood Canteen became an accomplished fact within two months, under the driving influence of an executive committee comprising industry leaders, stars and representatives of virtually every guild, union and craft identified with the making of motion pictures.

An abandoned night club once known appropriately as The Barn was leased for the duration, donations of materials were obtained, manpower was contributed by the various classifications of workers and the building was converted into an establishment now valued conservatively at $15,000—for a total cash outlay of $200.

Nearly 3,000 stars, starlets, women and men, most of them connected with studios, have registered as hostesses, hosts, busboys and helpers. The entertainment committee has registered a vast army of talent, assuring topnotch floor shows. A guarantee of name bands—two each night—has been obtained.

As an indication of Hollywood Canteen's popularity with the men in service, records show that during the first month of its operation the uniformed guests disposed of 4,000 loaves of bread, 50,000 half pints of milk, 400 pounds of butter, 1,500 pounds of coffee, 1,000 pounds of cheese, 2,500 pounds of meat, 20,000 oranges, 30,000 gallons of orange juice, 75,000 packs of cigarettes, 100,000 pieces of cake and more than 150,000 sandwiches.

Hundreds of Hollywood actresses, feminine studio workers from all departments, and mothers, sisters, wives or daughters of men in the industry are banded together in nearly a dozen different organizations supporting the war effort.

Women are devoting many hours each in almost every type of war-aid activity where their services can be used. They are doing everything from rolling bandages, driving ambulances and operating hospitality centers for soldiers and sailors on leave to working in the Army's airplane detection service.

Among the organizations in which Hollywood women give of their time and energy, the names of which generally indicate the type of activity they specialize in, are the Volunteer Army Canteen Service, Army Camps Emergency Service, Naval Aid Auxiliary, Hollywood Open House Canteen, Hollywood Stage Door Canteen, American Women's Auxiliary Services and the Aid To British Services.

Hollywood's charity effort today falls under three heads: War Relief, Civic Charity and Charity at Home (the Motion Picture Relief Fund).

During 1942, Hollywood motion picture workers have made the following contributions:

Community Chest .....	$ 326,606.00
M. P. Relief Fund.....	311,112.53
Infantile Paralysis Fund...	19,000.00
American Red Cross.....	528,000.00
USO .....	148,040.87
United Jewish Welfare...	153,000.00
Navy Relief & Russia-China- Dutch War Reliefs (Com- bined drive) .....	196,977.98
	$1,682,737.38

Those figures, of course, do not include the countless millions—which cannot even be estimated—for various charity and relief funds for which Hollywood stars have been largely responsible through free appearances, in person or on the air, and specially made pictures such as trailers, etc. It is noteworthy that the labor unions and guilds of Hollywood play a major role in every charity drive.

* * *

The Motion Picture Committee for Hollywood, War Savings Staff, Treasury Department, under the chairmanship of Henry Ginsberg, was organized on April 9, 1942. The committee covers 32,000 studio and allied industry employees who are investing $160,000 per week. Cash sales now average $65,000, to make up a weekly total of $245,000. As of Jan. 23, 1943, the committee had sold more than $10,100,000 in War Bonds. During the record month of September, $2,190,000 worth of bonds were sold.

The Research Council

War Activities

By DARRYL F. ZANUCK

Col., Signal Corps; Chairman, Research Council

DURING 1942, the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences continued to cooperate with the Signal Corps in the production of War Department Training Films and in other related activities.

The Research Council continued to maintain many of its technical activities, fulfilling its primary purpose in furthering the advancement of motion pictures through technological progress.

In 1940, the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense offered to cooperate in any way possible with the War Department in view of the national emergency existing. This offer was accepted by the Chief Signal Officer and the motion picture industry was requested to produce Training Films for the War Department. The Research Council was designated as the coordinating agency for the industry because the Council had previously cooperated with the Signal Corps by training Signal Corps officers in their normal compensation.

Examples of such contributed services of highly qualified specialists are: John Ford, Mervyn LeRoy, Lewis Milestone, James Whale, Tim Holt, Walter Huston, Preston Foster, Eddie Bracken, Don Ameche, Thomas Mitchell, Paul Kelly, Charles Vidor, Tom Brown, Spring Byington, Irving Pichel, Eugene Forde, Anatole Litvak, George Barnes, Louis Bromfield, Joe Sistrom, Julian Epstein, W. L. River, Jerome Chodorov, Ben Hecht, Jo Swerling, James Hilton, Robert Stevenson, Virgil Miller, William Claxton, Ernst Lubitsch, Preston Sturges, Brian Marlow, and John Nesbitt. Many others also contributed their services.

Also, the executive and department heads of the various studios, all of whom have had many years of experience in practical motion picture production, interested themselves personally in the Training Film program and the Research Council constantly had available the benefit of their expert knowledge for assistance and advice.

To date, a total of 301 reels have been produced in Hollywood. All studios have participated in the production of the following Training Films:

1. Sex Hygiene
2. Personal Hygiene
3. Military Courtesy and Customs of the Service
4. The Basic Principles of Skiing
5. Pioneer Equipment—Wire Cutting Tools
6. Pioneer Equipment—Wood Cutting Tools
7. Pioneer Equipment—Manila Rope motion picture production.

All Training Films produced in Hollywood were delivered to the War Department on a non-profit basis. No charge has been made for studio overhead, including equipment, stage space, studio property, or other such facilities used in the production of these films.

In addition, as a result of arrangements made between the Research Council and various Guilds and between the Research Council and individuals, actors, directors, writers, cameramen, etc., donated their services. Where they were under contract to the studio, the studio often loans these individuals to the production and makes no charge for their services. In other cases, individuals have of their own accord offered their services at a reduced rate in comparison to

In addition, the Research Council was requested by the Chief Signal Officer to sponsor the organization of seven photographic units. Under this plan, the sponsoring organization accepts complete responsibility for the technical qualifications of the personnel recommended. Recommendations are made for either commissions or enlistments, depending upon the qualifications of the individual.

To consider the qualifications of applicants and to make recommendations to the Chief Signal Officer a committee was appointed representative of the following motion picture technical professions: Sound, cinematography, still photography, film editing, process and special effects photography, and motion picture and still laboratory.

The Committee membership was made up of: Nathan Levinson and S. J. Briskin, co-chairmen; John Aalberg, Bernard Brown, Hector Dods, Farciot Edouart, E. H. Hansen, John Livadary, C. L. Lootens, Wesley C. Miller, Gordon S. Mitchell, Thomas T. Moulton, J. M. Nickolaus, Elmer Raguse, Roy Seawright, and Douglas Shearer.

This committee has made over 800 accepted recommendations to the Chief Signal Officer and almost all of this personnel is now on active duty with various photographic units of the Signal SCorps.

Because it was not possible to secure the requested number of qualified cameramen for field service with the Signal Corps, the Research Council, with the approval of the Chief Signal Officer, conducted a series of schools in motion picture and still photography. Since the start of the first class, a total of 145 men have graduated from the Motion Picture School and 212 have graduated from the Still Photographic School.

The studios, as well as commercial film suppliers, camera equipment and maintenance organizations, cooperated in this training program, making their facilities available for use with the classes so that individuals connected with their various organizations would be able to contribute their services as instructors.

Membership of the Research Council consists of: Col. Darryl F. Zanuck, Daniel J. Bloomberg, Bernard Brown, Farciot Edouart, William Eglinton, E. H. Hansen, Nathan Levinson, John Livadary, T. T. Moulton, and Douglas Shearer. W. F. Kelley is manager of the Research Council.

The Hollywood Victory Committee

MOST outstanding of all Hollywood groups participating in war aid activities is the Hollywood Victory Committee, an organization formed three days after the Pearl Harbor attack for the purpose of coordinating the efforts of film, stage and radio personalities and talent in the entertainment of the various armed forces and related services of the United States.

Realizing that an avalanche of requests for "free talent" would come pouring in, and wishing to allocate the personalities where they would do the most overall good, Hollywood leaders brought the Victory Committee into being. Represented on the committee are members of the Screen Actors Guild, Screen Writers Guild, Screen Directors Guild, Actors Equity, Theater Authority, American Federation of Radio Artists, the Artists-Managers Guild, Association of Motion Picture Producers, the radio networks, Screen Publicists Guild, the Industry Service Bureau, Independent Publicists Guild and the Southern California Broadcasting Association.

Chief duty of the committee officials is conserving, budgeting and distributing the use of all talent facilities of the industry in the interest of maximum efficiency and greatest possible contribution to the war effort and to humanitarian programs of all types.

While the Victory Committee is concerned primarily with the allocation of entertainment for men of the armed forces, its players also render extensive service to the Treasury Department, OWI, WPB, OEM, Co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs, other governmental agencies, the USO, Red Cross, Community Chest, Russian War Relief, China War Relief, Army and Navy War Relief and other charities.

During its first year of operation the committee provided 1,141 stars to help America's war effort. Fulfilling assignments at home, offshore and abroad, they traveled on land, on the seas and by air; and in numbers they stand ready to travel by submarine, if necessary, to carry entertainment to the nation's far-flung fighting fronts.

During its first year of operation players from the talent pool presented 352 USO shows at Army, Navy, Air Force and Coast Guard camps along the Pacific Coast and in the desert areas of California, Arizona and New Mexico, all of which are listed on its records as "spot" shows because they have been set up for single performances at specific bases, at the request of the War Department.

They have headlined USO Camp Shows in 273 large camps throughout the United States, giving several performances at each of many large camps in order to appear before the entire personnel.

Players have flown to England and Ireland to entertain troops.

Others have flown to offshore bases, such as Alaska, the Aleutians, Newfoundland, Panama Canal Zone and the Caribbeans.

A total of 474 players participated in 222 live radio broadcasts and 507 took part in the recording of 111 radio transcriptions, of which 56 were for the War Department.

For the Treasury Department, selling War Bonds, which activity was highlighted by the "Stars Over America" tours in the September War Bond drive, led by the film industry, 270 players made 2,773 appearances.

For charities and other agencies, 338 players appeared at 150 separate events, including the spectacular Victory Caravan, in which 41 stars visited 13 cities in behalf of Army and Navy Relief.

The grand total of individual appearances for the year was 6,828.

The most conservative estimate of the mileage amassed by these players in the 12 months is well in excess of one million, or almost 10 times around the world.

Plans for the present year call for even more expansive operations by the Victory Committee's talent pool. Following a series of conferences with Lt. Col. Marvin Young of the Special Service Division of the War Department, announcement has been made that players will be sent to 700 Army camps throughout the nation. More than 100 personalities will be sent to fighting areas overseas, wherever American troops are stationed. And calls from other governmental agencies will be met to the fullest extent of the available talent.

Hollywood's Order of the Day

FACED with drastic war time curtailment of practically every type of material necessary for the making of motion pictures, the industry's technical experts during the past year have ingeniously solved most all the problems that threatened to impede film making.

Not dismayed by the grim fact that brass, steel, copper, asbestos, aluminum, alcohol and many chemicals were virtually essential in the making of war weapons, the film industry's experts in a brief time replaced all of these items with non-essential materials. Even with set cost ceilings placed at a limit of $5,000 for new material, pictures are being made just as interesting, with sets just as photogenic, and with glamour girls as beautifully costumed—as far as the camera goes—as before the war.

Next to film, set construction is perhaps the most important item in the war time adjustment. So, instead of discarding or tearing down a set after it is used, those sets are now rebuilt and used again and again. Not even the workers in the studios can recognize one of these sets after it has been redecorated and rearranged by the carpenters, painters and interior decorators.

In new construction the non-essential substitutes have come into play. Hardware fixtures which formerly were of brass, bronze or aluminum, are now made of glass or plastic materials—and you can't tell the difference on the screen. Stair railings, instead of being made of metal, are now made of wood so cunningly painted that no one can tell them from metal railings. To save lumber in floor construction hardwood masonite is laid on stage floors and is repainted for different sets. This material is so hard that heavy cameras and other equipment may be run over it without damage to the floor.

Manila rope became a critical material as soon as the war started. Thousands of feet of rope are used annually in the studios, so what to do? Technicians soon discovered that sisal could replace the manilla rope, and another problem was solved and more essential war material was released for war service.

Nails became important and the studios were faced with critical nail shortage. Then an enterprising technician created a device which is wheeled around the studio lots and stages much like a carpet sweeper. It picks up stray nails and straightens and sorts them. This device has reclaimed thousands of pounds of nails.

Hairpins quickly presented a problem that threatened to become a crisis. Studios were limited to two pounds of hairpins per month. Under the old system of throwing them away after they were used, this was not sufficient to pin up the hair of the thousands of feminine players. Now the hairpins are chemically sterilized after use, and are saved and used over and over again.

Amount of cotton gloves, so necessary in the handling of film in the cutting rooms, has been cut in half because a minor genius designed a reversible glove that can be used on either hand. In the past one glove out of each pair was usually a total loss because one glove gets most wear.

In the field of makeup the experts were faced with many critical shortages. Rubber for use in character makeup was out, so they invented synthetic skin pieces that have proven better than rubber. Plastics now are an important element in changing facial characteristics.

Enterprising executives came up with another idea that has proven beneficial both to the studios and to the owners of many old mansions scattered throughout California. Studios have been buying these magnificent old homes. They are carefully taken apart, from them come fireplaces and mantles, doors, beautiful wood wall panels, winding staircases, chandeliers, and invaluable fixtures that cannot be purchased or built today.

Use of crude rubber for the manufacture of various items, such as the giant octopus in Reap the Wild Wind, has been eliminated. Overall use of crude rubber has been cut slightly more than 90 per cent, and probably will be replaced 100 per cent with synthetic substitutes in the near future.

Dress designers have met the wartime challenge, too, without loss of smartness or glamour. Meeting the requirements of the War Production Board, they have created gowns requiring less material and in many cases use materials from costumes on hand to make new ones. Shoes are dyed to match costumes, thus effecting a large saving.

Overall savings in various critical metals is authoritatively estimated as: rubber, 90 per cent; metals, 60 per cent; costume materials, 30 per cent; lumber, 60 per cent; nails, 40 per cent. These savings are directly the result of the ingenuity of the technical workers of the industry.

Hollywood's voluntary film conservation won the commendation of Government officials. Through the medium of the Film Conservation Committee, representing every phase of Hollywood production involved in the use of film, every possible saving was inaugurated. While it is impossible to arrive at the percentage of saving, due to fluctuation in production, it is safe to say that the voluntary saving accomplished surprised even Hollywood itself.

The Australian Austerity Campaign

By JOEL SWENSEN

THE past year developed a new use for film as a medium of international communication. By means of its magic, 12 stars and a director were whisked to Australia to take an active part in the Austerity Loan campaign in December. This is how it happened:

When the Australian Commonwealth government heard of the success of Hollywood film stars as bond salesmen in the United States Treasury drive last September, the Prime Minister asked for similar help in the projected Austerity Loan campaign. His request was forwarded to the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America in New York, which assigned to the Foreign Managers Committee the task of working out details. Albert Deane was designated by the chairman to draft scripts and maintain liaison with David W. Bailey, the Australian government's representative in New York.

The scripts were then forwarded to the respective members of the Hollywood Foreign Department Committee, who enlisted the services of the stars and handled production details. In due course trailers and radio transcriptions on film were tucked on board planes in California and flown down under. There the recordings were brought to life on the screen and radio.

Audiences in motion picture theatres saw and heard Paulette Goddard in a dialogue about Australian Austerity with Cecil Kellaway, an Australian actor now in Hollywood. Then, in turn, they heard and saw Deanna Durbin, Laraine Day, and Bette Davis in solo appearances.

Radio listeners heard Australian Austerity skits and talks by Abbott and Costello, Greer Garson, Dorothy Lamour, Ann Sheridan, Joel McCrea, Pat O'Brien and Cecil B. deMille.

After presenting formal thanks of the Prime Minister, Mr. John Curtin, to the American film industry, Mr. Bailey said that the "campaign was an outstanding success in that it was oversubscribed by more than £4,000,000."

To the Colors!

NO FIELD has been more generous, proportionately, in its manpower contribution to the nation's armed forces than the motion picture industry.

As this is written, in late January, it is estimated that the number of men and women who temporarily have left the trade to don uniforms is approximately 15,000. That total will grow rapidly and substantially as the Selective Service system steps up its operations to speed the defeat of the Axis.

More than 5,177 of Hollywood's workers are in the services. Inasmuch as no more than 18,000 of the 30,000 to 33,000 workers in Hollywood are men, this represents better than 28 per cent of the industry's manpower.

The OWI Motion Picture Bureau

By ANDREW H. OLDER

Chief, Washington Bureau of THE FILM DAILY

WAR has brought Uncle Sam to a prominence in the motion picture field which he dreamed of just a few years ago when, after winning acclaim for The River and The Plow That Broke the Plains, he settled down again to technical and instructional shorts.

More than a dozen Government agencies appreciative of the growing informational opportunities in celluloid, turned out a fairly steady flow of training reels, slide films and propaganda shorts. Each of the several agencies worked on its own, some doing good work, some bad. The United States Film Service was supposed to coordinate all Government film activities, but it passed out of existence long before Pearl Harbor. There was need for coordination, but the hand wasn't strong enough.

That was the situation when, late in 1941, the President created the Office of the coordinator of Government Films, as part of the Office of Government Reports. Film coordinator and head of the OGR was Lowell Mellett, a former Scripps-Howard editor and long a friend and adviser of the President. Arch Mercey, formerly with the Farm Security Administration and the U. S. Film Service, was named deputy coordinator by Mellett.

In June of last year, when the OWI was set up to coordinate all—or most—of the Government's war information activities, it included a Bureau of Motion Pictures, with Mellett at the helm and Mercey as his assistant. The work of this organization falls into four general categories: serving as liaison between commercial producers and the WAC on the one hand, and the Government—more specifically, the OWI, on the other hand; producing war films at the request of other Government agencies or to supplement the Hollywood output; maintaining control over all Government film production; distributing films useful in the war effort to schools, colleges, service clubs, PTA's, unions, and other organizations for non-theatrical showing, through the WAC for theatrical presentation.

Better to serve the industry, a Hollywood office was opened under Nelson Poynter, former Scripps-Howard publisher and more recently with the Coordinator of Information. Perhaps the most important function of the Hollywood office is the furnishing of research data to producers, on request. OWI studies on such matters as manpower, salvage, taxation, transportation and various other wartime problems have proved invaluable to producers and writers on many occasions.

Research furnished Hollywood by the OWI has been classified by Poynter under the following six headings. The Issues—why we fight—the peace; The Enemy—his nature; United Nations and United Peoples—our brothers-in-arms; Work and production; The Home Front—sacrifice; and The Fighting Forces—the job of the fighting man at the front.

Poynter serves also as consultant on many of the short subjects the film capital is turning out under OWI-WAC auspices. Twenty-six of the "America Speaks" series—or Victory shorts—were scheduled last summer to mesh with those turned out by OWI for distribution in cooperation with the WAC on alternate weeks. A number have already been released, and most are now being made or awaiting release. Among those already seen are A Ship is Born, (WB); Letter from Bataan, (Paramount); Everybody's War, (Twentieth Century-Fox); Mr. Blabbermouth, (MGM); Keeping Fit, (Universal), and Weapons from Waste, (Columbia).

Increasingly important among the Bureau's activities is the advising of Hollywood producers on scripts. The OWI is kept informed on all proposed features dealing with the war, and nearly all scripts are sent to Washington for examination. The Bureau suggests changes where it deems them advisable and supplies information on questionable points. Although there is nothing to force producers to comply with the OWI suggestions, the Bureau has found that they are anxious to cooperate.

OWI is matching the Hollywood production of shorts, with the production unit in New York, directed by Samuel Spewack, erstwhile screen writer, and William Montague, Jr., former Paramount newsreel editor. Recent releases have included Colleges at War, Salvage, Manpower, Troop Train, War-time Farming, and others. This unit also furnishes rushes on special subjects for individual editing by newsreels.

In addition, the production unit frequently makes factual, informational pictures for other Government agencies. These include pictures made on very specific problems for specific cities or sections—for instance, a four-minute trailer on manpower for the Baltimore area, shot in Baltimore and dealing with local problems, then another shot in Akron for showing in that city. Briefs for the Army, the War Manpower Commission, the War Production Board and other Government agencies have been made, sent to the newsreels for individual editing and clipped to the regular releases of the reels.

One feature length picture—The World at War—has been turned out by OWI. It is a six-reel documentary made up largely of Government civilian and military film, newsreel shots and much confiscated German and Japanese film made from the invasion of Manchuria to Pearl Harbor.

The Motion Picture Bureau serves also as the central point of distribution for films of other Government agencies, and passes upon allocation of film for these agencies.

One of the most important of the OWI functions is the supplying of war films for non-theatrical showing. Throughout the nation more than 150 universities, film libraries, film exchanges, film dealers and others handle distribution of these 16 mm. prints, which are made available to schools, colleges, service clubs, PTA groups, unions and similar organizations. Among the films distributed this way are most current Government productions, most of the "America Speaks" series, and several foreign films. Most popular among the last group has been the five-reel British picture Target for Tonight.

At the end of the year OWI began monthly production of a magazine reel for non-theatrical showing—in the U. S. News-Review. It is made up largely of clips from OWI productions, plus some from Hollywood and foreign films. Five hundred 16 mm. prints of the first of these reels—covering seven different subjects—were shipped. Running time is about 20 minutes.

As the year drew to a close, OWI was establishing a classified film index of nearly all available battle sequences since motion picture cameras were first trained on battlefields. This project was undertaken at the request of the joint chiefs of staff, but the index, and as much actual film as can be gathered, will be available to civilian producers for reference purposes.

The year brought about a marked change in the relationship between Government and the industry, according to Lowell Mellett. Poynter's frequent assistance to producers and Mellett's several trips to the West Coast have done much to dispel the misgivings which commercial producers had about working with the Government, Mellett said, adding that one of the most potent factors in bringing about this closer relationship has been the efficient, effective and enthusiastic work of the WAC.

Motion Pictures And the Red Cross

By JOE WEIL

THE motion picture has become of great importance to the American Red Cross. Chairman Norman H. Davis and his national director of public information, G. Stewart Brown, are taking full advantage of films for teaching use as well as for building good public relations.

The American Red Cross has an adult membership of over 15,000,000. Its Junior Red Cross totals over 14,000,000 more—a potential Red Cross movie audience of 30,000,000, not to speak of the family each represents.

There are four ways in which the motion picture helps to carry on Red Cross work. Its operations often are of dramatic national news interest. Important Red Cross activity in connection with floods, quakes and other disasters usually is covered by the newsreels. So, too, are the loading, shipping and distribution of food, medical and relief supplies to famine, disease or war stricken areas and any newly developed service or rescue techniques. The newsreels, in this manner, keep the public well advised of major Red Cross activities.

Hollywood, also, has found much of interest in Red Cross work as "atmosphere" for some major productions. Paramount's So Proudly We Hail, written around Army nurses at Bataan, was made with Red Cross cooperation, since this organization is charged with recruitment of all nurses for the Army and Navy. Aside from its entertainment value, this picture should aid to enroll nurses. Twentieth Century-Fox has in preparation a feature film touching on the dramatic Blood Donor Service of the Red Cross. Pete Smith has made an excellent, entertaining and educational short on first aid. The Red Cross prisoner of war service is being studied for picture possibilities. Numerous other entertainment films are in process of preparation.

The motion picture industry should be especially interested in the third Red Cross use for pictures because of its very active co-operation. Working with the Army and Navy, and with film supply made possible through the industry, the American Red Cross is bringing the movies to wounded and sick fighting men in military and naval hospitals. Red Cross field directors and recreation workers are stationed wherever our fighting men are—even in remote outposts.

They provide regular programs of motion pictures, twice weekly, to all the hospitalized men. The Red Cross Hospital Motion Picture Service is under a national director, Edward Doyle. It has 35 mm. equipment operating in close to 100 hospitals. It is preparing to place 16 mm. equipment in additional hundreds of wards. With your industry's cooperation, Hollywood's best pictures are shown. Some men are brought to the showings in wheel chairs. Convalescents walk in unaided. They make enthusiastic audiences.

The fourth use embraces the huge Red Cross educational programs in which motion pictures play a major role. Over a million men and women have viewed and re-viewed Before the Doctor Comes, an official Red Cross 16 mm. sound picture, visualizing the important points of first aid instruction, as a part of their training. Director Harold Enlows, of this service, regards it as an essential part of the course. Several hundred thousand young men and women, taking Red Cross instruction in water safety and life saving skills, have learned much from the screen, studying the teaching films, Heads Up and Oars and Paddles.

At present, with the grave nursing shortage menacing the country, the Red Cross is issuing a new 16 mm. sound film, You're On Your Own, which gives highlights in the course on home nursing. This picture will be shown in connection with the use of the text book on this subject, of which the Red Cross is printing over 2,000,000 copies. The film will help much in safeguarding the nation's health and morale.

When the Army and Navy called on the Red Cross, through Mary Beard, director of nursing service, to meet the pressing need for more nurses, the motion picture was employed to speed the recruitment. To this end, No Greater Glory, a one-reel documentary film has been made available to theaters as well as in 16 mm. form for schools and clubs.

Another documentary film will explain Red Cross services to the armed forces. Through the cooperation of the War Activities Committee, this picture will be shown in all member theaters from coast to coast. It is also being made available in 16 mm. for school and club screenings.

Two 16 mm. Kodachrome films tell the dramatic story of the Red Cross Blood Donor Service, a one-reel production, Liberty's Life-stream, and a three-reel picture, They Need Not Die. They show how blood is donated, its processing and how it saves lives of many of our fighting men wounded in battle. These pictures are helping recruit blood donors to supply the 2,500,000 units requested by our Army and Navy.

Yes, the motion picture is doing a splendid job for the Red Cross, bringing cheer to incapacitated fighting men, information to an interested public and essential instruction to the multitude of students in the many Red Cross classes serving the national interest.

The Photographic Center

By GEORGE H. MORRIS
THE FILM DAILY Staff

SERVICE of the motion picture as an invaluable adjunct to the war's successful prosecution is forcefully exemplified by the 1942 and current activities and accomplishments of the United States Army Signal Corps Photographic Center, located at 35-11 35th Ave., Long Island City.

This Army Post, originally the eastern production seat of Famous Players-Lasky, was built by that company in 1920. Initial investment plus subsequent alterations to effect conversion to sound pictures represented an expenditure of some $10,000,000. In 1933, operation of the premises was taken over by the Eastern Service Studio Division of Western Electric Co., and in 1938 by Audio and Erpi.

Shortly after Pearl Harbor, the advantages of the "lot" impressed themselves decisively upon Army authorities, and the War Department on Jan. 27, 1942, closed its option for the property's purchase. Possession was taken on March 1 by a small group on detached service from Fort Monmouth, N. J. Actual work on extensive remodeling to permit housing of troops and adaptation of buildings to Army film requirements was begun on March 22. The Training Film Production Laboratory, together with the Motion Picture Section of the photographic schools, was moved to and incorporated in the SCPC on May 8, and the still picture section of the school was transferred from Fort Monmouth on May 26. A Latin-American division for the translation of training films and film bulletins into Spanish and Portuguese languages was directed by the Signal Corps Officer, Maj. Gen. Dawson Olmstead, in July.

On the afternoon of Sept. 22, the Post was formally dedicated by Maj. Gen. Olmstead who declared in his address that during the previous 12 months there had been many notable achievements resulting for Signal Corps photographic activities. Outstanding among these were: (1) great expansion in the training film production program; (2) improvement of means for utilizing those films and other visual aids in the field; (3) production of foreign language sound tracks for many such films to provide instructional material for Allied nations receiving American supplies, and (4) completion of arrangements for micro-photographic and re-enlarging of official and individual military mail, the last named being known as V-Mail. Mayor F. H. LaGuardia and Col. M. E. Gillette, the commanding officer, also spoke at the dedication ceremonies.

The Post, which, for the most part, represents "filmland in khaki"—the several hundred enlisted men and civilians being predominantly drawn from the ranks of the motion picture industry's technicians—is divided into a number of highly coordinated departments, among them production, scenario, studio, Latin-American, animation, art, film bulletin, film strip, etc. Reveille is at 6:45 a.m. and retreat at 5:40 p.m.

"We usually," Col. Gillette declared at the dedication, "have about 125 pictures in production here—training films to teach our troops fighting technique". Average number of prints per subject is estimated at around 250, and it has been announced that something like 2,000 reels will be produced during 1943. Subjects cover use of every kind and component of weapon and military equipment belonging to the Army, in addition to such subjects as personal hygiene, military courtesy, safeguarding military information, etc. It is estimated that such training films slash the training time of those instructed by some 40 per cent.

During the Summer and early Autumn of 1942, the Motion Picture Trade Press Publishers Committee provided the furnishings and diversional equipment for the Post's recreation room, library and sun deck.

USO-Camp Shows...

ON NOVEMBER 23, 1942, USO-Camp Shows, today operating the largest show circuit in the history of this country, officially opened its second winter season with a record behind it of having played, free of charge, to 7,740,834 men in our armed forces. That is a staggering figure yet it does not include the troop audiences at offshore and overseas bases, nor those in this country who have been entertained by Camp Shows' Tab Troupes small units averaging five performers who, under strictest military regulations and secrecy, play small out-posts, gun emplacements, etc.

To accomplish this gigantic task, the organization operates, basically, with "paid" touring units (70 shows are out this winter playing 1,000 army camps and naval stations as against 24 playing 263 posts last winter)—the only possible way to maintain a regular show schedule—and with volunteer guest talent from all branches of show business.

According to Abe Lastfogel, USO-Camp show's president, and Lawrence Phillips, executive vice-president, the importance of the volunteer contribution can not be overstressed. Without it they could not have given American servicemen the broad and diversified every-night-in-the-week entertainment program they get. Without it they could not have supplied either the quality or the number of shows required to fulfill the requests of the Army and Navy.

Hollywood's contribution to Camp Shows has been invaluable. To date 72 motion picture celebrities have trouped the Camp Shows circuit, both in and out of the country. This is exclusive of the scores who, regularly, play "spot" booked shows given nightly in the West Coast military area.

On tours of this country, Camp Shows usual procedure is to book a star into one of its regular show units, on a two or three week basis. On these tours, in addition to playing the regular two-shows-a-night-six-nights-a-week, the film luminaries give numerous hospital shows, appear at service clubs and recreation halls, eat with the men and take part in many in-camp activities. Traveling "as is" with the show, they ride buses and slow trains, in zero weather and blistering heat, take what they can get in the way of hotel accommodations and eat in beaneries, if necessary. In other words, when Hollywood goes out for Camp Shows, Hollywood troupes!—and loves it!

"The strong spirit of cooperation evidenced by The Hollywood Victory Committee, with its actor, writer and producer memberships and its many sub-committees, working hand in hand with us arranging for the stars' tours, has been marvelous," Lastfogel said recently. "And from the men under arms themselves, ranging from a letter sent us by General Dwight D. Eisenhower through the hundreds of "thank-you" notes which come to us, spontaneously, right out of the ranks, we know just how much those Hollywood guest-star appearances have meant."

The general tenor of these reports reveals that one of the biggest morale builders is the appearance of a movie star at a military post. On Al Jolson, for instance . . . "Three thousand sailors crowded into the 2,500-seat theater and the cheers, whistling and applause of those men made him perform as he probably never did in any concert for thousands of dollars. . . . He told little human stories, he sang all his familiar songs, he saluted the late comers and brought them up to date on the show with brief, comical resumes. He did a score of little things that delighted the entertainment-hungry men at this base."

From a brigadier-general, commanding offshore base, on Joe E. Brown . . . "Mr. Brown's presence has given us a great break in our work. . . . His whole-hearted and cheerful personality has made many friends and has produced thousands of hearty laughs."

From the Camp Bowie (Texas) Blade, a paper printed by the soldiers . . . "Lovely Carole Landis, the Hollywood dynamo who came to Camp Bowie Monday afternoon under USO-Camp Shows auspices for three days of appearances before the soldiers, did more for morale than a three-day pass. At the dance following the last performance Miss Landis danced with 200 of us, sang 15 numbers with the band and signed more than 1,000 autographs."

These three stars are not singled out for special mention. Everyone who has gone out from Hollywood has brought forth the same kind of response . . . "Jeannette McDonald sang for 17,000 of us (at a point of embarkation) this evening. We'll be shoving off soon and we'll remember this—long and vividly." . . . "Betty Grable has come, conquered, and gone. She drew the largest crowd that we have ever had at any event here and she had the stiffest competition any artist ever had . . . pay day." . . . "The officers and men at this base wish to thank you for sending us Harpo Marx. The refusal of the men to take their customary liberty that night is eloquent testimony of the excellence of the Harpo Marx show." . . . "Thank you for sending us Judy Garland. She performed here last night and won all our hearts when, in a blue dress and goose pimples in 20-below temperature, she sang for hundreds of soldiers who sat through the performance with overcoats buttoned up, scarfs, mittens and hats on."

Nobody, least of all Judy Garland, would claim that the experience could, for instance, be compared to what the nurses serving on Corregidor went through but what Judy and all the rest of Hollywood is doing for USO-Camp Shows is important to the troops and it is work well done.

The following Hollywood personalities have appeared as volunteer entertainers at military posts under the auspices of the Motion Picture Division of USO-Camp Shows:

Jean Arthur, Roy Atwell, Mischa Auer, Kenny Baker, Constance Bennett, Milton Berle, Phyllis Brooks, Johnny Mack Brown, Burns and Allen, Bob Burns.

Charles Butterworth, Harry Carey, Jackie Cooper, Bing Crosby, Linda Darnell, Marlene Dietrich, Deanna Durbin, Reginald Gardiner, Judy Garland, Betty Grable.

Bonita Granville, Mitzi Green, Rita Hayworth, Hugh Herbert, Kay Kyser, Jeanette MacDonald, Harpo Marx.

Ilona Massey, Adolphe Menjou, Ann Miller, Constance Moore, Chester Morris.

Anne Nagel, Pat O'Brien, Jack Pearl, Mickey Rooney, Maxie Rosenbloom.

Rosalind Russell, Ann Rutherford, Ann Sheridan, Three Stooges, George Tobias, Marjorie Weaver.

As of December 15, 1942, the following stars have gone out of the country for Camp Shows: Caribbean: Laurel & Hardy, John Garfield, Chico Marx, Ray Bolger, Mitzi Mayfair, Billy Gilbert, Fay McKenzie, Desi Arnaz; Newfoundland: Joan Blondell; Alaska: Al Jolson, Joe E. Brown, Bob Hope, Jerry Colonna, Frances Langford; Panama: The Ritz Brothers, Jinx Falkenburg; England: Allen Jenkins, Patricia Morison, Frank McHugh, Merle Oberon, Al Jolson, Kay Francis, Martha Raye, Carole Landis and Mitzi Mayfair.

Overseas entertainment is fast becoming one of USO-Camp Shows major items, for the Army and Navy, with an ever expanding AEF on its hands, is requesting more and more overseas units. The Hollywood Victory Committee has expressed to Lastfogel the 100 per cent willingness of stars to go out of the country.

The War Department, in deciding the transportation problem for Camp Shows, gave the proper and final evaluation to out-of-the-country entertainment. That they deem it a significant and necessary part of the whole war effort is evidenced by the fact that by the middle of December, Camp Shows had a unit-a-month scheduled for England, Newfoundland, The Caribbean, Panama, Bermuda and Alaska. In other words, if the Army and Navy gives space on a ship or a plane to a Camp Shows entertainer, they do so only because they consider that performer more vital than the war material he displaces.

Before a Hollywood star can go overseas endless detail must be worked out. Because of the transportation problem only an approximate time-out schedule can be agreed upon. Consequently, picture and radio commitments have to be juggled and cleared. These junkets are definitely not holidays. Stars must travel 'light'; they must maintain the greatest secrecy as to their destinations; they must be prepared to entertain anywhere and everywhere—and usually not in fully equipped theaters! They have to be able to flirt with real danger and endure not inconsiderable hardships. That, as emissaries "from home," their off-stage activities are as important as their on-stage performances is evidenced by the invitation extended by the Queen of England to Kay Francis, Carole Landis, Martha Raye and Mitzi Mayfair, before whom they appeared while they were in England for Camp Shows.

Hollywood can be justly proud of the letter from General Eisenhower. It reads, in part, as follows: "The USO-Camp Shows unit organized by the Motion Picture Division of your organization, consisting of Miss Merle Oberon, Miss Patricia Morison, Al Jolson, Frank McHugh, Allen Jenkins, and Martin Fried, has recently completed a tour of the various units of my command. . . . The Unit played to thousands of men of this command in theaters, hospitals, mess halls and even in the open air. Every performance was most enthusiastically received, and I am sure that every one of the artists took away with him a deep impression of the sincere appreciation of every officer and enlisted man who was fortunate enough to have seen the show. . . . It is hoped that you and your organization will be able to continue to send Units of this kind to the European Theater of Operations because of the importance of this kind of entertainment to the contentment of the troops."

From the stars' point of view, they say in chorus that playing for the troops is a phenomenal experience. Each and every one who has trouped the Camp Show circuit has come back so excited and thrilled by the eager freshness and decent gaiety of the men that they want nothing better than to keep right on touring!

A Report on

COLUMBIA'S WAR EFFORT

IN COMMON with every other major studio in Hollywood, Columbia has gone all out in assisting the Government's war effort, not only through subscription to War Bonds and production of films used in training troops, but also in making films, which, while basically entertainment, are of vital importance in the maintenance of public morale and in presenting a true picture of the global war.

To further these ends, President Harry Cohn of Columbia Pictures, called a meeting of major studio executives. The conference resulted in a plan to produce more quality pictures, to cut down on the use of film and to devote footage to war pictures which would bring the conflict home to the people.

The result was that more top budget pictures will be made during the present year than ever before at Columbia. Under the guidance of Sidney Buchman, vice-president in charge of production, stress is being laid on story, quality and production value. The set limitations have not presented a problem; instead they bring a stimulating challenge to the ingenuity of the set-builders themselves.

Immediately following the Pearl Harbor incident, Columbia made all of its resources available to the Government. Pictures were made to conform to governmental requirements in every respect. Also by governmental wish, other pictures were directed at entertaining the civilian and service population.

Early in the year, Columbia brought out a group of pictures that introduced the multifarious phases of the war to the people at home. They were Canal Zone, Parachute Nurse, Submarine Raider, Sabotage Squad and Counter Espionage. All these films were directly aimed to stimulate public response; to familiarize it with the war and to bring home the facts that subversive and Axis groups were trying to thwart the war efforts of the American public.

At the same time, following lengthy executive conferences, it was decided to increase interest in the armed forces by producing a group of pictures which informed the public of the various phases of activity in most of the branches of service. This also served the double purpose of inducing young men to enlist in the branch of service that most appealed to them. Of these, Flight Lieutenant was the first and later was followed by Atlantic Convoy.

Soon afterwards, Columbia presented The Invaders. So pointed and full of meaning was this epic film that audiences immediately acclaimed it as one of the outstanding productions of the year. The Invaders brought the war home to people. It was a story of what might happen on the North American continent. The cast was exceptional; the propaganda element was subdued; but no man or woman came away from the theater without a doubt but that similar events might occur if an invader really struck.

By this time, motion pictures had touched the responsive chord in their audiences. At the beginning, treatment of the war was more or less general. But now, it was narrowed down into definite channels. With more and more men in the service, it was necessary to let their womenfolk know by first-hand information the kind of lives their men were leading. To present this material faithfully, dramatically and intelligently has been one of the prime aims of Columbia Pictures.

At the same time, the studio has not overlooked the importance of morale building, both for the men in service and the people at home. Realizing that laughter and entertainment are vital factors in helping win any war, Columbia produced My Sister Eileen and You Were Never Lovelier with that purpose in mind.

With the release of Commandos Strike at Dawn, and the forthcoming Attack By Night, Columbia gives the people of this country an insight into the prevailing conditions in conquered countries. It permits us to make comparisons for ourselves, and to see how the little peoples of enslaved countries are still fighting, even under the crushing heel of the Nazis.

As the war progressed, plans for future productions became more and more timely, with greater emphasis laid on the pertinent problems constantly arising. Films of greater scope were in preparation. Destroyer, for instance, written by Lt. Commander Frank Wead, Hollywood's foremost weaver of action-service yarns, and starring Edward G. Robinson with Glenn Ford and Marguerite Chapman, traced the story of one of our fighting craft from the time of its inception throughout its thrilling combat activities.

Another timely picture tied in with the global war is Somewhere in Sahara. Based on the activities of American troops in Africa, it will provide audiences with an escape and at the same time bring home to them the problems American forces are facing in various parts of the globe.

Anticipating the action taking place around the besieged city of Stalingrad, Columbia was the first company to come out with a timely story of the beleaguered stronghold with The Boy From Stalingrad. Again, the fight of the people—this time by the children themselves—was stressed in this highly dramatic and moving narrative of guerrilla youngsters who best the foe with their simple but effective tactics.

Local and national themes, as well as the human interest problems that are direct outgrowths of the war situation have not been neglected. In The More the Merrier, one of the company's most important productions, current living conditions in Washington are dealt with in a light and amusing manner. Everyday incidents in the lives of thousands of the girls who have flocked to the capitol city to work for governmental agencies are authentically presented. Again, Right Guy, deals with the story of a man who, although rejected by the Army, manages to serve his country in another useful capacity.

Following through with its desire to present stories about the various branches of the service. Officers' Candidate School is now in preparation. Appointment in Berlin, tells an exciting story of the adventures of a British secret agent who is trapped in Germany at the outbreak of the war.

Inspired by a speech he heard Mrs. Roosevelt deliver in New York City, the British producer, Isadore Goldsmith is at work on Women at War, a story dealing with the emotional, economic and social problems confronting the millions of women whose men are with the armed forces.

With the showing of Something to Shout About and Reveille With Beverly, Columbia was convinced that musicals are an important contribution to the country's war effort, inasmuch as they help maintain morale and relax the tense nerves of the nation. With this in mind, Columbia has scheduled a number of musicals, including The Cover Girl, Tropicana, What's Buzzin' Cousin?, Two Senoritas from Chicago, Doughboys in Ireland, Louisiana Hayride and Rhapsody in A Flat, for production.

In addition, the studio has answered every request from Washington for propaganda and training shorts. Included among these are Commander Gene Tunney's Fit To Fight and Dr. Gallup's Health For Defense. Song of Victory stresses the nation's refusal to heed Nazi propaganda. Wings for the Fledgling deals with the training of flyers, while Our Second Front narrated by John W. Vandercook, tells of the invasion of Africa by our armed forces.

The three OWI Victory shorts distributed by Columbia are Troop Train, Point Rationing and Farmer At War, all dealing with problems facing the nation at the moment. Mr. Smug, one of the most popular short subjects, details just what happens to a citizen who takes the war effort complacently and refuses to admit that it directly concerns him. Men Working Together, treats the cooperation achieved in various branches of our defense industries and emphasizes the determined effort being made toward a single common objective.

The most popular series of shorts produced by this studio is the Community Sing series. By getting people to sing, morale is heightened. The effect has been noted not only among the civilian populace but in camps of our armed forces throughout the world.

In addition to the actual effort exerted in the making of films, Columbia has gone all-out in every other war effort. It was the first studio to volunteer 100 per cent for ten per cent salary deduction for War Bonds. It has cooperated with every Government agency desiring assistance. It has set up a blood bank. It has sent its players throughout the country to make USO Camp Tours. It has taken a prominent part in the Hollywood Canteen as well as the Stage Door Canteen.

Harry Cohn, president of the company, is "officer of the day" every other week at the Hollywood Canteen, and provides a show for the service men.

Jack Cohn, executive vice-president of Columbia, launched the half-million dollar USO drive for Greater New York, and it was under his supervision and direction that the USO quota was reached, thus enabling our soldiers in farflung bivouacs and camps to have much needed entertainment. The groups for which Cohn acted as Coordinator were:

The Motion Picture Industry, including players, home office and branch managers, motion picture theaters, accessory and supply houses.

The Stage, including players, entertainers, broadcast stations, columnists and agents.

Sports, including prize-fighting, baseball, racing, golf, polo, tennis and bowling.

The Music Industry, including authors, composers and publishers, concert artists, concert agents, instrument manufacturers and suppliers.

Chairmen for each group acted under the leadership of Cohn, to put on a campaign which, for enthusiasm and brilliant results, was unprecedented.

In still another phase of its war effort cooperation, prizes awarded for the company's sales drive this year were given in War Bonds, rather than in cash, as was the custom in other years.

Dawn premieres of important pictures have been held and are being held for the many defense workers throughout the country. The New York and Washington openings of Commandos Strike at Dawn were celebrated by gala benefits for the United Nations.

Columbia Pictures started its war activities on a voluntary basis the moment war broke out. The pace has not slackened and will not slacken. The studio has complied with every Government request. It has questioned no single demand put upon it. Always, it has come forward to asking, "What more can we do?" It is still repeating that same question, and will continue to ask and to comply, until the white flag of the Axis Nations is raised in "Unconditional Surrender."

A Report on

THE DISNEY WAR EFFORT

WHEN the saga of "Hollywood in World War II" is written, the chapter reserved for the effort of the Walt Disney Studio may well lead off:

The impossible was difficult but nevertheless was fully accomplished.

As war broke out over Europe Disney was living in a world of whimsy, filming Bambi and contemplating Alice in Wonderland and Peter Pan among other fantasies. By the time the flames were licking the shores of England, Disney realized that the long arm of Mars would be stretching across the Atlantic to encompass the United States. He laid aside Peter Pan and Alice and turned his thoughts to the possibilities his medium offered for the instruction and education of our peoples in the forces and arms of war.

Following a three months' tour through Latin America, made mostly by plane, he was very air conscious, and foreseeing the need for turning out planes en masse, gauged a bottleneck in production could be caused by lack of trained personnel. Mass production, depending a great deal on riveting, Disney decided to make a picture which would help speed the training of riveters.

The result was Four Methods of Flush Riveting, the first strictly defense project to come out of the Disney plant in Burbank. The Canadian government grasped the import of the picture and ordered prints. This they followed with a contract for a technicolor film explaining the technique of the Boys' Anti-Tank rifle, to hasten the training of Canadian troops in this all important arm of the military.

Then came a series of bond-promotion pictures for the Dominion government. In the riveting and anti-tank gun productions Disney made use of the live-action camera for its limited scope, and turned to his own animated technique for the technical portions of the films.

With Pearl Harbor our own armed services were quick to grasp the training and instructive powers of the medium. The Navy Bureau of Aeronautics was in the vanguard. Then the Treasury suggested a picture that would help painlessly extract income taxes from American pocketbooks, particularly those which never before had been hit by this levy. The picture also was to show why the taxes should be paid without delay, and the part these funds would play in the building of our equipment for warfare. The result was The New Spirit, which was sensationally successful and was credited in a Gallup poll with inducing 37 per cent of Americans to pay their taxes almost immediately after seeing the picture.

The Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs had previously recognized the American film as a good-will builder and as an educational arm in the Latin Republics, and a number of pictures were placed with the Disney Studio for production on behalf of this government agency.

The Army needed films to help "spotters" quickly identify our planes on the wing. Thus the Weft system of identification (wings, engine, fuselage and tail) became the basis of a series of films for the Army, as well as for the Navy.

In its biggest year of entertainment production, the Disney plant shipped little more than 30,000 feet of negative. This represented the customary output of shorts and features. In January, 1943, this amount of footage will be shipped in a 30-day period. Ninety per cent will be for governmental agencies. This is the ratio of all film now being shot at Disney's. Close to 300,000 feet will be filmed this year, or 10 times normal footage. This colossal task has been done in the face of a loss of 25 per cent of personnel—men and women—to our armed forces. More than 100 Disneyites, all trained technicians, were under arms at the end of 1942.

Virtually every branch of the services has Disney representation. Disney men are in the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics serving aboard ship, assigned to naval bases and on duty with Navy flying units. They are to be found in the Marines' photographic section at Quantico, Va., and with Marine Corps regiments in the field. The Army Signal Corps has many a Disney alumnus, and they are scattered through all the Army's numerous arms, from the Air Force to the Tank Corps, from the Coast Artillery to the staff of the "Yank," the Army newspaper and the Army Pictorial Service. The Coast Guard, too, has Disney men serving, of course, while Disney women are in the WAVES. The latter include Ellen Annan, Joan Orbison and Ruth Plumleigh.

The problem of personnel was overcome by an astute handling of the force remaining. Men and women were placed at the jobs they were most capable of handling. New animating technique developed during the years Bambi was filming were brought into use, and proved time-savers. At every turn, Disney is taking advantage of live-action, using it where appropriate and reserving animation for the field in which it alone can tell the story, such as the X-raying of a highly technical machine, the action of anti-bodies in the human blood stream, what makes an engine tick, etc.

This is the design for the Disney Studio at war.

Looking ahead a year, the product being filmed and yet to be produced will fall under four categories:

1. Entertainment, for Disney feels morale at home is as important as food and guns for our boys at the front.
2. Training.
3. Educational.
4. Psychological.

Virtually all have a bearing on the issues, the battle fronts, Pan Americanisms and home morale. Under Entertainment will come the usual number of Donald Ducks, Mickey Mouse, Goofy and Pluto shorts. The locale of many of these subjects will be close to the war, as was the case in 1942.

Highlighting the feature schedule will be a production of the most widely discussed and controversial hook of the day, Major Alexander P. de Seversky's Victory Through Air Power. This film will bring home to the man in the street in the Allied nations, the importance air power holds in the progress of the war. Major Seversky is perhaps the outstanding advocate of air power in the world today, and for years has preached the theory of the late "Billy" Mitchell.

Victory Through Air Power will demonstrate the part the airplane has played since its creation by the Wright Brothers through the war to date, and will show how eventually it will prove the decisive factor in the outcome of the war. This feature will be part live-action and part animation, with Major Seversky himself appearing on the screen explaining his theories. It will be in technicolor.

Slated for release this year is Saludos Amigos, a South American musical, which comes under the "war effort" as a good neighbor gesture. Disney took a group of artists, writers and musicians to South America for three months, gathering material on folklore, legend, and arts of the Latins, and turned out a picture that already has won acclaim in the South American countries. Disney reversed customary releasing practice by showing the picture first in the countries which furnished the source of material for the production. It was hailed everywhere as a sincere and successful attempt to encourage the feeling of good-will between the hemispheres.

Currently in production is a second South American feature which has been tentatively called Surprise Package. Mexico, which was not pictured in Saludos Amigos, will have a prominent sequence in Surprise Package. Again Disney and his aides made certain that their material was authentic, and spent two weeks in Mexico prior to starting work on this attraction.

Whimsy will mingle with the realistic when The Gremlins is brought to the screen in feature form by the squire of Burbank. The Gremlins will be filmed with the sanction and support of the RAF, discoverers of the little hobgoblins of the air who are becoming internationally famous for their exploits. There have been all sorts of conceptions of the Gremlins, but actually only fighting men of the RAC ever come in contact with them, so the legend goes. Through representatives of the RAF, Disney will be supplied with authentic material about the Gremlins, who it is understood are now consorting with American flyers over the continent. The Fifinellas, Widgets and Spandules sound like Disney material of top calibre, and will offer a little relief from the more sordid type of war material reaching the screen.

2. Training: Practically all the scores of pictures coming under this category for the Army and Navy are of hush-hush status. Through pictures of this type it is hoped that the services can in some instances cut by as much as 45 per cent the time it takes to teach technical men.

However, there are two productions which are privileged and can be mentioned. They both make Gone with the Wind look like a short by comparison in length.

First comes Rules of the Nautical Road, which will run more than 20,000 feet. This production, produced under the supervision of the Navy, is highly important for the training of mariners, and the prevention of collisions on the inland waters and high seas. It starts with the making of the amazing point that naval collisions each year result in the loss of more than $150,000,000 in shipping and many lives, and points up the rules of the nautical road to aid in the elimination of unnecessary accidents due to lack of knowledge of signalling or defiance of the common laws of sea courtesy. It will be just as valuable after the war as it is today in marine schools.

Another "colossus," being filmed for the Navy, is Aerology. Taking up where text books end, Aerology tears apart every weather element, which will be of incalculable value to fighting as well as civilian pilots in knowing what goes on inside thunder and lightning storms, fogs, ice, and in fact every element other than mechanical a pilot encounters after taking his ship off.

Hundreds of pilots the world over have contributed to the Navy's fund of material going into this picture, through stories of their encounters with weather. It will be as standard as any text book in flying schools after the war.

3. Educational: Here, at last, the film comes into its own as an "instructional" instrument. Most of these pictures are being made for the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, but for showing wherever a motion picture projector can be found.

Included in the group coming under this heading are: The Grain that Built a Hemisphere, the story of corn and corn products; The Winged Scourge, which relates the why and wherefore of malaria and how it can be overcome; Defense Against Invasion, all about vaccination and inoculation; Water Supply, an invaluable treatise on the prevention of water pollution; and The Amazon Awakens, the story of the greatest delta land in the world. All of these pictures are to be in technicolor, and are indicative of the power of the motion picture as an educational medium.

4. Psychological! Pictures under this classification can be rightfully termed "entertainment" and are being made under the regular Disney theater program. But they treat with topics that are psychological.

Four in this group thus far scheduled are Der Fuehrer's Face, a satirical comedy which might laugh Hitler out of Germany if it could be shown in the Fatherland; Education for Death, a powerful, if short treatment of Gregor Ziemer's slashing indictment of the Nazis; Chicken Little, bringing the little nursery rhyme up to the minute with a ludicrous scourging of the bandier of false rumors; and Emotion and Reason, a plea for a good level-head job of winning the war.

In a separate category is The Spirit of '43 successor to The New Spirit, which the Treasury Department commissioned Disney to produce, because of the terrific success of the latter, in exploiting income tax payments. This year there will be twice as many persons paying this excise as last year, and consequently the Treasury Department's educational problem is twice as great.

Yes, Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck and all their pals have gone to war—completely all out for it. It is another evidence of the part the industry is playing in the gigantic task ahead of the nation both on the war front and the home front. It is casting its shadow, too, on the future when the school room will echo to the sound projector relating the story of biology, chemistry, medicine, surgery, and, in fact, every other educational subject to a wide-awake, alert studentry which will grasp its lesson faster for being able to visualize it along with reading about it.

M-G-M'S WAR EFFORT

THE high percentage of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures with war themes or connotation is indicated by the fact that no less than 20 Culver City feature productions with stories having a direct relationship to the war were released or being prepared for release between December 1941 and the end of December, 1942.

In point of public and critical response Mrs. Miniver undoubtedly topped the list of the nine M-G-M war-theme feature releases during the first year of American participation in World War II. Selected on critics polls and in many editorial columns as an outstanding interpretation of the "home front" scope of the present conflict, it ran for an unprecedented 10 weeks at New York's Radio City Music Hall and brought individual critical citations to Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon, Director William Wyler and Producer Sidney Franklin.

Other releases of the 12 months following December, 1941 having a war angle included Joe Smith, American, which showed the part played by the defense workers in the rising tide of war; The Bugle Sounds, a story of modernized tank battalions in contrast to the old time cavalry forces; A Yank on the Burma Road, Somewhere I'll Find You, and Pacific Rendezvous, all of which dealt with far-flung Pacific and Asiatic backgrounds of war; Nazi Agent, a melodrama with a novel espionage theme; The War Against Mrs. Hadley, which depicted the change of character on the part of a wealthy Washington socialite; and For Me and My Gal, which dealt with the period of the first World War but carried a strong note of parallelism as well as of contrast.

Journey For Margaret and Random Harvest, both of which were given premiers in New York around the 1942 Christmas period, are the first of the M-G-M feature films to be bracketed with the "second-year-of-war" releases. The former film was derived from William L. White's story of his adventures in England during the height of the Nazi bombing, and stresses the problem of war-time orphans. Random Harvest, based on James Hilton's recent novel, dealt with the period of the first World War but carried a pronounced symbolism and interpretation of war-time conditions in relation to the present day.

By far the largest group of features with war themes yet to emanate from the Metro lot is the one headed by Joan Crawford's Reunion in France, the Taylor-Laughton-Donlevy feature, Stand By For Action and the Hepburn-Tracy picture, Keeper of the Flame, all of which are now being shown nationally.

Reunion in France was the first feature set for release to deal with the dramatic undercurrent of the anti-Nazi movement in France, after the drive had taken on new significance with the events in Northern Africa. Stand By For Action, is a sweeping narrative of naval action in the Pacific, and Keeper of the Flame a dramatic presentation of the latent dangers of domestic fascism.

Among the pictures now being made ready for release are Assignment in Brittany, a story of contemporary France; Above Suspicion, an adaptation of the book of the same name dealing with clashing forces in Europe; Bataan Patrol, a dramatization of the remarkable heroism of the vastly outnumbered American units in the Philippines; Private Miss Jones, a story delineating the ever-increasing importance of the women's effort in the war; Salute to the Marines, a timely story of the Marines in action in the Philippines; and The Human Comedy, a story by William Saroyan dealing with the American "home front."

Smoke was still hovering over the ruins of Pearl Harbor when the M-G-M short subjects department "enlisted for the duration." Just a few weeks after President Roosevelt delivered his memorable address to America calling for production quotas which then seemed fantastic, M-G-M brought forth its Academy-award winning two-reeler, Main Street on the March, to describe, in a form the people could readily understand, the enormity of the tasks ahead and the importance of each individual contribution toward guaranteeing the success of the Nation's war program.

Even before war came to America, M-G-M shorts had begun their logical task of informing the people about the status of our armed forces. The Battle Eyes of the Navy and Army Champions, both released prior to America's entry into the war, showed how America's armed forces were beginning the huge task of conversion into a first class fighting force. More recently the Pete Smith Specialty, Marines in the Making, has depicted the prowess of the U. S. Marine Corps.

The shorts which M-G-M considers its most important contributions to the war effort have been those which have delineated methods by which the civilian population, that is, the movie audiences, could better do their part for the war. Don't Talk depicted how idle conversation could make sabotage easier. Victory Vittles showed the housewife how to cut down her food costs without sacrificing nutrition. First Aid was made with the specific purpose of stimulating greater participation in the Red Cross' first aid courses for civilians. ATCA appealed to high school students to take pre-aviation courses.

M-G-M's first contributions to the industry's America Speaks series of shorts is a block of five films, two of which, Mr. Blabbermouth and The Magic Alphabet, have already been released. Three others are now in production, Plan for Destruction, Inflation and Logistics. All proceeds from rentals of these subjects above production costs are being contributed to the American Red Cross.

James FitzPatrick has turned out a number of Traveltalks which he made in collaboration with the Council for Inter-American Affairs, whose purpose has been to extend the good neighbor policy by giving its heterogeneous peoples a better understanding of their neighbors' customs and habits. FitzPatrick, too, is responsible for the M-G-M Miniature, People of Russia, which is one of the few films that have dealt with the people of America's valiant ally.

Even that sanctum of fantasy, M-G-M's cartoon studio, turned from the problems of the birds and the bees to make The Blitz Wolf, a travesty on the folly of isolationism, appeasement and any idea of "doing business" with Hitler.

M-G-M and Loew's have also distributed to date four shorts of a topical nature for the Office of War Information. These are Colleges at War, You, John Jones, Community Transportation and Paratroops.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's actors who are now serving in the armed services include Clark Gable and James Stewart, who are lieutenants in the Air Corps. Robert Sterling is a naval aviation cadet. Robert Montgomery is a naval lieutenant serving with the Atlantic fleet. Richard Ney is an ensign in the United States Naval Reserves. Van Heflin and Douglas McPhail are with Army base camps in California. Ray McDonald is with the Seventy-third Evacuation Hospital. Dan Dailey, Jr., is a member of the Signal Corps training regiment and Lew Ayres is with the Medical Corps.

George Cukor, Vincent Minnelli, David Miller and Joseph Newman are directors who have gone into various branches of the service. Cukor is with the Signal Corps training regiment at Fort Monmouth. Lieutenant Miller is with the Special Service Division of the Army, and Lieutenant Newman is with the Signal Corps stationed in Missouri.

Gottfried Reinhardt, Richard Goldstone, Irving Asher and William T. Grady Jr. have gone from production posts into military service. Reinhardt is stationed at Fort Monmouth; Goldstone with the training film production unit in Dayton, Ohio, and Grady is with the Signal Corps at Camp Crowder, Missouri. Arthur M. Loew, head of the M-G-M international department, is associated with the Government Film Production Unit in Astoria, L. I. Arthur A. Schmidt, formerly publicity manager in the M-G-M Eastern offices, is now a naval lieutenant-commander.

Below are listed additional members of the studio force who are now in service.

Assistant Cameramen: Sergeant Howard A.

Volunteer activities have been maintained at a high level among feminine members of the Culver City studio contingent. Among those who have been and are helping regularly at the Hollywood Canteen, the AWVS, the VACS, the USO, and making Army camp tours are: Mary Astor, Ann Ayars, Fay Bainter, Lucille Ball, Inez Cooper, Joan Crawford, Patricia Dane, Laraine Day, Irene Dunne, Mary Elliot, Ava Gardner, Judy Garland, Greer Garson, Francis Gifford, Connie Gilchrist, Signe Hasso, Fay Holden, Marsha Hunt, Ruth Hussey, Betty Jaynes, Hedy Lamarr, Marta Linden, Mary McLeod, Marilyn Maxwell, Kay Medford, Dorothy Morris, Virginia O'Brien, Cecilia Parker, Eleanor Powell, Frances Rafferty, Donna Reed, Ann Richards, Jean Rogers, Naomi Scher, Ann Sothorn, Lana Turner, Nancy Walker, Jacqueline White, Eve Whitney, Esther Williams, Kathleen Williams and Vicky Lane. Many of these plays have also taken part in extended tours in the interest of bond sales.

Many aspects of America's all-out war effort have been aided through the promotional and exploitation departments of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

At the several exhibitor forums which have been held by the company during the past year a large part of the programs have been devoted to discussions of the role American showmen can play in winning the war, by making their theaters centers of local patriotic and community activity.

The Loew theaters themselves have maintained a steady pace in the sale of War Bonds and stamps since the launching of the drive to sell Bonds through the theaters on May 30, 1942. Total sales to date through the Loew houses are approximately $25,000,000. Loew theaters have served also as focal centers for public discussions and receptions by the visits of movie celebrities to various communities to help the War Bond drive.

Last Spring Bond sales were aided by Ship Ahoy Minute Girls tour in conjunction with the War Savings staff of the United States Treasury. Jetsy Parker and Dorothy Schoemer, two of the girls who appeared in the film Ship Ahoy toured the country and far exceeded their original War Bond sales goal of $3,000,000.

Another unusual War Bond tour was undertaken by young Johnny Sheffield, the Tarzan "Minute Boy" who made a personal coast-to-coast tour using the slogan "Buy Tanks For Yanks."

The premiere of the opening of the film, The War Against Mrs. Hadley, in Washington, D. C., marked the first million dollar War Bond movie premiere. Seats at Loew's Capitol Theater were scaled at Bond prices, ranging from $25 to $25,000 with the management donating the theater's facilities for the occasion and Edward Arnold, Fay Bainter and Kate Smith present in person. Miss Smith featured The War Against Mrs. Hadley in a national network program on September 25.

When Mrs. Miniver was presented throughout the country a feature of the promotion was the selection of local Mrs. Minivers, women who have been making notable contributions to the War effort on the home front. Bond purchases were also used in lieu of admission tickets for this picture in many presentations.

MARCH OF TIME'S WAR EFFORT

BACK in 1935, The March of Time, in its very first release drew attention to the developing crisis in Japan where war-mongers and moderates struggled for control. From time to time in the ensuing years up to Pearl Harbor, The March of Time continued to report on the progress of this struggle, recording the gradual elimination of the peace party as a factor in Japanese politics, and warning Americans of the implications of this development.

In its second release, The March of Time told the story of "Adolph Hitler—the most suspected, the most distrusted ruler in the world today..."

Vol. I, No. 3, Trans-Pacific told how the U. S. was opening the first air route to China. No. 4 told the story of the conflicting forces in French politics. No. 6, Ethiopia, dealt with a war that "could become a world conflict"—and eventually did.

So it went. Japan-China, Pacific Islands, Moscow, Tokyo, League of Nations, Otto of Hapsburg, Revolt in France, Albania's King Zog, all surveyed the world situation and lifted a warning voice against the way the world was drifting into inevitable war. And this was only 1936.

With Inside Nazi Germany, The March of Time stepped up its tempo. From then on, almost continually, it called on the American people for measures to avert the imminent disaster. It was still calling for these measures when the attack on Pearl Harbor made further warning unnecessary.

How has The March of Time met the challenge of war?

In the past year, films made by The March of Time for the U. S. Navy and Government exceed in footage the entire production of a normal peacetime year!

The March of Time has done more than that. In addition to doubling its production output by the addition of Navy training films, it has found time to issue the full-length feature, We Are the Marines, a pertinent contribution to the war effort. And this to say nothing of the fact that the subjects of its regular releases, without exception, have been directly devoted either to the war effort or to the morale front.

The March of Time's service to the war effort does not stop there. A novel and independent contribution is The March of Time School of Pictorial Journalism, founded by Producer Louis de Rochemont over three years ago to train enlisted men in the techniques of motion picture photography under specialized battle conditions. This school has already trained four classes of which one was composed exclusively of U. S. Naval officers. Students in the other three included men from the U. S. Army, Navy, Coast Guard, Marines, Royal Canadian Air Force, Royal Norwegian Air Force. Graduates of the school have already turned in important material from Guadalcanal, the Solomons, etc., and one group of students at the school, assigned to a destroyer for routine training, found themselves carried straight to Casablanca just in time to film the North African offensive.

Students at the school receive detailed instruction in the art of making moving pictures, with particular stress on editing and direction. The March of Time furnishes classrooms, equipment, and makes all provision for field trips with camera crews.

The coordinator of Government Films has established six categories of films, classifying them according to the type of information they convey. Following is a comparable appraisal of The March of Time-produced films issued since the outbreak of the war.

MONOGRAM'S WAR EFFORT

THOUGH Monogram has not up to the present been called upon to produce any special technical subjects for exclusive use by the Government, the company's regularly scheduled releases have throughout the past year paid particular attention to the furtherance of the war effort, and the preservation of the morale of the citizens on the home front.

Certain of its pictures have dealt with developments within the United States which have not been touched upon by other producers, and have in this way contributed importantly to the information of the public on the constantly widening field of civilian participation in the winning of the war—branches of endeavor in which the average man or woman may render valuable assistance.

Thus, She's In the Army related entirely to the work of the Women's Ambulance and Defense Corps of America, detailing the work of this vast legion of women on the home front, and opening up to general knowledge an avenue of service available to patriotic housewives.

Rubber Racketeers dealt with a domestic issue confronting the entire population in the unlawful traffic in automobile tires brought about by the war, and pointed out methods of combating the activities of rubber bootleggers.

War Dogs first brought to the screen the story of the great army of dogs being assembled by the Government and private agencies, principally as guards at war plants, and through its implications gave assurances to dog owners that might influence them to contribute their pets to the national effort. This picture elicited strong praise from the Office of War Information.

Foreign Agent exposed the methods of enemy spies within the United States, and similar service was rendered by such other pictures as Texas to Balaan, Let's Get Tough and others.

In the War Bond Campaign Monogram responded as a unit, and every employee of the organization is investing 10 per cent of weekly earnings.

PRC'S WAR EFFORT

THE YOUNGEST company in the industry, PRC is virtually a 'War Baby', and as such has known the trials and tribulations of those born to strife and tempered in the crucible of conflict. The company had hardly emerged from its swaddling clothes when it was called on, as was its more mature comrades in the industry, to make its own constructive contribution to the War Effort, and it has done so with the enthusiasm that characterizes youth in its clear-eyed conception of the thing to do in this all-out job that confronts our nation.

In its production policy, the company has taken cognizance of two essential needs of the picture-going public in these stressful times: (1) True and factual transcriptions in dramatizations of war events (2) Entertainment that provides an 'escape' medium from the grim realities.

Corregidor: An outstanding example of the first group is the Special Corregidor, starring Otto Kruger, Elissa Landi and Donald Woods. This is the first film produced that tells the story of the heroic defense of the island fortress in the Philippines. The atmosphere is authentic, the action factual, and its verity is the result of many months of research. The personal theme concerns the super-human efforts of doctors and nurses in caring for the sick and wounded. It is the most ambitious picture made by PRC thus far.

Other documented war pictures include:

Bombs Over Burma: A beautiful Chinese woman in the intelligence service of her country risks her life many times to uncover a European spy in the employ of the Japs, through whose machinations supply wagons are being destroyed by enemy bombers on the Burma Road.

Convict Battalions: As the title implies, this is an exploitation special, written by Martin Mooney, depicting the honest efforts of inmates of various penitentiaries to help win the war. The drama of these men fighting the Japs in the Southwest Pacific is realistically mounted with actual battle footage and tells the story of heroism and sacrifice by men who have learned the value of liberty.

The Cossacks Ride Again: A realistic drama of Russia's girl sniper, showing the German invasion of Russia and the subsequent rout of Hitler's army. Film is documented with actual war footage showing the famed cossacks in action against the Germans.

Forgotten Children: A powerful documentary dramatization of Nazi brutality in the small conquered nations of Europe and the effects of this education of hate upon the coming generation.

Lady From Chungking: An aristocratic lady demeans herself as a coolie in the rice fields to inveigle a Jap general into giving her his confidence. With the military secret, she sends the message to the American bomber squadron which brings them over at the psychological moment to destroy the enemy troop train on the way to Chungking.

Miss V From Moscow: In which a beautiful Russian spy impersonates a female spy from Berlin. Going to Paris, she works with loyal French underground groups, and relays to Moscow information that enable the American convoy to outwit the German submarines.

Prisoner Of Japan: An American trader on a Pacific island gives his life along with a girl from the States, to reveal to the commander of a U. S. battleship the exact location of a secret radio base of the Japs. The salvos from the battlewagon destroy the station, the enemy operators and the Americans.

Submarine Base: Men of the United States Merchant Marine deal Hitler's submarine captains "cards from a cold deck." Subs get their ammunition from a small island off the coast of South America, but the payoff shrouds the unsung heroes of our merchant marine in glory they justly deserve in their fight against the U-boat menace.

Their Raid By Night: An American captain in the British Commandos is sent to Norway to prepare the way for a surprise raid to destroy military bases of the Nazi invaders. With the help of a cockney radio operator and a Norwegian lieutenant, the mission is successfully accomplished.

Pictures For Army Camps: In the 'escape entertainment' group, which comprises about 50 per cent of the program, are many pictures with patriotic angles, notable among these being The Yanks Are Coming, Duke of The Navy and A Yank in Libya. These productions, with such comedies as The Pay-off, Baby Face Morgan, My Son, The Hero and Queen of Broadway, have found high favor in the Army camps.

The Western stars of PRC have done their bit in War Bond drives and the USO tours. Buster Crabbe and Al St. John, stars of Billy The Kid series, have both made extensive tours for the USO, while William Boyd and Art Davis, starring in The Frontier Marshal series, made several tours throughout the country under the management of Ben Roscoe, coordinator of the Treasury Department, in the War Bond drive. They gave all-out aid in rounding up the stragglers in the drive, making personal appearances at theaters and also at post and Army camps and in radio broadcasts over CBS and other stations.

In The Armed Forces: Virtually every exchange of the 29 in the U. S. A. is represented in the Armed Forces. Two members of the board of directors are now actively in service, Robert S. Benjamin of the Army and Bert Kulick of the Navy. Benjamin was counsel for PRC and Kulick was New York franchise holder. Bernard D. Newman, Secretary of the Salt Lake exchange of PRC is also in the armed forces. Dave Lefton of the Pittsburgh Leftons, franchise holders, is also enlisted. The West Coast is represented by William Raynor, who was publicity representative at the studios. From the home office in New York went Sidney Hirsch, of the accounting department and John McNamara of the mailing department.

PRC is represented 100 per cent in the War Bond drive with many of the personnel exceeding the 10 per cent of salary in their subscriptions.

RKO RADIO'S WAR EFFORT

RKO Radio's contribution to the United Nations' war effort began actually in September, 1937, more than four years before Pearl Harbor. The earliest crystallized recognition by the motion picture industry that it could serve the national interest beside supplying entertainment to the public, it was that long ago that RKO Radio and its affiliated producers—at that time, Pathe, Walt Disney, and March of Time—fully convinced of the trend of international politics, embarked upon a program of screen information designed to awaken public consciousness to the ever growing danger.

In the beginning, the effort was confined to two-reel subjects produced by March of Time, the first of which was War in China, released in September, 1937. This was the first time that the American people were presented with more than fragmentary visual evidence of the kind of an enemy the Jap was.

Other two-reelers of the world situation followed thereafter on the basis of one a month, and in August of 1940, March of Time produced, and RKO Radio released, the first full length factual feature dealing with our own state of preparedness. The Ramparts We Watch. The reception accorded this important subject, both by audiences and by newspaper editorial comment throughout the country, led RKO Radio to plan further feature length pictures utilizing the fictional structure as the more effective way of presenting the facts.

Accordingly, in January, 1941, RKO Radio distributed a British-made melodrama, Convoy. This thrilling action picture made with the cooperation of the British Admiralty, showed the grimness of sea warfare with all the detailed terror of a convoy attacked at sea by enemy raiders.

Then there followed, in chronological order Parachute Battalion, a story set against the exciting background of U. S. Army training, revealing to the public just how parachute troopers are made. Call Out the Marines followed next, a brawling, pulse-racing tale of the United States Marines, dealing with some of the corps' traditions and spirit.

That same month—February, 1942—RKO Radio produced and released Joan of Paris. This story told of the adventures of a group of English fliers who bail out over enemy-held territory in France, make their way to Paris, and after a series of thrilling adventures find their way back to England and up into the skies again. A classic in human courage and human perseverance.

On the lighter side now, yet with an undertone of seriousness, came My Favorite Spy which involved Kay Kayser and his band. Herbert Wilcox then produced the Anna Neagle starrer, Wings And The Woman, the dramatic story of Britain's greatest woman flier, Amy Mollison, who died while ferrying bombers for the British Army.

Next, in order, came The Navy Comes Through, action-packed thriller of the American Merchant Marine and how, despite sub and raider menace, our cargo ships get through; Seven Days' Leave, a musical of army life, soldiers, and girls; Once Upon a Honeymoon starring Ginger Rogers and Cary Grant, a story of Nazi intrigue set against the desperate background of eastern Europe; Seven Miles From Alcatraz, exciting melodrama of Nazi spies in America; Tarzan Triumphs, an African jungle thriller dealing with Nazi spies; Journey Into Fear, a drama of Nazi intrigue in Turkey; and the current box office sensation, Hitler's Children, an authentic picturization of Gregor Ziemer's most-talked about best seller, Education for Death, which shows what spiritual and moral destruction the Nazis are wreaking among the youth of Germany.

At this writing, RKO Radio has completed and ready for release the following feature pictures dealing with various phases of the war effort: Samuel Goldwyn's They Got Me

Metro -Goldwyn -Mayer

*Red

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER

Covered, a Bob Hope-Dorothy Lamour comedy dealing with Nazi spies; Forever And A Day produced for charity by a group of noted Hollywood stars and financed and distributed by RKO Radio without profit to itself; Flight For Freedom, the story of an intrepid American woman flier who gave up her life that the American Navy might have a chance to find out what the Japs were doing in the Pacific; This Land Is Mine, the gripping tale of a Nazi-conquered community which refused to stay conquered; Bombardier, a gripping thriller of the air corps men who sight the enemy targets and lay the blockbusters; and a British-made melodrama, Squadron Leader X, story of a Nazi flier who lands in England on a spying mission and what happens through him and to him.

But this isn't all. For the season 1943-44, RKO Radio has scheduled a number of important productions dealing with the war effort, two of which have already been started.

In the matter of shorts, RKO Radio has released Walt Disney's Education For Death, a cartoon based on the Gregor Ziemer book; Der Fuehrer's Face, Donald Gets Drafted, Army Mascot, The Vanishing Private, Sky Trooper and Private Pluto, with many more to come. Additionally, Walt Disney and his staff are devoting most of their energies and time to the making of official films for the nation's fighting services, the Treasury Department, and other governmental bureaus the total footage of which runs into the millions.

Pathe, Inc., which is a subsidiary of RKO Radio, besides the bi-weekly newsreel, is producing the This Is America series of two-reel factuals which are designed to show highlights of our nation at war. First of these 13 subjects was Private Smith of the U. S. A., the story of an American boy and how he is turned into an efficient fighting man. This was followed by Women At Arms, showing how American women contribute to the war effort; then Army Chaplain, the story of the Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish chaplains; and Boomtown, D. C., the story of the nation's capital.

In addition, Pathe also produced three one-reel subjects under the general title of America Speaks. These three—whose titles were Out Of The Frying Pan Into The Firing Line, Salvage, and Manpower—were based on subject matter suggested by Lowell Mellett and were made on a non-profit basis under the supervision of the War Activities Committee—Motion Picture Industry. Another series, labeled Victory Specials, was also made by Pathe, the first two of which were entitled Conquer By The Clock and City of Courage.

For the record it should be stated that March of Time from September 1937 until July 1942 when distribution arrangements with RKO Radio were severed, produced a total of 39 two-reel subjects dealing with some phase of the world picture. These titles, which are self-explanatory, were: War In China, Crisis In Algeria, Inside Nazi Germany, Nazi Conquest No. 1, The United States Coast Guard, Threat to Gibraltar, Prelude To Conquest, Inside The Maginot Line, Uncle Sam The Good Neighbor, The Refugee, Background For War, Japan, Master of the Orient; War, Peace and Propaganda; Soldiers With Wings, The Battle Fleets of England, Crisis In The Pacific, The Republic of Finland, Canada At War, America's Youth, The Philippines, The U. S. Navy, 1940; Spoils of Conquest, Getaway To Panama, Foreign Newsfronts, Arms And The Men, U. S. A.; Labor And Defense, Americans All, Crisis In The Atlantic, China Fights Back, Peace by Adolf Hitler, Norway In Revolt, Sailors With Wings, Our America At War, When Air Raids Strike, Far East Command, America's New Army, India In Crisis, India At War, and Men of the Fleet.

Besides the contribution of its professional resources, RKO has contributed heavily to the war effort through the individual initiative of its employees. Up to this writing, more than 850 of its far-flung staff, from the home office, studio, branches, theater department, and other affiliates, have joined the fighting services. As of last March, RKO casualties have been reported as five dead and five wounded in actions in every theater of war where there are American forces. Moreover, more than 95 per cent of all RKO employees have subscribed to the payroll deduction form of war bond purchasing, and more than 60 per cent have contributed at least once to the Red Cross Blood Bank.

There is one other activity in which RKO takes pride. Voluntary contributions are made by the home office employees every week and the money thus collected is used to purchase gift boxes for former RKO employees now in the service. In addition there is RKO Radio's The Salute, the motion picture industry's first house organ devoted exclusively to the comings and goings of its employees now wearing Uncle Sam's uniform.

REPUBLIC'S WAR EFFORT

NOT the least of the contributions which the motion picture industry can make to our nation's war effort is confidence in our ability to make the adjustments necessary to Victory. This confidence has been expressed by Herbert J. Yates in his statement, "I see no reason for discouragement or mental defeatism," which he has backed by constructive management to insure continued production of motion pictures, described by President Roosevelt as "one of the most effective media in informing and entertaining our citizens."

That confidence has been translated into action and Republic Pictures has maintained its production schedule, including not only the type of release which helps the American people to know the facts which are vital-ly important to victory, but also the "escape" entertainment which a hard-working people needs for relaxation.

Republic studios has cooperated in the making of special training films and conservation programs and its personnel has participated in bond sale drives, blood donations, and other win-the-war programs. In the distribution field, it has assisted the War Activities Committee in exchange handling of films on its program, and is currently distributing Henry Browne, Farmer, a Department of Agriculture short directed to Negroes.

Republic has lost many of its production personnel to the Armed Forces, and has cooperated with the suggestion of the Manpower Board in connection with replacement by women in many posts.

The studio list is headed by H. S. Brown, Jr., former executive producer in charge of westerns, now a lieutenant in the Army. The roster includes three associate producers: Edmund Grainger, 1st lieutenant, Army; Leonard Fields, petty officer, Navy; Bernhard Vorhaus, captain, Motion Picture Unit-Army Air Corps.

Several directors are in service: Les Orlebeck, 1st lieutenant, Army Signal Corps; William Witney, 2nd lieutenant, U. S. Marines.

The list of assistant directors includes: Douglas T. Yates, captain, Army; Herbert E. Mendelson, corporal, Army; Julian Zimet, private, Army.

The roster of writers is: Franklyn Adreon, major, Marine Corps; Sol Shor, technical sergeant, Army Air Corps; Arthur Jones, captain, Army; Richard Murphy, private, Army; Ben Roberts, private, Army; Jerome Sackheim, captain, Army.

The co-heads of the music department now in service are: Cy Feuer, lieutenant, Army; Raoul Kraushaar, private, Army.

The still department head, and his replacement, both now in the armed forces, are: Charles Cashon, lieutenant, Army Air Corps; Herbert L. Westrate, private, Army Air Corps.

Louis Phillipi, former head of the make-up department, is now a lieutenant in the Army, and many other employees are now in service.

The actors include Gene Autry, now a technical sergeant in the Army Air Corps; Ray Middleton, now a corporal in the Army, and Bill Shirley, now an Army private.

Home Office personnel enrolled in the armed forces includes two special representatives, Francis Soule and Clifton Emerson.

A short summary of films recently released, in production or preparation attests to the cooperation which Republic is giving to the information program as designated by our government.

Suicide Squadron, the story of a Polish aviator-pianist who tours the United States for Polish War Relief, but finally decides that he must join his comrades in the Polish Squadron in England to fight for the freedom without which all art will be lost to the world. This film helps the American public to understand the nature of the enemy, and the character of one of our Allies.

Remember Pearl Harbor, a story of fifth column activities in the Philippines, climaxed by news of the attack on Pearl Harbor, and by the bravery of an American flier who dive-crashes into a Japanese submarine.

Flying Tigers, a tribute to the intrepid who—long before Pearl Harbor—blasted the airmen of the American Volunteer Group, Japs from the skies above China. Their gallantry, at incredible odds, and the bravery of the Chinese people, are shown in a film which helps to cement United Nations solidarity.

Moscow Strikes Back, a film exalting the bravery of our Russian allies during the siege of Moscow and the Red Army counter-offensive, was recently selected by the New York Film Critics for special award as the best war-fact film of the year. Actual scenes shot at the front by Russian cameramen show the nature of our enemy and the staunch bravery of our Russian allies.

Youth On Parade is in lighter vein, a story of college life on the campus, its underlying theme the encouragement of student to train themselves for work as officers in our armed forces.

Mountain Rhythm is a simple story of rural folk who decide to help in the farming program instead of taking a well-earned vacation, and of their success in breaking down class distinctions.

Victory Fleet is based upon the life of the dynamic Henry Kaiser, whose accomplishments in ship-building have excited the admiration of the entire country.

Also on the production schedule are: Thumbs Up, a story of the women's Auxiliary Air Force of England; Berlin Papers Please Copy, a story of a typhus carrier, out-cast from the world for many years, who escapes and sets out for Germany when he hears that his mother is in peril; Yankee Sky Dragons, about the U. S. Army Air Force now attached to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's valiant Chinese armies—a sequel to Flying Tigers; Dakar, a story about the important naval base which recently joined the Allied side; Gone With the Draft, a best-seller about the lighter side of Army life; The Marines Step Out, a tribute to this mighty arm of our fighting forces; and The Purple V.

In the serial field, Republic has, for a long time, pointed up the character of the fascists. King of the Texas Rangers showed the forces of sabotage at work, and being quelled by the cooperation of a Texas Ranger and a Mexican Rurale. Spy Smasher concerned itself with an American agent, working with a loyal Free Frenchman, who exposes the head of a German spy ring in the United States. King of the Mounties shows the Canadian Police blocking the plans of a trio of enemy agents, representing Germany, Japan, and Italy; G-Men vs. The Black Dragon also emphasizes United Nation cooperation, with representatives of America, England, and China working against the Japanese Black Dragon Society. In all its chapter-plays, Republic has heeded the warning of the Office of War Information to indicate the strength of the enemy and point up the fact that we must attack with our full force and energy.

In the outdoor film category, Republic has continued to make pictures highlighting the western scene and the "square-shooting" character and pioneer spirit of our people. Several westerns were based upon patriotic themes, including material about fifth-column activities in this country, the program to encourage the training of horses for Army use, and the like.

Republic Studios has made training films for use by the United States Government, including 60 mm. Mortar, an important subject produced in two sections; Horse-manship, Cavalry Rifle Platoon, Keep it Clean, and Cracking Tanks.

Republic has assisted the War Activities Committee in obtaining 16 mm. prints of films for showing in the combat areas, as well as in the distribution of subjects which play an important part in providing information and sustaining morale. J. H. Dillon, Republic branch manager, heads a committee of all exchange managers in Charlotte, which supervises the distribution of such films in that city.

Republic is enrolled in the War Savings plan, with more than 95 per cent of its personnel subscribing to weekly payroll deductions. The Studio has been in active conservation programs, and has cooperated in the conservation of vital war materials by the careful use of raw stock, reduction in the quantity of stills manufactured, as well as by the use of 4x5 negatives and prints wherever feasible.

Many of its stars have entertained at camps, hospitals, training stations, and the like, as well as participating in bond-selling drives, and serving in many of the auxiliary forces.

Another important phase of our home-fight has been the encouragement of the use of Negro players in films, whose work has been given due credit in press releases not only in the Negro newspapers but in the general press as well.

Motion pictures can play an important role in winning the war. Republic intends to contribute its Victory share in its two-edged production program, covering films for education and information, and pictures which help a busy America to enjoy the necessary respite of easy-to-get relaxation.

20th-CENTURY-FOX'S WAR EFFORT

DIVERSIFIED entertainment to meet the extra demands of wartime morale-building is evidenced in the type and theme of pictures released during 1942 now in active production or planned for early filming by Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation.

A breakdown of the bigger pictures shows that the themes of eight were directly concerned with the glorification of the U. S. Armed Forces, seven had themes or locales of the United Nations Allies, two were set in Axis countries, three interpreted life on the home front, five were the biggest song and dance musicals ever produced by Twentieth Century-Fox in any year and six were escapist dramas of universal theme.

That 25% of the product classified as war pictures was an astute proportion of pictures built around today's headlines, is indicated by a study of box office grosses of such service pictures as A Yank in the R. A. F. and To the Shores of Tripoli, to name two of the top money-making war pictures. These Twentieth Century-Fox releases include subjects that have greatly aided the government information program for all-out war effort. With such a flexible production schedule as was in effect at the coast studio, Twentieth Century-Fox was enabled to produce and release type of picture most needed at the time when a particular subject would do for the commoncause and a study of the breakdown of the production chart will show how effective this careful planning was in reaching all types of theatergoers with the greatest common denominator of screen entertainment.

U. S. ARMED FORCES—this classification includes such pictures as, To the Shores of Tripoli, the Technicolor story of the reason behind the Marines' particular pride in the traditions of the U. S. Marine Corps.

Ten Gentlemen From West Point—dramatic story of the first ten cadets to be graduated from the U. S. Military Academy, and one of the most stirring pictures of American patriotism released last year.

United We Stand—an interesting documentary feature produced by Fox-Movietone and including newsreel clips of historic events during the past 25 years that changed the course of human behavior and precipitated the second World War.

Iceland—Sonja Henie musical comedy and first war picture with Iceland setting and paying a tribute to U. S. Marine occupational forces.

Manila Calling—melodrama of the communications crews who worked so desperately to keep Manila in touch with the rest of the world during its final days of assault.

Thunder Birds — Technicolor air story filmed at Thunderbird Field, Arizona, where pilots of the United Nations trained for combat duty, and showing the unification of training between American and United Nations cadets and instructors.

We Are the Marines — March of Time feature production produced with the cooperation of the U. S. Marine Corps, dramatizing the development of the leathernecks from "boot" training to active duty, with scenes from Midway, Guam and the Solomon Islands.

Crash Dive — Technicolor drama filmed at the U. S. Navy submarine school base at New London, Conn., honoring the men who go to sea in the subs.

Alaskan Highway—story of the latest link in the Northwest military chain, to be produced in cooperation with the governments of United States and Canada. The Wags—a dramatic story of the training and combat service of the war dogs. Tin Fish—Technicolor account of U. S. Naval aviation on distant fronts. Tank Town—Defense industry boom town is the background for this action romantic drama. Battle Stations—follows the exploits of the U. S. Marine Corps from the point where To the Shores of Tripoli left them at the embarkation center. War Correspondent—formerly titled One Man Army this will recount the adventures of Floyd Gibbons, late war correspondent and Sergeant Sam Dreben.

Torpedo Squadron 8—Based on the true life adventure of Ensign Gaye in the South Pacific. Listening Post—Original story of the U. S. Signal Corps by John Guenther. Life Boat—Drama of men of a merchant marine ship and a Nazi submarine foundering at the same time with one lifeboat between them. Condors of the Sky—Original story of the Flying Fortresses based on actual exploits. Ground Pilots—another original story to be produced in the Spring with the cooperation of the U. S. Army Air Corps. Kaiser of the U. S. A.—dramatization of the life of the fabulous shipbuilder. Coast Guard—Life and training of the men who defend America's shores. Guadalcanal Diary—Actual exploits in the Battle of the Solomons as described by Richard Tregaskis, famous correspondent.

UNITED NATIONS LOCALES—This Above All—London in the blitz and a remarkable accurate picture of British morale under fire, filmed from the best-selling war novel by the late Eric Knight.

Remarkable Mr. Kipps—distributed by 20th Century-Fox but produced in England from H. G. Wells' memorable story Kipps.

The Pied Piper—another drama also based on a best-selling novel in which an elderly English gentleman leads a group of five refugee children across France, eluding the Nazis and eventually finding haven in London.

China Girl—Drama among the American Flying Tigers fighting the Japs for the glory of China.

Immortal Sergeant—Fighting in the Libyan desert as described in John Brophy's popular novel, is vigorously dramatized in this film.

Chetniks (The Fighting Guerrillas) Yugoslavian resistance to the German army of occupation, supply dramatic incidents for the slashing attacks of the famed Fighting Guerrillas under General Draja Mihailovitch.

The Young Mr. Pitt—Dramatic spectacle of a conflict between England's youthful Prime Minister, William Pitt, and Bonaparte, with the action closely paralleling today's world situation.

The Moon is Down—Drama from John Steinbeck's novel and play, with the powerful message that the spirit of the people who have been invaded will not be conquered.

Convoy to Murmansk—A Russian woman navigator on a freighter in a convoy to Murmansk, is the central figure in this story by Gene Fowler, Sr. and Gene Fowler, Jr.

And the following stories purchased by the studio now being adapted to the screen:

I Escaped From Hong Kong—Best-selling novel by Jan Henrik Marsman. The Incredible Earl of Suffolk—Based on the biography of the fabulous peer who was leader of a bomb demolition squad in London. Only the Stars Are Neutral—Quentin Reynolds' current best-selling non-fiction book. The Russian People—Based on the New York Theater Guild play now on Broadway. Mr. Bullfinch Takes a Walk—an original story of International diplomats. The French Underground—An original story of the underground system for liberation of French patriots. Soldiers Never Die—Original story of Russian defense against the enemy on the road to Moscow. Road to Algiers—An original story dealing with the Allied Nations occupation of this city. Flare Path—From the play by Terence Rattigan still running in London and now opening on Broadway.

LIFE ON THE HOME FRONT—Young America—While not a direct war subject, this

On the Sunny Side—Reaction of refugee children after transplanting them to America.

Little Tokyo, U. S. A.—Melodrama of the upheaval in the Japanese section of Los Angeles when migration of all Japs was carried out by the government.

Margin For Error—comedy drama based on Clare Boothe's Broadway stage hit. Locale, New York headquarters of the German Consul General, when Jewish policemen were assigned as his bodyguards.

School For Sabotage—Expose of methods used by Axis powers in training saboteurs in the U. S. A.

Grand Street Boys—Lesson in Americanism and patriotism may be gained from story of outstanding citizens of various faiths in this fraternal organization.

And the following stories available for early production:

Army Wife—Feminine adjustment to life during this new kind of warfare. Happy Land—Based on a novel by MacKinlay Kantor; the story of a mid-west American family caught in the tide of war. Diplomatic Courier—The Readers Digest story by Frances Wickware of the adventures of a State Department courier. One Destiny—Phil Strong's new novel of the members of an Iowa family, all of whom joined some branch of U. S. service. The Eve of St. Mark—Maxwell Anderson's current stage hit of the American soldiers' reaction to leaving home for overseas duty. Stars and Stripes Forever—Biography of John Philip Sousa which will be enlivened by many of his famous military marches. This Is My Own—original story by Damon Runyon, dealing with the part prison inmates are playing in the war. Jitterbugs—Original story presenting the 'teen age girl problem in defense manufacturing and military centers.

AXIS COUNTRY LOCALE—Secret Agent of Japan—Activities of Japanese and Nazi espionage system in the Far East.

And the following stories now in preparation:

Bomber's Moon—Melodrama based on story of an American pilot shot down over Germany and his exploits in enemy country. Last Train From Berlin—Current best-selling non-fiction story of Howard K. Smith, an American correspondent, who escapes from Berlin with diplomatic attaches.

Moontide—Jean Gabin's first American picture dealing with life among the shrimp fishermen of Southern California.

The Black Swan—Rafael Sabatini's story of the Spanish Main, produced in Technicolor, set new records at the nation's box offices.

Life Begins at Eight-Thirty—Monty Wolley's second starring picture based upon stage drama, Light of Heart.

The Meanest Man in the World—The George M. Cohan stage comedy fashioned into a starring vehicle for Jack Benny.

My Friend Flicks—Technicolor drama adapted from Mary O'Hara's best-selling novel of the love of a boy for his horse.

The Song of Bernadette—From Franz Werfel's best-selling novel of the Miracle of Lourdes. Jane Eyre—Charlotte Bronte's story now in production. Heaven Can Wait—Ernst Lubitsch Technicolor production telling the events is a man's life by depicting his birthday anniversaries. Blind Man's House—Drama from Hugh Walpole novel. Tales of Manhattan—18 stars and a score of supporting players in this exploratory story of the adventures of a tail coat.

Bird of Paradise—Romantic drama based on the Richard Walton Tully play also in Technicolor. The Keys to the Kingdom—Best-selling novel by A. J. Cronin. Claudia—Rose Franken's long run play. Buried Alive—Arnold Bennett classic of the same title. Victor Hugo—Biography of the great French writer by Matthew Josephson. A Highland Fling—London stage success by Margaret Curtis soon to be produced on Broadway.

MUSICALS—Song of the Islands—Musical comedy romance of the South Seas with palm trees, blue lagoons, native singing and dancing belles, all in Technicolor.

My Gal Sal—Musical Broadway days and nights of songwriter Paul Dresser and John L. Sullivan brought back through the magic of Technicolor.

Springtime in the Rockies—Technicolor musical romance high in the Canadian Rockies featuring Harry James and his Music in support of the stars.

Coney Island—Technicolor spectacle, with music, of America's playground. Hello, Frisco, Hello—Another Technicolor musical drama glorifying the metropolis of the Pacific Coast. Sweet Rosie O'Grady—Betty Grable musical romance in Technicolor, formerly titled Police Gazette Girl. The Girls He Left Behind—Musical comedy with Alice Faye and Carmen Miranda. Stormy Weather—Musical cavalcade of the negro in the field of entertainment with an all-star negro cast. Greenwich Village—Another Technicolor musical planned for Alice Faye and revealing life in the Village when it was an artists' colony. Winter Time—Sonja Henie Technicolor musical formerly titled Quota Girl.

The short subject field received as much attention in complying with directives of the various war activities agencies as was evident in the production of full-length features. Even the cartoon characters went all out in the universal war effort.

During 1942 Twentieth Century-Fox released 10 subjects filmed in or directly concerned with current battle zones; three army subjects; three with Navy themes; three for the Allied nations and two interpreting the South American scenes, all produced by the short subjects department of Movietone News. Nine of the Terrytoons released last year were definitely militaristic in them or designed for morale-building on the home front.

The 1942 record of Twentieth Century-Fox in the short subject field was notable also because the March of Time made a releasing deal with this corporation. Each of the six subjects thus far released was concerned entirely with the present war.

Outstanding in the short field were such releases as: Battle of Midway—Filmed in color by Commander John Ford during the height of the Jap attack, and booked by more theatres probably than any short released during 1942.

It's Everybody's War—First of three shorts announced for production by 20th Century-Fox in Hollywood for the WPB. This subject carries the war home to the citizens of Jellersonville through dispatches and communications from members of their home company of the State National Guard now fighting in the South Pacific.

An outstanding example of industry cooperation with the OWI was the gratis distribution of Air Raid Warden which in many exchange centers, achieved 100 per cent possibility. Tie-ups and demonstrations arranged by branch managers made the showing of this picture of great civic importance.

The Movietone short subjects might be classified as follows:

ARMY—Uncle Sam's Iron Warriors—Story of mechanized warfare, tanks, jeeps, etc. Men of West Point, highlights of the training of the cadet. When Winter Calls—Training of ski troops at Mt. Rainier National Park. Wings of Defense—Aircraft production and training of pilots.

NAVY—Men For the Fleet—Recruiting and training of seagoing personnel. Hub of the World—Wartime Washington with emphasis on world-wide activity in the Navy department. Story of the Coast Guard—History, training and objectives of the Coast Guard.

CURRENT OR FUTURE BATTLE ZONES—Dutch Guiana—Stressing importance of this outpost. Secret of the Fjord—Adventures along the coast of Alaska. Jewel of the Pacific—Hawaii from the air and last peace-times scenes before the Pearl Harbor attack. Gateway to Asia—Shows importance of keeping the Asiatic supply lines open. Courageous Australia—Again a timely subject released just before landing of American troops. India, the Golden—Last scenes taken in India before arrival of Expeditionary Forces. Wedding in Bikaner—Another Cinecolor subject taken by Thaw Asiatic Expedition through India and Asia. Our Last Frontier—Cinecolor tour of Alaska. Royal Araby and Strange Empire—Acquainting the American public with cities later mentioned in war news, filmed by Thaw Expedition.

SOUTH AMERICAN—Heart of Mexico and Gay Rio.

Terrytoon started out in August with a Technicolor release titled All Out For V, declared by critics to be one of the finest patriotic, and entertaining shorts thus far released. Gandy Goose, Nancy and the other Terrytoon cartoons also donned uniforms. The war subjects were: All Out For V, Flying Fever, Gandy Goose in the Outpost, Night Life in the Army, Nancy in Doing Her Bit, Barnyard Waacs, Sham Battle Shenanigan, Somewhere in the Pacific and Scrap For Victory.

Among the subjects in production by Movietone include, Climbing the Peaks, which will show scenes of the training of the Pack Artillery and mountain troops in Colorado National Park; The Waves, training and assignment of women accepted by the Navy; Victory Enrollment Subject, one of the America Speak series, and Tools of Production.

It was apparent early in 1942 that never in the history of the industry had so many people sought respite from universal trials and tribulations at the motion picture theaters. Thus Twentieth Century-Fox was confronted with the problem of providing recreation for a greater number of people than ever before in our history but with our resources limited. However, the war spurred initiative and enterprise to such a degree that pictures increased their quality of entertainment as can be noted by a survey of the preceding lists of features and shorts.

So far as Twentieth Century-Fox is concerned a far-sighted policy of production found this studio with a reserve of story material and with production scheduled to use the full time of all of the top players before they were called to active service. As of January 1, 1943 there were 676 members of the various units of this corporation in active service.

Col. Daryl F. Zanuck took leave of his post as vice-president in charge of production, for the duration of the war and went abroad for the U. S. Signal Corps. Twice cited in dispatches from correspondents, once with Commandoes raiding a French port and again in action in North Africa, Col. Zanuck returned to this country in January and started editing and cutting the film he had taken in Algiers.

Among other executives East and West who are in service are Maj. John Powers, of National Theaters, who went to Australia; 1st Lt. John P. Edmonds of the Igal department, now in the air Corps Administrative forces; Movietone News editor Harry Lawrenson, a 1st Lt. in the U. S. Signal Corps; Philip Dunne with the Office of the Co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs. Director John Ford is a captain in the Navy and was wounded directing the filming of Battle of Midway.

Among the top stars who are now in active service are: Tyrone Power, U. S. Marine Corps; Henry Fonda, U. S. Navy; Victor Mature, U. S. Coast Guard; and due to be called to active service in the Coast Guard sometime in January, 1943, are John Payne, Cesar Romero and George Montgomery.

From the camera, lab and sound departments at the studio the services took 34 men. Two of the girls from the reading and script department are in the WAACS and one in the WAVES.

Nearly all of the players have been out on Bond trips or else made personal appearances at Army, Navy or Marine bases here or abroad. Seventy per cent of the writing staff has been putting in extra hours supplying sketches and morale material to the OWI or to different writer's agencies allied with war activities. Naturally the 20th Century-Fox personnel was adequately represented in staffing the Hollywood Canteen for Service Men and the players also visited many lonely outposts and invited soldiers and sailors to their homes for Sundays.

Outstanding among the camp tours were those of Laurel and Hardy, who spanned the country and then hopped an Army bomber for a visit to an undisclosed number of bases in the Caribbean. Carole Landis was in London entertaining the soldiers there when this report was written. Linda Darnell, Betty Grable and Ann Rutherford made more than 20 camp visits during the past year.

Outstanding Bond saleswomen were, Ann Rutherford, Betty Grable and Linda Darnell who also gave up their time between pictures to aid the defense drive.

The home office of the 37 branch offices made a record of 95 per cent in the campaigns for the voluntary deduction of 10 per cent for War Bonds from every salary. Many branches were oversubscribed. The scrap drive was signally successful in every exchange as well as in the home office.

Home office employees were given instruction in first aid by Red Cross instructors and advanced courses were held all last Winter for those who wished to qualify as instructors in Red Cross work. Official air raid wardens and Red Cross workers are located in every department.

UNITED ARTISTS' WAR EFFORT

LIKE the United States and the United Nations, United Artists has been at war for a year. And like the free nation and free allies, of which it is a part, UA, representing its segment of the motion picture industry, does not consider this a moment of self-congratulation. The days ahead are the important ones. A review of the past 12 months is useful only as it sets the stage for the contributions that the company, its producers, executives and personnel can make to bring victory closer.

United Artists went to war, step in step with Uncle Sam. Its associated producers immediately included themes vital to the winning of the war, in their schedules. As much as they could—in feature-length productions and in short subjects—they converted the screen into a weapon of war.

America's place on the battle front became a subject for camera treatment. Liaison with our ally, England, brought to American audiences three outstanding British films, each highly expressive of our ally's victory sentiments. Our Chinese allies provided one screen battle cry; Brazil, our sister republic to the South, was brought closer to Americans by the first feature-length picture to come from the Amazon. United Artists personnel entered the service and many are now in action on widely scattered fronts. Its civilian staffs stunted nothing to stimulate salvage, bond, blood and other with-the-war drives.

The proudest feather in UA's cap for the past year is Noel Coward's immortal epic of seagoing courage, In Which We Serve, which took first honors from New York's film critics, won top rating from the National Board of Review, and was heaped with laurels by national magazines and others. Produced, directed, written, scored and acted by Coward, the film proved not only one of the great motion pictures of all time, it served to bind more closely the fighting unity of fighting allies. In the simple story of a destroyer, of its captain, crew and the sweethearts and wives waiting for them in port, America learned to understand what the small man's part in the war can be.

The psychological warfare of underground patriots inspired Edward Small and Leslie Howard to make Mister F., basing its story on the campaigns of the famous Colonel Britton. This was a cinematic tribute to the indomitable courage that saw victory even when it was a fond hope more than a potential perspective—when faith in our eventual triumph had to be widely expressed to break through the gloom of Nazi self-styled invincibility.

The United Nations were beginning to hit back hard when Alexander Korda presented Michael Powell's One of Our Aircraft Is Missing, which also won year-end honors as one of the season's best. The peoples of Europe were no longer supine under a conqueror's heel. The first stirrings of the eventual retribution were coming into evidence, when Powell produced his film story of an RAF crew, forced to parachute to earth over German-held Holland, who were rescued by the anonymous heroes of the Low Countries.

The buoyant history of the Ark Royal, the aircraft carrier that could be sunk only in enemy communiques, provided the basis for another United Artists release, Ships With Wings, one of the earliest war pictures to come from London.

United Artists' news subjects, The World In Action shorts came into being to bring information and entertainment, based on war themes, to moving picture audiences. The horizon which they swept was a global as the war. From Churchill's Island and This Is Blitz, they shifted to Food—Weapon on Conquest, New Soldiers Are Tough, Hitler's Plan, Our Russian Ally, Inside Fighting China, and Behind Nippon's Mask.

But it was not in short subjects alone that UA turned the screen to the service of America's allies. It got wide distribution for Kukan, Battle Cry of China, which was filmed in the battle-scattered interiors of the Asiatic continent. From South America, it acquired the Jules Levey-Mayfair Productions presentation, Jacare, the first feature film ever made in the headwaters of the Amazon. Made as an animal adventure film at the outset, it became, in the soundtrack commentary supplied by Frank "Bring 'Em Back Alive" Buck, a medium of cementing the good-neighborliness of this country and Brazil.

The comedy treatment of war themes were more in prominence during the early part of the year. Then it was that Korda and Ernst Lubitsch satirized the Nazi monster in To Be or Not to Be, the last screen appearance of Hollywood's heroine, Carole Lombard. Small produced Friendly Enemies, a story of the last war, with a point for this one—that divided loyalties have no place in a united America. Hal Roach, his commission as a major in the Army ready to call him into active duty, put the three Axis dictators on a slapstick frying pan in The Devil With Hitler. The Roach studio will soon have ready also Fall In and Nazty Nuisance.

Still to come is Michael Balcon's Somewhere in France, based on a story by J. B. Priestly. This soon-to-be-released film adds another chapter to the screen picture of the war, which UA has been able to provide for America. Somewhere in France adds to the stories of the RAF, the Navy and the civilian fighters the saga of a factory foreman, who braves the Nazis to save vital machinery from falling into their hands. It points an accusing finger at the treachery of many French officials and adds to the screen's gallery of heroic peoples, the indomitable population of France.

From Czechoslovakia, beaten but never surrendering, comes the inspiration for another new United Artists picture, Unconquered, a story of the assassination of "Hangman" Heydrich. Sources close to the Benes government are helping Fritz Lang and Arnold Pressburger to pack the film with authentic excitement of Czech underground resistance.

In another vein, Sol Lesser's Stage Door Canteen will help strengthen the war effort. Its theme, based on the world-famous servicemen's center of the American Theater Wing War Service, Inc., would alone help brighten the morale of men in uniform and of their families at home. The picture, however, in which will appear the greatest galaxy of international stage and screen celebrities ever assembled, will devote the major portion of its receipts to the real-life Canteen and the war charities all over the country. UA feels privileged to go "all-out" for the ideals, which the film will help further.

Aside from its production activities, United Artists personnel have left their desks and cameras, the exchanges and booking charts, to put on their country's colors. Over 30 from the home office are now on active duty with the Army, the Navy, the Marines and Merchant Marine. Included are Monroe Greenthal, formerly director of advertising and publicity, now with the War Production Board, and many others, from executives to office boys.

Listed alphabetically the are Daniel Bren-gel, Thomas J. Cardon, Joseph Clair, James Corrigan, William Daley, Edward Donnelly,
James Fanning, Joseph Gould, George Gounaris, Edward Hannon, Norman Has-selo, Howard Hengstler, Bernard Kamber, Samuel Kreisler, Daniel Low, Daniel Lowry,
Frank Maquill, Walter Oates, Cornelius
O'Brien, John Robinson, Myron Rosenthal,
George Roth, Arthur Sheridan, Abram Sutton, Ray Van Nostrand, Alfred Wilson and Henry White.

Every United Artists exchange also saw some of its staff called up for fighting duty.

Atlanta: Walter B. McDonald, Jr., James
M. Hunter, George L. Denny, Robert L.
Homes.

Boston: Louis Beckman, George Scher.

Charlotte: Clifton Hoover.

Chicago: William M. Levy, William Wirth.
Cincinnati: Milton Turner, Frank Kantz.
Booker Moore.

Cleveland: Edward Dumas, Norman Levin
Dallas: Harlan Dunlap, Roy Sacks, John Schutzius.

Denver: Owen Clough.

Indianapolis: Harry C. Hays.

Los Angeles: Rollin G. Gunderson, Kenneth P. MacKain.

Milwaukee: David Gould.

Minneapolis: Oscar Galanter.

New York: Anthony Agoglia, John Hogan, Myron Starr.

Omaha: George Bonacci.

Philadelphia: Albert Holmstock, Douglas Klein.

Pittsburgh: Melvin Edelstein.

Washington: Leo La Brecque, John Sed-mond.

Wherever possible, the weight of United Artists activity was felt in those programs and actions which concern every American citizen and institution. The drive for War Bonds, with the emphasis on the industry's September concentration, had all United Artists personnel busy oversubscribing the quota set.

Members of its publicity department turned their experience to help the United States Government's film release, *The World
At War*, together with the press departments of the other home offices. Cooperation in the form of press book preparation, script writing, exploitation, etc. was made available for other Government morale shorts.

One thought was more or less in evidence during the first year of the war—to help win
it. The same thought will remain uppermost as UA, like the rest of the country, moves forward to Victory in the second.

UNIVERSAL'S WAR EFFORT

LONG before Pearl Harbor, Universal Pictures went on an alert.

Buck Privates, starring that indefatigable pair, Abbott and Costello, broke the ice for a steady flow of productions keyed to the war effort before and since that fateful December 7.

Universal's prized comics followed with Abbott and Costello's In the Navy and Keep 'Em Flying, working closely with the Navy and War departments, to further clinch preparedness claims. Universal has never relinquished a leading role in the war aims program of the nation.

Acutely conscious of the over-all significance of motion pictures in the war effort, Universal has sometimes anticipated, invariably co-operated with the "all-out" inferences of Hollywood's part in the war effort on all and sundry fronts involving both civilian and armed force objectives.

Many of its stars, prominent among them Abbott and Costello, Deanna Durbin and Charles Boyer, have assumed leadership in camp entertainment tours, war relief drives and War Bond sales. These, with workers in all branches of the studio, home offices and domestic and foreign exchanges, have unhesitatingly volunteered their blood and their physical and mental resources to allied causes in the mobilization of manpower for victory.

Strongly suggestive of the aggregate weight of Universal's contributions to the war against the Axis powers are current features newly in release, in production and actively in preparation at the studio. These hew impressively to the line of the Government's objectives for films allied with the war effort. Classified, they include:

(1) THE ENEMY—The Amazing Mrs. Holliday, encompassing a searching study and dramatic impeachment of the treachery and terrorism practiced by the Japanese enemy in his invasion of China and the Pacific; Nightmare, in which the Atlantic was crossed to isolate a phase of Nazi sabotage as it is carried on within Allied borders for the confusion of convoy services; The Next of Kin, a dramatized British documentary exposing the ramified espionage systematically practiced by the Axis, and by dreadful example, disclosing the horrifying results of heedless dissemination of gossip by both armed and civilian populace.

(2) OUR ALLIES—Corvettes In Action, a filmed-on-the-action-front epic of the North Atlantic, in which the heroic sacrifices and contributions of our Canadian neighbors in the convoy service are realistically exploited; Two Tickets To London, which underscores the gallant fight being waged for and by the Merchant Marine to maintain the flow of vital supplies to Allied battle lines in spite of espionage, sabotage and armed interception by Nazi wolfpacks on the high seas.

(3) THE ARMED FORCES—We've Never Been Licked, a big scale epic glorifying the war contributions of celebrated Texas A. & M. College, the West Point of the West, and its fighting leaders on the ground and in the air over the Pacific battle front.

(4) THE PRODUCTION FRONT—Pittsburgh, wherein is dramatized the behind-the-front drive of chemicals and steel to feed the racing demands of war production and the sacrifices of labor and management in collaborating on the all-out effort for victory in the war.

(5) THE HOME FRONT—Hers to Hold, in which the women of our nation are mirrored in their vital contributions toward keeping critical industry in high production gear; Walter Wanger's Looking For Trouble, which will tell the story of the WAFS—the Women's Auxiliary Ferrying Service—glorifying the heroic feminine flyers who shuttle fighting planes from factory to combat lines and from coast to coast to meet the exigencies of war demands, thus releasing fighter pilots for front line duty.

(6) THE ISSUES—Our United Nations, a dramatic panorama of the aims and purposes of the current war, lucidly setting forth what we are fighting for and against: Flesh and Fantasy, in which the Axis weapons of fear, hatred and superstition are exposed in a production which proposes to key international thought patterns for post-war reconstruction and rehabilitation.

These are among the expanding frontal objectives of Universal Pictures in its wartime program. Obviously some of the productions involve others besides the indicated classification theme in their anxiety to fulfill their moral obligations of providing entertainment of top order while cooperating fully with war aims.

No compilation would be complete, however, without reference to the thematic coherence to the same program of a comprehensive releasing schedule of short subjects in the musical, cartoon and so-called Government shorts classifications.

Both musicals and cartoons assume the obligations of the times, emphasizing stirring, patriotic and morale building themes. Again, many of these, as in the instance of feature productions, cleave to a policy of escapism in fulfilling an entertainment obligation.

Morale shorts among new product include Keeping Fit, which is attuned to the theme of keeping well and in fighting trim at home, and What We Are Fighting For, a dramatized inquiry into the meaning of our Four Freedoms.

As is the case with the other Hollywood studios, Universal is making training films for the War Department.

Both in the broad field of the nation and at home, Universal has been importantly instrumental in the success of a series of "drives." Abbott and Costello amassed an amazing total of $80,000,000 in War Bond sales on their tour last summer. Universal studio personnel puts upwards from $10,000 weekly into War Bonds through payroll deductions and the total for all employee purchases for the year, made through the studio, is expected to substantially cross the million dollar mark.

Various other drives for funds, national and international in scope, have found employees enthusiastic in cooperation and lavish in subscriptions. The Red Cross bank has visited the studio four times and many employees have made contributions each time, the last visit turning out 176 donors.

A Report on

WARNER BROS.' WAR EFFORT

ON DECEMBER 7, 1942, the nation reviewed its efforts in a year of war. There was much yet to be done, but much that was good. Some miracles had been accomplished. Some successes had been won.

On that same date Warner Bros. reviewed not only a year of war but also years of contribution to an understanding of a changing world. For long before Pearl Harbor that studio was deliberately producing a program of pictures that fitted into a type of product urgently wanted by the people as a guide to the times and a realization of the problems confronting every individual.

That the motion picture could be a strong weapon in the dissemination of information through the medium of entertainment had long been recognized. Six separate fields were suggested by the Hollywood representative of the Office of War Information. These were:

1. The Enemy.
2. Our Allies.
3. The Armed Forces.
4. The Production Front.
5. The Home Front
6. The Issues.

Without having consciously established these same six categories, Warner Bros. had released, or had ready for release, a number of pictures which fell readily into the various classifications, and entertainingly were doing the job of distributing information to the theater-going public.

Among these films were Sergeant York, a story of a simple mountaineer, opposed to killing on religious grounds, who eventually come to know that he must fight, kill and even die, for freedom. Confessions of a Nazi Spy and Underground already had displayed, in some measure, the enemy, and his plottings in this country.

Captains of the Clouds told of the magnificent work being done by the Royal Canadian Air Force and Desperate Journey did the same for the RCAF. Across the Pacific, which dealt with Japanese treachery before Pearl Harbor, was one of the first films to depict our Oriental enemies as cold, calculating and ruthless, completely efficient and not at all the near-sighted, weak and stupid enemy who could be "knocked off the map in six weeks."

Wings for the Eagle showed the battle of production, with many scenes filmed inside the giant Lockheed plant where bombers and fighting planes are rolling off the assembly lines. Yankee Doodle Dandy, the life story of George M. Cohan, was as lusty, as exciting and as patriotic as Cohan himself.

These were the pictures Jack L. Warner had assigned for production before Pearl Harbor. Since that day thousands of feet of film have rolled through cameras focused on new and stirring dramas, deliberately fashioned to tell the story of one of the six categories.

In addition, the program of short subjects has been greatly enlarged with patriotic and informative themes the basis of the majority of those made and about to be made. Already General H. H. "Hap" Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces, and Captain Hewitt T. Wheeler, heroic bomber pilot lauded by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in a radio address, have made short subjects.

In the feature field, pictures completed, filming or preparing, in the various categories defined by the office of the Coordinator of Government Films include:

1. THE ENEMY—Edge of Darkness, a story of the Nazi occupation of Norway, the brutal treatment of the Norwegians, and the heroic, never-ending underground movement which, through its sabotage efforts keeps thousands of Nazi troop immobilized in Norway when Hitler needs them badly on fighting fronts. Background to Danger, a fast, action story detailing Nazi intrigue in Turkey and the Near East, and von Papen's attempts to get Turkey into the war on the Nazi side. The Desert Song, a completely modernized version of the famous operetta revolving around the efforts of an American to free the North African Rills from a net of German intrigue.

2. OUR ALLIES—Mission to Moscow, which will be the most important picture to be produced in Hollywood in years. It is the filmization of the book written by former Ambassador to Russia Joseph E. Davies. It was recognized by Jack L. Warner as the perfect story to give the American people a clearer view of the Russian people and their leaders, and to illustrate the reasons back of the amazing Russian success against Hitler's armies. Men Without Country is the story of five French convicts who overpower the captain of a Vichy ship on which they are being returned to an enslaved France.

3. THE ARMED FORCES—Air Force, a tremendous picture made at the suggestion, and through the cooperation, of the Army Air Forces. Star of the film is the Mary Ann, a huge Flying Fortress, which takes off from Sacramento, Calif. on Dec. 6 on a routine training flight to Honolulu. The adventures of the Fortress and her crew, from that day to the present battles around Australia are factually correct and spectacularly exciting.

4. THE PRODUCTION FRONT—Action in the North Atlantic promises to be one of the most exciting films ever put on the screen. Survivors of the crew of a torpedoed tanker re-enlist for additional merchant marine service and find themselves under blazing Nazi attack on their convoy. In this film the great work of the merchant marine sailors receives the recognition it has so gloriously deserved.

5. THE HOME FRONT—Yankee Doodle Dandy, just going into general release, is still in the forefront of patriotic pictures.

But more are coming. Irving Berlin's This is the Army, which has been touring key cities in person, will shortly be put before the cameras with the original cast, including Berlin himself. Warner Bros., which paid $250,000 for the rights, is making the picture entirely without profit to the company, a point insisted on by Harry M. Warner, and his brother, Jack, executive producer at the studio. The Army Emergency Relief Fund will benefit. Brooklyn, U. S. A., a story of Nazi attempts to sabotage the loading of ships; Boy Scouts of America, a patriotic panorama; The Adventures of Mark Twain and The Story of Will Rogers, two great Americans; and The Miracle, particularly significant because of the Nazi attitude toward religion, are all in preparation.

6. THE ISSUES—Watch on the Rhine, film version of the hit play, tells the story of a German refugee family in the United States. Because he wants to make the world a safe place for his children, the father is forced to return to Germany and to the fate which inevitably awaits those helping rescue victims of Nazi tyranny through the underground movement.

This partial list will be expanded as more stories are purchased to fit into one or another of the categories. Naturally, each picture offers genuine motion picture entertainment in its own right, but certain messages and lessons are brought before the theater public in a manner that no other medium can explore.

The short subject field is divided into two outlets. Some of the one and two-reel films are intended for public consumption in the nation's theaters; others are made specifically for various branches of the armed services for use in training newly enlisted and recruited men.

Prior to Pearl Harbor, Warners had made approximately 25 shorts in Technicolor, the patriotic themes of which aroused much favorable comment throughout the country.

Since that date, Warners' short features touch almost every phase of the war effort. There are shorts featuring our armed forces and shorts exposing the enemy and his tactics; there are special shorts made in furtherance of the Good Neighbor Policy toward Latin America; there are the training films, and there are shorts that simply make Americans proud to be Americans.

Already completed are shorts with these significant titles: Service With the Colors, March on Marines, The Tanks Are Coming, Meet the Fleet, Wings of Steel, Here Comes the Cavalry, March on America, Soldiers in White and Men of the Sky, all in Technicolor, and Divide and Conquer and This Is Your Enemy, exposition of totalitarian methods of creating the internal discord which softened up so many European nations for the Nazi hordes.

Others include: A Ship Is Born, Son of an Engineer, Transport Command, Women at War, The Army, Navy and Marines, The Para-Ski Troops, and Flying Nurses, all in Technicolor, and U. S. Army Air Forces Band, U. S. Army Band, U. S. Navy Band, U. S. Service Band, U. S. Marine Band, Spirit of West Point and Spirit of Annapolis.

Outstanding among the shorts made for the Army Air Forces are Beyond the Line of Duty and General Arnold's Speech. The latter, of course, features the chief of the Army Air Forces. Beyond the Line of Duty presents Captain Hewitt T. Wheless and Warner Bros. started preparing it the day after the President told the nation of this daring young bomber pilot's amazing battle against 18 Japs in Zero fighters.

Other shorts made for the Army Air Forces are Winning Your Wings, with Lieutenant James Stewart, made for recruiting purposes; Rear Gunner, with Lieutenants Ronald Reagan and Burgess Meredith; Commandos of the Skies, dealing with glider pilots; Safety in Aviation, I'll Tell You What the Army Air Force is, Takeoffs and Landings, and Thirteen Aces.

Apart from making these films, Warners made up and distributed free to all theaters 500 prints of Winning Your Wings, which played an important part in stimulating Army Air Force enlistments.

Many of Warner Bros.' productions for the armed forces have been major undertakings. Made at the request of the U. S. Army Signal Corps for Army Use, 105 MM. Howitzer is in two sections, one 14 to 16 reels, the other 6 to 8 reels, together the equivalent of two full-length features. Fourteen reels comprise the training films made about the 37-Millimeter Anti-Aircraft Gun. Oxygen in Aviation, produced at the request of the United States Navy and for its use, consists of four reels.

As a part of this program of disseminating information, Warner Bros. has distributed in this country a number of films made by the British Ministry of Information, including Target for Tonight, London Can Take It, and Christmas Under Fire. Profits from distribution of the latter two pictures were turned over by Warners to the Royal Air Force Spitfire Fund to help build more planes to wrest supremacy of the air from the Nazis and planes purchased thereby have fought and are fighting for England.

This is by no means the only instance of financial contribution made by Warner Bros. to give tangible assistance to the cause they are serving in so many other ways. It is estimated that the profits from the film version of This Is the Army will reach many millions and every cent of these profits will go to the Army Emergency Relief Fund.

Four pictures also are to be made for the Committee on Inter-American Affairs—Argentine Horses, South American Sports, Hunter's Paradise, and Cuba—Land of Sports and Adventure.

This cooperation with the Government in making of films is no new, war-born policy for Warner Bros. Since 1930, the studio has permitted several Army officers each year to learn in its Burbank laboratories the technique of developing and handling negative and positive film.

Many hundreds of feet of film of various types have been given by Warners to the Army Signal Corps and other branches of the armed forces for use in pictures they are making. The same courtesy has been extended to those branches of the Interior Department engaged in film production.

Warner Bros. also has turned over its Vitagraph Studios to the Army Air Forces Motion Picture Unit for the duration of the war, rent free, while a great deal of space has been made available for the storing of Red Cross supplies and for offices for Selective Service Headquarters.

Individual members of the personnel of Warner Bros. have been as active in their own contributions to the War effort as they have been collectively under the studio banner. Several hundred are in the Armed forces. The studio was the first to list 95 per cent of its personnel as subscribers to War Bonds through weekly payroll deductions. More than $20,000 worth of bonds and stamps are sold weekly at the studio.

The three premieres of Yankee Doodle Dandy in New York, Los Angeles and London, admission to each of which was gained only through the purchase of bonds valued from $25 to $25,000, brought $15,600,000 into the coffers of the governments of the United States and England. $11,500,000 worth of bonds were sold at the two American premieres.

The studio's stars have contributed much time and talent to bond-selling tours and the camp shows. In addition, Bette Davis and John Garfield conceived and carried through the idea of the Hollywood Canteen, central entertainment spot in the West for service men on leave. Other players entertain, dance and serve as waitresses and bus boys.

Active, also has been the Warner Bros. theater department, playing 52 individual short subjects that have come from Government sources, in addition to collecting approximately $1,000,000 through support of drives for the United Service Organizations, Army Relief, Navy Relief, Red Cross and the March of Dimes.

Historical Highlights of the Motion Picture Industry

1878 In an attempt to prove that a horse's four hoofs leave the ground at one time while running, Leland Stanford, California sportsman and railway magnate, assigns John D. Isaacs, engineer, and Eadweard Muybridge, photographer, to set up a row of cameras and take a series of pictures of a horse in motion. Results prove Stanford's contention, and are probably the first picture analysis of motion.

1887 Thomas A. Edison, casting about for a sight device to tie in with his phonograph, starts William K. L. Dickson at work on a machine to take and view pictures in motion. Early attempts to achieve this goal with a cylinder device, similar to his phonograph, are not successful and they begin experiments with belt or tape devices.

George Eastman, seeking a roll film for his Kodak, begins manufacture of a photographic material with a nitrocellulose base. Edison buys a sample to use in his motion picture device.

By October, Edison and Dickson develop their device and produce an experimental peep-show machine through which one person can view motion pictures.

1891 Edison applies to patent the Kinetoscope and the Kinetographic camera in the United States, but does not think enough of the devices to spend about

$150 to cover them in foreign countries. (The commercial Kinetoscope used the same width film as that used today, but photographed and showed pictures at the rate of 40-odd exposures a second, compared with the present 24 a second rate.)

1893 The first motion picture studio, The Black Maria, is built in West Orange, N. J. by Edison. Structure, built to revolve on a circular rail so as to control the rays of the sun for photographic purposes, cost about $600.

Kinetoscope Co., formed by Norman C. Raff, Thomas R. Lombard and Frank R. Gammon, to exploit Edison's Kinetoscope.

Thomas Armat and C. Francis Jenkins begin experiments with a machine to project motion pictures. Their first effort, the Phantoscope, is not entirely successful.

Lambda Co. formed by Professor Woodville Latham to experiment in motion picture cameras and projectors. (The Latham Loop, enabling longer pictures, resulted.)

1895 Louis and August Lumiere, photographic manufacturers of Lyons, France, purchased one of Edison's Kinetoscopes and, as it is not patented in France, from it develop their own camera—the Cinematographe. By December they have developed this apparatus so that it can be used to photograph, print and project motion pictures. First commercial projection with the Cinematographe in December, is at the Grand Cafe, Paris.

The Lumieres, on perfecting their machine, send several cameramen to travel through Europe photographing and screening motion pictures, thus building up a library of moving picture subjects. (The Lumiere machine established the photographic rate of 16 images a second, which was standard until sound made it necessary to increase the speed.)

Meanwhile, Armat, following the partial failure of his and Jenkins' Phantoscope, goes on with projection experiments alone. Mid-year he discovers the principle of the modern projector, the movement which gives each picture a period of rest and illumination in excess of the period of movement from image to image, and is able to show motion pictures in Atlanta during September.

1896 Pressure being brought on Edison to provide a projector for his Kinematograph subjects; he has little interest in the proposition, but finally agrees to market the Armat machine under the Edison name. Device renamed the Vitascope, has its first public showing at Koster & Bial's Music Hall, Herald Square, New York, on the night of April 23.

Dickson, in the meantime, has left the Edison fold and after a stay with the Lathams joins E. B. Koopman, H. N. Marvin and Herman Casler of the K.M.C.D. Syndicate to develop the photographic side of the Mutoscope, a card wheel peep-show, and the American Biograph, a projector using a wider film than the Edison devices. First public projection of the Biograph is at Hammerstein's Music Hall in November.

In London, Robert W. Paul demonstrates a projector at the Royal Institute on Feb. 28.

With projection comes censorship. Del-orita's "Passion Dance" is banned in Atlantic City, N. J.

George Melies, French magician, builds a studio near Paris. (The French hail Melies as the creator of the motion picture art because of his use of make-up, stage settings and artificial lighting, and because his films were the first to attempt a real story.)

1897 Utilizing the "Latham Loop," a method to supply slack film to the intermittent motion of the camera, Enoch Rector is able to photograph an 11,000 foot wide film version of the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight at Carson City, Nev.—by far the longest picture made.

In Pittsburgh, John P. Harris and Harry Davis open the first Nickelodeon.

Legal wars (that for years retarded motion picture development) are started in December with Edison's series of patent infringement suit. His chief adversary is the American Mutoscope and Biograph Co., with Wall Street backing.

1898 Rich G. Hollaman, of the Eden Musee, produces the first staged motion picture. In an attempt to beat out Klaw & Erlanger who have authentic shots of the Horitz Passion Play. Hollaman stages a synthetic version on the roof of Grand Central Palace. Although the hoax is exposed, Hollaman has produced the first fictionized picture.

1900 J. Stuart Blackton, Albert Edward Smith and William Rock incorporate Vitagraph with $6,000 capital.

1902 First "Electric Theater," charging 10 cents admission, opened in Los Angeles by Thomas L. Talley.

Melies produces "A Trip to the Moon," later duped by many U. S. distributors.

1903 Up to this time motion picture audiences have been satisfied with practically anything that would move on a screen, but are especially pleased with thrill scenes. Edwin S. Porter, an Edison cameraman, noticing this reaction decides to stage pictures for the screen. His first attempt at realistic story telling is "The Life of an American Fireman," an instantaneous success. Following comes "The Great Train Robbery," a one-reeler with sustained suspenseful plot.

1905 The Warner brothers, Harry Albert, Sam and Jack, buy a projector and a print of "The Great Train Robbery" and go into the roadshow exhibition field.

Carl Laemmle opens his first theater, in Chicago.

William Fox, in association with Sol Brill, buys his first arcade and film theater.

1907 Exterior shots for William N. Selig's "The Count of Monte Cristo" are shot in Los Angeles—first Coast production.

Essanay Film Manufacturing Co. organized in Chicago by George K. Spoor and G. M. Anderson.

1908 On Dec. 18, the 11 year war between Edison and Biograph comes to an end with both companies in equal positions of leadership. To insure their control of the industry, Edison and Biograph, with George Kleine, Vitagraph, Lubin, Selig, Essanay, Pathe, Kalem and Melies, form the Motion Picture Patents Company and institute a system of cross-licensing.

Bison Life Motion Pictures formed by Adam Kessel, Charles Bauman, Fred Balshofer and Louis Burston.

Mary Pickford joins Biograph.

National Board of Censorship of Motion Pictures (later National Board of Review) formed by the People's Institute.

1910 The General Film Co., an outgrowth of the Patents Co., is formed by Jeremiah J. Kennedy, representing the Empire Trust Co., holder of Biograph mortgage bonds, and soon has control of most of the 100 exchanges in the U. S. and Canada.

D. W. Griffith starts a policy of producing in Los Angeles during the Eastern cold months.

American Pathe starts production in Bound Brook, N. J.

1912 John R. Freuler and Harry E. Aitken form Mutual Film Corp., taking in a number of independent exchanges.

Universal Film Manufacturing Co. formed by Carl Laemmle and associates, acquires an exchange system.

These companies, along with William Fox and others, are the leaders in a strong fight against the trust—the Patents Co. First signal victory of the independents is in the decision of Fox vs. the trust, in which an injunction forcing the Patents Co. to give film to the Fox exchange is granted.

Adolph Zukor, operating theaters in New York, imports "Queen Elizabeth," a four-reel picture starring Sarah Bernhardt. Out of this move is the formation of Famous Players Film Co., which includes in its personnel: Zukor, Edwin S. Porter, Elek J. Ludwig, Daniel Frohman and Al Lichtman. Famous distributes "Queen Elizabeth" as a road show, then on a state rights basis, and then goes into production for itself. Patent Co. members object to Famous' long features and the company is forced to go "independent."

1913 Box Office Attractions is formed by William Fox as a national distributor.

George Kleine imports "Quo Vadis," an eight-reeler, from Italy and plays it at the N. Y. Astor at $1.00.

George Loane Tucker, with the assistance of Jack Colin, Herbert Brenon, King Baggot and Bob Daily, produces "Traffic in Souls"—first "sex" picture—for Universal. Film costs $5,700 and grosses about $450,000.

Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Co., capital $26,500, formed by Arthur Friend, Samuel Goldwyn and Cecil B. deMille. First film produced by the new company is "The Squaw Man," starring Dustin Farnum, and produced at the famous Lasky Barn (which still stands on the Paramount Coast lot.)

D. W. Griffith joins Mutual Film Corp. with the understanding he can do some producing on his own account.

1914 Under the leadership of W. W. Hodkinson, Western exchange-men, Paramount Pictures Corp. is formed by Hodkinson, Hiram Abrams of Boston, William L. Sherry of New York, Raymond Pawley of Philadelphia and James Steele of Pittsburgh. Company to advance funds for production and release the product of Famous Players, Lasky and Bosworth.

Strand Theater, New York, first "deluxe" house, opened.

Mack Sennett produces "Billie's Punctured Romance," with Charlie Chaplin and Marie Dressler—first feature length comedy.

1915 "The Birth of a Nation," produced by D. W. Griffith, opens in Los Angeles under the title "The Clansman"; March 3, the film opens at the Liberty, N. Y., at $2.00.

PROGRESS

Universal, with augmented creative resources in its entire Studio organization, confidently looks forward to its responsibilities in maintaining a consistency in producing boxoffice pictures.

Universal's record in the last five years not only represents an achievement, but a challenge to its own ability to surpass the high standards of the past

We join with the entire industry in accepting, as our Number One responsibility, the furthering of cooperation with our Government in whatever way possible to aid in the war effort.

Secondly, we accept our responsibility in making the most entertaining pictures that we can, so that we may do our part in keeping up the traditions of this great industry.
