INTRODUCTION

THE present Catalogue deals with a relatively small but exceedingly important section of the manuscript material in the University Library, namely, the western mediæval manuscripts.

It is a section which, in the absence of any complete catalogue, even in the Library itself, has remained comparatively unknown to students; and its value as a whole can scarcely have been realised even by those to whom many of the individual books have long been familiar.

So far the only printed catalogues of the western manuscripts in the Library¹ have dealt exclusively with the Laing Collection and with the purely historical part of it, to the neglect of an important section of that Collection itself as well as of the whole of the manuscript material which has been gathered together from time to time from other sources. That much valuable material has thus remained practically inaccessible will naturally be deplored by students. It cannot, in strict honesty, be regretted by the cataloguer, whose task has thereby been rendered more of an adventure than can often be hoped for in an age when historical research has become an industry, and unexplored regions in any field are rare.

Before attempting any generalisations as to the nature of the Collection, something must be said regarding the scope of the Catalogue. The term 'mediæval' in this connection is a general one, of wide reference, not susceptible of exact definition in terms of date. Under it have been included all manuscripts written before 1500, and about sixteen belonging to the sixteenth century.

Report on the Laing Manuscripts preserved in the University of Edinburgh (Hist. Manuscripts Commission), vol. i, 1914.

Most of these last are of a liturgical character, their inclusion making the Catalogue, in respect of liturgical manuscripts, complete. One or two others are included which, like the well-known ms. of Fordun's History, seem to belong properly to the mediæval period. It cannot, however, be pretended that the division is entirely satisfactory.

As to the history of the manuscripts prior to their acquisition, particulars of early provenances as well as of later sources and owners, as far as they have been traced, have been tabulated (pp. xxvii-xxxii), with interesting results. A considerable number of monastic and church libraries on the Continent are represented, notably the Benedictine and Carthusian monasteries at Erfurt, from which there are no fewer than eight manuscripts; there are English books from Bury St. Edmunds, Reading, Syon, and St. Osyth's Priory at Chich in Essex; and an unusually large proportion of books from Scottish libraries, including Aberdeen, Coupar-Angus, Dunkeld, Elgin, Kinloss, Scientes, Sweetheart and Inchcolm. The list of private owners is a long one, containing not a few names of original owners. Both lists afford interesting material for the reconstruction of the contents-lists of ancient libraries now dispersed.

The books fall naturally into two main divisions when we come to consider the ways in which they were acquired. Rather more than half—121 in all—belong to the Laing Collection which was bequeathed to the University in 1878. The remainder, to the number of 109, have been variously acquired by the Library in the course of its history.

It would be superfluous here to attempt any appreciation of David Laing as a man or as a scholar and antiquary. For those interested it is sufficient to refer to Mr. Gilbert Goudie's recent delightful Memoir.¹ But it is impossible that any one could become really familiar with these manuscripts, which are but a small part of his vast collection, without receiving impressions of the many-sided personality of their owner, and realising and reaffirming the magnitude of the debt under which he has laid the University by his munificent gift.

Few men have enjoyed more abundant opportunities than Laing of amassing such a collection. In early years, and indeed long after he had given up his business as antiquarian bookseller, he regularly attended book sales and visited libraries all over this country and on the Continent, establishing connections which his position as librarian and his interests as a scholar and collector subsequently strengthened and extended. There is much material in the records of his life from which we can gain a general idea of how his manuscripts were acquired. One could wish, in the interests of students, that this had been supplemented by more definite information concerning particular books. It would be interesting, for example, to discover whether any large proportion of the Continental manuscripts were acquired during his frequent tours on the Continent, and even more significant to find any notes which would throw light upon the history of the fragments, some of which are of great value. With the exception, however, of the briefest record in one or two books of the sales at which they were bought, practically no direct evidence of this kind is forthcoming.

In the case of the other manuscripts, evidence as to their acquisition is equally difficult to obtain, the scantiness of library records for certain periods making it impossible, in many cases, to discover the source from which they came.

The Clement Little Collection, which became the nucleus of the whole Library in 1584, contains no manuscripts; the Drummond Collection, presented in 1626, includes only one belonging to the mediæval period. We know, however, that the Sciennes manuscript was acquired as early as 1593, and the first complete catalogue, made in 1636, mentions five others. From its foundation, and especially during the librarianship of William Henderson, as the Donation Book of 1667-85 testifies, the Library received frequent gifts and legacies from graduates, professors, officials and students, and also from certain merchants and citizens interested in their 'Town's College,' or desirous of obtaining the privilege of using the Library. This privilege, by a rule made in 1636, was not to be granted to any 'who had not been educate within the said College, before first they give in some new book to the Library.'¹ Robert Henderson's Catalogue of 1697 contains twenty-three mediæval manuscripts, that of 1767 thirty-one. The first attempt at a separate catalogue of manuscripts is a scroll list in the hand of David Laing, made probably in 1825, when he was entrusted with the arduous but congenial task of examining, repairing, and rearranging the books in the new Library building.² It contains only thirty-six which fall within the scope of this Catalogue, so that fully two-thirds of the mediæval collection must have been acquired after 1825. By this time the practice of presenting manuscripts had apparently practically ceased—all but four of the donors mentioned in the list (p. xxvii) belong to the period 1650-1700—and, so far as we know, the rest of the books were acquired by purchase. In 1846 a fixed sum of £400 per annum was set aside from the Reid Bequest for additions to the Library, 'and was laid out on fine and costly books under the advice of Principal Lee.'³ The greater number of the manuscripts must have been purchased under this grant. A considerable number, including all the Erfurt MSS. and a number of other German books, contain descriptive notices from sale catalogues undated but belonging to this period. Twelve came from the collection of James Erskine, Lord Barjarg and Alva (d. 1796), which appears to have been sold in behoof of his grandson and heir, James Erskine, between 1840 and 1850. Of these the Library possesses a hand list made by David Laing, while in the Laing Collection there is a 'Press Catalogue of

Lord Alva's Library.' Three manuscripts have been presented since 1912.

Regarding the nature of the collection and its special points of interest, these are naturally determined largely by the particular interest of the student. It may, however, be useful to record here certain general conclusions.

If we include fragments, the manuscripts range in date from the 10th to the 16th century, and offer examples of Scottish, English, French, Italian, Flemish, Dutch, German, Swedish and Norwegian script and decoration. Italian manuscripts are specially numerous, and there is a good representation of 12th century work. A fair number of the books are signed by the scribes, and, by comparison with a manuscript in the possession of Mr. S. C. Cockerell, it has been possible to identify one unsigned manuscript as the work of Antonius Salandus of Reggio.

In preparing the Catalogue the MSS. have been arranged according to their subject-matter. I append at this point an outline of the scheme of classification, both as a guide to those using the book and as offering the best indication of the range of subjects covered in the collection and of the proportion in which the different classes are represented.

The arrangement is as follows :

I. Biblical MSS.—Bibles; parts of the Bible; Bible Histories; the versified Bible of Petrus de Riga; Lives of our Lord, the Blessed Virgin Mary, and other saints—in all 23 MSS.

II. Liturgical MSS.—Antiphoner; Breviaries; Directories; Grails; Horae; Martyrology; Missals; Pontificals; Psalters; Combined Services; Private Prayer Books—in all 43 MSS.

III. Theology.—Apocryphal; Commentaries; General; Moral; Mystical; Sermons; Patristic; Miscellaneous—in all 48 MSS.

IV. Philosophy.—General; Astronomy, including Alchemy and Astrology; Logic; Rhetoric; Grammar—in all 25 MSS.

V. Law.—Canon Law; Constitutions of Religious Orders; Civil Law; Common Law; Constitutions of Knightly Orders and Secular Institutions—in all 27 MSS.

VI. Medicine.—15 MSS.

VII. History.—17 MSS.

VIII. Literature.—Classical; Mediæval—10 MSS.

IX. Books partly in Manuscript.—2.

X. Fragments.—Biblical; Liturgical; Theological; Philosophical; Legal; Historical; Literature; Miscellaneous—41 separate items, and one miscellaneous bundle.

XI. Greek MSS..—Appendix I, contributed by Mr. Tillyard, containing notes on 12 Greek mss.—Biblical; Liturgical; Philosophical; Legal.

Exceptions to this arrangement are Nos. 205-208, which were added later.

Within these classes manuscripts are arranged according to—

(a) Provenance.—In the order, Scottish, English, French, Italian, Spanish [?], Flemish or Dutch, German, Swedish, Norwegian.

(b) Date.

This classification is not in any sense exact; many books contain a large number of items on a variety of subjects and their place is not always easy to determine. Further classification has, therefore, been attempted in the index.

From the analysis it will at once appear that, as in all mediæval collections, there is a great preponderance of religious literature. The proportion of secular books is fairly good, however, especially in philosophy, law, medicine, and history. Literature—strictly so called—both classical and mediæval, is poorly represented.

The liturgical manuscripts form the most important and certainly the most beautiful and attractive part of the whole collection, and they give to the University the distinction of possessing a larger number of manuscript service-books than any other institution in Scotland. The newly found Celtic Psalter, if it be Scottish, is actually the earliest Scottish service-book now in Scotland, and the second earliest known to exist, while the Inchcolm fragment is the oldest extant piece of Church music written north of the Border.

Of Missals there are four, not of great importance, though one is of interest as having been written, as Mr. Dewick gives reasons for believing, for the Collegiate Church of St. Peter at Lille. It is small, neatly written in the early 16th century, and seems to follow the Use of Tournai. A 14th century Italian Carthusian Missal is almost exactly like the earlier printed Missals of that Order, and another Missal of slightly later date, written for an Italian House of Grey Friars, hardly differs from the Roman Missal of 1474 except in having more and fuller rubrics. A large Missal containing the ordinary and canon with the proper of a few more important masses was written for Pierre de Lancrau, Bishop of Lombès (1561-98). Lombès was a suffragan see of Toulouse. As in the case of other small sees in that province, no printed diocesan Missal is mentioned by Weale,¹ and it is possible that the rite may be that of the metropolitan church of Toulouse.

The Breviaries are more interesting, and include two important and fairly early manuscripts of Sarum Use, written and used in England, and subsequently used in Scotland. Both belong to the early part of the 14th century and are 'Portasses,' or Breviaries with abridged lessons. One, written perhaps for the Chichester district, shows considerable variation from the normal Sarum type as represented by the printed books, and it has some noteworthy rubrics, one of which refers to liturgical reforms carried out by Bishop Giles [i.e. Giles of Bridport; Bishop of Salisbury 1257-62], and distinguishes between the old and new Uses of Sarum. A collect of St. Moluoc, added in a late hand at the end, shows that the book was eventually used in Scotland.

The other Sarum Breviary follows the more normal type and hardly varies at all from the printed Portasses. It must have been brought to Scotland not so very long after it was written, as it contains portions of a chronicle of Scottish history from 1056-1401, and some historical material in the Kalendar added by 14th and 15th century hands. Several Scottish saints' names are also added to the Kalendar, with the Dedication of Aberdeen Cathedral on 3rd November, indicating ownership at Aberdeen. In the 15th century a procession and mass for Corpus Christi, noted, were added, as well as metrical service for St. Kentigern at the end in another hand.

Another Breviary, unfortunately imperfect, was written in the 15th century for Angers; one written for Augustinian canons at Zon, in the Netherlands, and two Diurnals—one Franciscan of Italy, the other for Dominicans in Bohemia—complete the Breviaries, though there are other books containing separate parts of the divine service, notably a fine Cistercian Collectar written in the 14th century apparently for Perugia, as well as the Psalters and Horae and the large choir books.

The last are five in number. Of these the finest is a magnificent 15th century Dutch Grail in its original binding, with beautifully wrought 'latten' clasps, hinges, corners, and bosses, written for a convent of Augustinian canonesses, presumably of the Windesheim congregation which followed the Use of Utrecht.¹ A later hand has altered it to the unreformed Roman rite, but likewise for a Dutch House of nuns, as the revising hand has also added the 'proper' for the clothing of a nun. Three larger and somewhat coarser manuscripts are Italian, and include an Antiphoner of Roman Use written late in the 15th century; a Nocturnal Psalter of the early 16th century containing the psalms for the first three days of the week; and a 15th century Benedictine Psalter written for an Italian House. These are all choir books of large size.² There is also a quite small Carthusian Grail of the late 14th century, originally belonging to a convent of St. Margaret, but afterwards given by the prior of Basle to Ittingen.

Aubertus Miraeus, Bruxellensis. Cologne, 1614.

² In the Public Library, Edinburgh, there are three large choir books which compare interestingly with these, namely, a fine Italian Grail of the 14th century belonging to a monastic House (No. 32746); an Antiphoner of the 15th century written for a church in the Rhine district dedicated to St. Alban (No. 32747); and a very late Cistercian Antiphoner of the monastery of Aivières near Liège (No. 32748).

Celtic book already briefly referred to as possibly the earliest Scottish service-book now in this country, and the second earliest known to exist. The earliest of all is, of course, the Book of Deer, which is now in Cambridge. The Psalter in question is a small book, written in the 11th century, containing the Hebrew version of the psalms with the triple division common in Celtic books, but without canticles. The frontispiece shows a facsimile in colour of an ordinary page of the Psalter, and Plate xv (p. 101) shows the only fully illuminated page which remains in its original form. I am greatly indebted to Professor W. M. Lindsay for his notes upon the date of the script, which he permits me to print as an Appendix (App. III). Scottish provenance cannot be claimed with absolute certainty in the absence of sufficient tests for the script and of any mark of ownership earlier than the 16th century, when it was in Aberdeen, but there is every probability that, like the Coupar-Angus Psalter, it was written at a Celtic monastery in Scotland.

Of ordinary mediæval Psalters there are five besides the large 'noted' ones already mentioned. One, of the 14th century, is shown by its Kalendar to have been written for the neighbourhood of Worcester; a small one, most beautifully written and full of delicately illuminated borders, seems to have been made for London in the 15th century; and another, somewhat larger, of no special beauty, is important because its very full Kalendar points to its having been written for the famous Brigittine House of Syon, near Isleworth, on the Thames. A fine 13th century Flemish Psalter has curious illuminations of a very characteristic type, and there is a small Dutch Psalter of the 15th century.

The Scottish Martyrology is well known; it has been partly described in the Proceedings of the Society of Antiquaries, Scotland (vol. ii, pt. 2), and some of its contents have been printed in Forbes's Kalendars of Scottish Saints. It was undoubtedly written for Elgin Cathedral, and is headed 'Martyrologium secundum usum Ecclesie Aberdonensis,' showing that the claim of Aberdeen to have a diocesan Use was not confined to the printed Aberdeen Breviary, and that that Use was followed in the diocese of Moray. As a manuscript it is distinctly coarse, though it has a certain boldness. The illumination—if such it can be called—is poor and amateurish to the point of being grotesque. The book is of very late date.

Another late Scottish book of mediocre quality, the Dunkeld Music Book, is interesting as forming a companion volume to the Scone Antiphoner in the Advocates' Library.¹ The claim of these two books to be 'the earliest books of church music of Scottish composition,' is now superseded by the Inchcolm fragment shortly to be described.

Two Benedictine books of late date may perhaps be mentioned: an Ordinale for the Abbey of Ottenburg in Swabia, and an Order of Consecration for a nun of the monastery of St. Michael in Campanea, Verona.

The splendid series of Books of Hours includes what is perhaps the most beautiful book in Scotland, namely, a magnificent English Horae, of Sarum Use, known as the St. Katherine Book of Hours, because a hymn of St. Katherine has been added on a fly-leaf at the beginning. It is of unusually large size, and the execution of both writing and illumination is of the finest quality. The ornaments and miniatures are very characteristic of the best English work of the time.

Of more local interest is a rather coarsely written and poorly illuminated manuscript of Sarum Use that is almost certainly a Scottish Book of Hours, although a rubric claims that it is secundum usum Anglie, and a Kalendar has been bound with it that seems to have been written for Rochester. The miniatures are peculiar, and show that strange mixture of styles which is noticeable in other Scottish manuscripts. It contains the horae de sca. niniane, with a picture of the saint holding fetters just as he is represented in the 15th century painted panelling at Fowlis Easter, and there is a curious vernacular rubric about an indulgence.

Another Book of Hours with Scottish connection is a fine piece of French work, probably executed at Rouen, with a few Scottish names in a very crowded Kalendar and many good French miniatures. The catchwords of a Memoria of St. Ninian, now cut out, show further Scottish influence. The Use is that of Sarum. Of two other Sarum Horae, one was written in France, perhaps with a view to Lincoln, and is a fine book, while the other is a poor specimen of English early 15th century work that was used in Yorkshire.

The Horae of foreign Uses include an exceptionally beautiful book of Sens Use, a very fine one of Utrecht Use with a Cologne Kalendar, an Italian Renaissance example of the work of Antonius Salandus, written about 1503 for the Manzoli family of Bologna, a richly illuminated Toul book with the arms of Anne of Brittany, and a rather coarsely illuminated but interesting book containing the arms of the Génévois families of Viry and Des Clets quartered and showing close connection with the Abbey of St. Claude at Condat. Others of less account include a poor Paris Horae, two Flemish books connected with St. Omer, an Italian book written for the Florentine family of the Nobili, and a curious example written apparently for the Schleswig-Holstein district.

Of the fragments twenty-eight are liturgical, two being as early as the 11th century. One of these—a fragment of a Sacramentary (probably Gregorian), containing part of the Temporale for the Sundays after Christmas, and three leaves from a very full Common of Martyrs and Confessors—is of great importance. Three fragments of the 12th century—two from Grails and one from a noted Missal—are interesting as examples of early musical notation in neums. But perhaps the most notable discovery of all among the fragments is that of the four leaves from an Antiphoner containing the proper of the feast of St. Columba (with an octave) and of Corpus Christi, written, as Mr. Eeles has shown, for Inchcolm about 1340, and therefore, as has been stated, the earliest piece of Church music known to have been written in Scotland. The services of St. Columba are quite new, there being no octave in any existing breviary used in Scotland, and the whole is a valuable addition to Scottish liturgical texts.

In addition to books classified and described in the liturgical section there are a number of liturgical items in other manuscripts. The Evangeliarium of Sciennes Nunnery contained in the manuscript of the Constitutions is already printed.¹ Of local interest also is the Kalendar in the Astronomical ms. of 1482 from Coupar-Angus Priory, and a Kalendar of Linköping in the Swedish Law Book (ms. 159).

Biblical manuscripts are fairly numerous, and although there is nothing comparable in beauty with the two magnificent 13th century Bibles in the Advocates' Library, several of the books are notable. The Gospel Book of St. Matthias Abbey, Trier, of the 11th century, is finely written, and its decoration, if somewhat crude, is bold and effective; there is a manuscript of the New Testament written in the 13th century in North Italy and used in Aquileja, with an interesting Kalendar containing extremely spirited illustrations of an early type; while two French manuscripts are worthy of special mention, a copy of St. Paul's Epistles written about 1300 for the Abbey of St. Ruf, Valence, and a very profusely illuminated Bible Historial, dated 1314. Of less account artistically, though a well-written book, is a small Bible written, as we are told in a colophon, for Otto Lonsdorf, Bishop of Passau (1254-65).

Of the remaining sections it is scarcely necessary to speak in such detail. From the point of view of decoration the service-books and bibles are naturally the most interesting, although quite a number of the other manuscripts are artistically noteworthy. Among these I should place two English manuscripts of the 12th century—a beautifully written medical book from Bury St. Edmunds,¹ and a fine copy of the works of St. Anselm bearing the inscription of St. Mary's, Reading;¹ a magnificent manuscript of the Etymologiae of St. Isidore of Seville, which, from the colophon,¹ I take to have been written and probably illuminated near Metz; and two 15th century books—a beautifully illustrated Italian copy of the De Veritate of St. Thomas Aquinas, written by Philippus de Homodeis at Vigevano in the province of Naples in 1466, and a magnificent Virgil, written about the same time in Paris by a scribe calling himself 'Florius Infortunatus,'¹ with finely conceived and delicately painted miniatures full of exquisite detail. This book seems to have been executed for a Scottish owner, whose initials P. L. united by a lover's knot are incorporated twice in one of the borders together with the arms of James III of Scotland.²

Very little of the material in this part of the collection is unprinted. Only three items call for special mention in this connection. The first, entitled Royal Letter Book (ms. 183), is a valuable collection of precedents for letters extracted from the official correspondence of Richard II and Henry IV. It contains copies of letters issuing under the Privy Seal and the Signet, and of letters received by the king from abroad, which were thought useful as models of style. Many of the letters are important for their contents, and all are valuable as examples of 'styles' of the period. The Royal Historical Society proposes shortly to print the volume in the Camden Series.

The second is the fragmentary chronicle of Scottish history already referred to, which is written on the fly-leaves and margins of the breviary used in Aberdeen (ms. 27). It extends from 1056-1401, and the earlier portion, from the accession of Malcolm Canmore to the death of Alexander I, is identical with the

Chronicle of Melrose. The remainder, however, seems to be an independent record kept presumably by the canons of Aberdeen, which, while it adds nothing to our knowledge of the period, is nevertheless not taken directly from any of the extant chronicles. It is printed in Appendix iv.

The third is also part of a chronicle, one of the interesting discoveries made among the fragments. It consists of two leaves from a 14th century manuscript of a vernacular version in verse of the prose Chronicle of Guillaume le Breton, dealing with the reign of Philip Augustus. The period actually covered by the verses extends from the battle of Bouvines to the retreat of Prince Louis from England in 1217. They do not appear to be part of any poem which has survived, but there is evidence of the existence of two chronicles or 'romans' of the reign of Philip Augustus —le livre du roy Philippe le Conquérant rymé, several copies of which were in the library of Charles v,¹ and a 'roman' of Jehan de Prunai, based apparently upon Guillaume le Breton, and used by Guillaume Guiart as material for his poem *La Branche des Royaux Lignages*² in 1306, both of which have since been lost. Nothing is known of either save that they existed, but it is quite legitimate to suppose that the fragments are part of one of them, more probably of the work of Jehan de Prunai.³

In regard to provenance something has already been said in general, and particular points have emerged in relation to certain manuscripts. In conclusion, it seems fitting, in dealing with an Edinburgh library, to make special reference to Scottish mss. As in the liturgical section, these are of two kinds—books written in Scotland or by Scottish hands, and books which have been used in Scotland from an early period.

To the seven liturgical or partly liturgical manuscripts or fragments already noted as having been written in Scotland, only six from the other sections may be added with any certainty: namely, three 15th century copies of the Regiam Majestatem, a very poor manuscript of the Compendium Theologicae Veritatis, which belonged to Robert Ferguson, Prior of Dunfermline in 1530, the 'Makculloch ms.', actually written in Louvain but by a Scottish hand, and the well-known 'Colville' ms. of Fordun, the only one of the six which has any claim to artistic merit.

Of books known to have been used in Scotland from the 16th century and earlier, in addition to the two 15th century books written in France for Scottish owners, and the two Sarum breviaries, all already noted, there are three medical manuscripts—a small treatise of Petrus de Musandia, written in the 12th century, possibly in Scotland, and owned in the 13th century by Gerardus de Hammont, Canon of St. Andrews; a fine 13th century manuscript of Avicenna, possibly written for Scotland, and owned in the early 16th century successively by a bishop of Orkney and an abbot of Soulseat;¹ and a Dutch manuscript which belonged to Archbishop Schevez. A 14th century astronomical book (ms. 125), which may also be by a Scottish hand, was in the possession of the Stirlings of Keir in the 16th century, and two theological manuscripts—a 12th century copy of St. Gregory's Dialogues, much damaged, and a miscellaneous collection—bear 15th century inscriptions of Sweetheart Abbey and Kinloss Abbey respectively.¹

Most of these are manuscripts of more than average merit, and if three or four of them, as is not impossible, were written in Scotland, they would appreciably raise the standard of Scottish work in the Library. But, in general, it must be admitted that, as far as the evidence here goes, after the Celtic period Scottish books show marked inferiority in execution and no originality in style, bearing out the conclusion—not really challenged by any extant examples so far as I know—that book writing and decoration was never a native art in Scotland. Beautiful books were apparently not altogether uncommon, but these, like the Virgil and the Franco-British Book of Hours, came from abroad, chiefly from France and England. Scottish craftsmen were content to copy them, and produced a somewhat inferior mixture of styles, frequently recognisable from the hybrid character of the work.

In concluding these preliminary notes on the Collection, it will be necessary to give some explanation of the method employed in the actual description of the manuscripts. Here I have found Dr. James's wonderful series of catalogues of the Cambridge libraries of invaluable assistance, and I have tried to follow closely the method adopted there.

The description includes particulars as to language, material, size (in inches), number of leaves and of columns to a page, date, origin, binding, collation (i.e. structure), contents, provenance (in detail), writing and illumination.

In the 'Collation' quires or gatherings are lettered from a to z, and then from A to Z, omitting the letters j, u, and w. In the few cases where the double alphabet does not suffice, gatherings are numbered throughout instead. The index number indicates the number of leaves to each gathering. The expression a¹² (wants 6) means that 'a' has lost its 6th leaf; b¹⁰ (+7) indicates that the 7th leaf of 'b' has been added.

Except in the case of biblical manuscripts proper and liturgical books, the 'Contents' contain the title, the opening and closing words of each section, and colophons where they occur. Under the heading 'Provenance' is grouped all the information I was able to collect, both as to source and later history. Under 'Writing and Illumination' I have attempted to give a general idea of the appearance of the manuscripts in all cases, and to describe pictures in detail. It has fortunately been possible to include a representative series of illustrations which give a very much better idea of the appearance of the books than any verbal description can possibly do.

There are many omissions throughout the volume. In particular I regret that so many treatises still remain unidentified, and so many problems connected with the books unsolved. At the best, however, such a catalogue as this must always remain unfinished—a starting-point for other workers in many fields, rather than a final achievement in any. As such it is offered, and for its errors and imperfections I make my apology in the words of one of the scribes, 'Nunc finem feci, penitet me si male scripsi.'

In compiling the Catalogue I have received much valuable help, for which I desire to record my gratitude, as well as a great deal of indirect inspiration and assistance, which it is not possible in the same way to acknowledge.

I have already spoken of Professor Lindsay's notes upon the script of the Celtic Psalter which form one of the Appendices. Another valuable Appendix upon the Heraldry of certain of the manuscripts has been contributed by Mr. A. Van de Put of the Victoria and Albert Museum, and I am also greatly indebted to Mr. H. J. W. Tillyard for his notes upon twelve Greek manuscripts which my ignorance of Greek made it impossible for me to include. These have been printed as an Appendix, but numbered continuously with the rest of the manuscripts. The Rev. E. S. Dewick has very kindly helped me in regard to one or two difficult liturgical questions.

The debt which I owe to Mr. F. C. Eeles is greater than I can possibly express. During the past year he has devoted much time to the study of the liturgical manuscripts in the Library, and from the first he has taken the greatest interest in everything connected with the preparation of this Catalogue. In every possible way he has permitted me to draw upon his knowledge and experience, which, in respect of Scottish liturgical matters, is unique. Under his guidance a considerable part of the work upon the liturgical section was revised and amplified, while he himself contributed the descriptions of liturgical pictures and almost all the notes on liturgical fragments. In addition he most kindly undertook the very arduous task of reading the proofs.

I gratefully acknowledge the unfailing kindness and courtesy of the Library officials, and particularly of the librarian, Mr. F. C. Nicholson, who has from the beginning and in every possible way facilitated the work.

Finally, I desire to record the generosity of the Carnegie Trust for the Universities of Scotland and of the University Court. The work has been done during the tenure of a Carnegie Research Fellowship, supplemented by successive grants made jointly by the Trust and by the University Court. Special grants were made by the Court for the publication of the Catalogue, and by the Trust for the illustration of the volume.

CATHERINE R. BORLAND.

CATALOGUE OF MANUSCRIPTS

1. BIBLIA SACRA.

D. b. III. 1.

Latin, vellum, $8\frac{5}{8}'' \times 6\frac{1}{8}''$, ff. 399, double columns (except in the Psalter, which is single, with space left for gloss or another version, and Hab. iii, which has 3 columns), 50-60 lines to a page. Cent. xiii, English or French. Binding: Modern.

2 f. videlicet

Collation. a¹²—m¹², n⁸, o¹², p¹¹, q¹²—I¹², K¹⁰, L¹⁰=399.

Contents :

Prologues of Jerome. Frater Ambrosius	f. 1
Desiderii.
Genesis—Malachi	3
The apocryphal books of Esdras are included, and the order is unusual. 1 Esdre=Ezra; 2 Esdre=Nehemiah; 3 Esdre=1 Apocrypha Esdre; 4 Esdre=Esdras (beg. 'Et egit Josias'); 5 Esdre=the other three books of Apocrypha Esdre in one. Tobit follows Judith and Esther; two books of Macc. follow Tobit; prologues to Ecclesiasticus, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel are found together at the end of Isaiah. The usual prologues occur except in the case of the books of Job, Daniel, Amos, Macc., which have none. There are four prologues to the book of Psalms. Two versions of the Canticle Domine audivi are found, and space has been left for a second version of the Psalter.
Evv., Paul. Epp., Acts, Cath. Epp., Apoc.	310 v
There are no prologues to the New Testament, S. Matt., Paul. Epp., Romans, Thess., Timothy, Titus, Apoc.
Hebrew Names. Acar—Zebulonites (incomplete)	380

Provenance. It is unfortunate that the inscription on the lower margin f. 1 is illegible. The presence of the apocryphal books of Esdras frequently points to an English origin, as does also the version of Esdras which begins Et egit Josias. On the other hand, this arrangement of books, etc., closely resembles that of three Bibles, one of which is known to be French and the other two conjectured to be (i.e. Fitzwilliam Museum, No. 1; Nicholas of Battle's Bible, belonging to H. Yates Thomson; and Hunterian Museum, Glasgow, No. 493).

Later marks of ownership are as follows: on f. 3, Johannis Wilkinsounis possedit; on f. 1, Liber Caroli Lumisden; on f. 310v, Liber Caroli Lumisden ministri verbi Dei apud Dudinstonam.

Charles Lumsden was regent in the University in 1587, 1588; made minister of Duddingston, 1611, by James VI; died 1630. His library was estimated at 1200 merks.¹ The Bible was probably bought at his sale, as there is no record of its presentation. It appears in a catalogue of 1636.

Writing and Illumination. The script is less careful and uniform than in most 13th century Bibles, and by various hands. The marginalia are of different periods.

There are good penwork initials to books and chapters, and the book of Genesis and the Psalms have a line of elongated capitals in red and blue at the beginning. The Canticles are written, like the Psalms, with a capital at each verse.

2. BIBLIA SACRA.

D. b. I. 1.

Latin, vellum, $11\frac{7}{8}'' \times 7\frac{7}{8}''$, ff. 490, double columns, 52 lines to a page. Cent. xiii/xiv (c. 1300). English [?]. Binding: Modern brown morocco, painted edges, red ground, branches intersecting, with lions' faces at intersections, and, within the spaces formed by the branches, gold leaves, 'I.H.C.' in the centre.

Prologues of Jerome.	Frater Ambrosius	f. 1
	Desiderii.
Genesis—2 Macc.	3 v
Evv., Paul. Epp., Acts, Cath. Epp., Apoc.	367
Hebrew Names.	Apprehendens—Zuzim	458

Provenance. This may be either English or French workmanship. Two 14th century inscriptions on the fly-leaf have been almost wholly erased. They read, Ista Biblia est ad usum fratriis . . . and Ista Biblia est Joh. . . . On another fly-leaf the name Walterus Balcanquall, subsequently erased, can be read, and presumably refers to the famous minister of St. Giles¹ or his son. On f. 1, in a later hand, the inscription Richard Redman's Book can be distinguished, and here also, in the lower margin, the gift of the ms. to the Library by the first Earl of Forfar is recorded. Liber Bibliothecae Edinburgene ex dono Nobilissimi Comitis Forfarensis 1670.

Writing and Illumination. Script good and uniform. The small capitals are touched with red, and there are good penwork initials to the chapters, and a very fine one at the beginning of the Hebrew Names. All the prologues and two of the books have decorative initials, evidently the work of two different hands, one very poor, the other of more than average skill. The historiated initials, seventy in number, are also by two hands. One artist, a very unskilled one, does the opening prologue and the books from Genesis to 4 Kings, eight of the Psalms, Maccabees, Matthew, Romans, and 2 Thessalonians. The rest are by a more skilled hand.

Historiated Initials :

1. Fol. 1. Prol. S. Jerome writing.
2. Fol. 3. Gen. The Days of Creation: seven rectangular pictures, each under a cusped arch. Above, on branches of foliage, two angels censing. Below, a crucifixion, with the Virgin and S. John and, hanging from branched foliage at either side, two blindfold corpses. Poor work.
3. Fol. 20. Exodus. Moses, horned and mitred, carrying book, followed by Israelites.
4. Fol. 35. Lev. Two Israelites sacrificing rams at altar. Head of Christ above.

5. Fol. 44v. Num. Moses and another kneel L., an angel above speaks.
6. Fol. 59. Deut. Moses with the book of the Law addresses Israelites.
7. Fol. 71v. Joshua. Three Israelites kneel in prayer L., head of Christ above.
8. Fol. 80. Judges. Four Israelites, one seated L., head of Christ above.
9. Fol. 88v. Ruth. Elimelech, Naomi, and sons set out on journey.
10. Fol. 90v. 1 Reg. Hannah, with Samuel behind her, kneels before what appears to be a small square altar, covered with a loose white cloth. Eli stands behind the altar.
11. Fol. 103. 2 Reg. David throned, and before him Benaiah slaying the Amalekite.
12. Fol. 112v. 3 Reg. Abishag and a young man beside David's couch.
13. Fol. 123. 4 Reg. Ahaziah falls from tower.
14. Fol. 134. 1 Paral. Three Jews seated conversing.
15. Fol. 144v. 2 Paral. Solomon crowned, hands joined in prayer, kneels with two others at an altar. The altar is apparently four-square, and vested in a loose blue frontal, powdered with groups of three white spots. The mensa is covered with a white linen cloth edged with a short coarse fringe, the background is conventional.
16. Fol. 157v. Ezra. Above, three single figures, two with hammers, one with a hod; below, Cyrus, speaking.
17. Fol. 161. Nehemiah. Artaxerxes, seated R., takes cup from Nehemiah kneeling.
18. Fol. 166. Esdras. Priest, vested in a blue, close-sleeved tunic girdled at waist, reaching just below the knees, and apparently opening in front, with blue stockings and red shoes, holding a holy-water stock in the L. hand and a sprinkler in R., with which he sprinkles the altar. The altar, which is small and square, is vested in a plain, loose, blue frontal, hanging in folds made by its being looped up in the centre of the side shown. The mensa is covered with a white linen cloth edged with coarse fringe. The altar stands beneath an elaborate canopy in the architectural style of the 13th century. This is supported on pillars at the corner of the altar, has a trefoil-headed arch and an embattled parapet, above which is a group of three short and massive pinnacles surmounted by gold balls. Over the altar a lamp is shown, suspended from beneath the canopy.
19. Fol. 171v. Tobit. Tobit lies on a couch, a figure stands by him with a swallow's nest in his hand.
20. Fol. 175. Judith. Judith beheads Holofernes in his tent.
21. Fol. 180. Hester. Ahasuerus crowned, seated; below him Esther, crowned, hands raised; below her Haman on gibbet.
22. Fol. 185. Job. Job, his wife, and three friends, two of them crowned, conversing.
23. Fol. 194. Beatus vir. David playing on harp, angel with trumpet standing on lion in foliage of border.
24. Fol. 198. Dominus illuminatio. David, crowned, points to his eye, nimbed figure with book goes before him.
25. Fol. 200. Dixi custodiam. Same figures seated, David points to his lips.
26. Fol. 202. Dixit insipiens. Fool with club in R. hand, cake in L.

27. Fol. 204v. Salvum me fac. David crowned, waist-deep in water, hands raised, Christ above, blessing.
28. Fol. 207. Exultate Deo. David plays on three bells with hammer.
29. Fol. 210. Cantate Domino. Three clerks singing at desk. Very rough.
30. Fol. 212. Dixit Dominus. Trinity.
31. Fol. 218v. Proverbs. Solomon teaching Rehoboam.
32. Fol. 227. Ecclesiastes. Solomon enthroned, with sceptre.
33. Fol. 229v. Cantica. Virgin and Child, crowned and nimbed.
34. Fol. 231. Sapientia. Solomon seated with drawn sword L., warrior in mail with shield R.
35. Fol. 237. Ecclesiasticus. Nimbed figure throned.
36. Fol. 252. Isaiah. Isaiah's martyrdom with a cross-cut saw.
37. Fol. 270. Jeremiah. Jeremiah seated L., tear bottle beside him, Deity from cloud above holds him something and points to his tears.
38. Fol. 292v. Treni. Jeremiah sits outside the gate of Jerusalem, five persons look down on him from the battlements.
39. Fol. 294v. Baruch. Prophet seated with open book, head in cloud above.
40. Fol. 298. Ezekiel. Ezekiel seated, hands clasped, looks up at the nimbed heads of four evangelistic creatures. In lower corner R., in the four quarters of a circle, four human heads nimbed.
41. Fol. 320v. Daniel. Daniel in lions' den, his hand on two lions' heads.
42. Fol. 329v. Hosea. Hosea shaking hands with Gomer.
43. Fol. 332v. Joel. Joel, seated under cusped arch, looks up to head in cloud above.
44. Fol. 334v. Amos. Amos the shepherd, head in cloud above.
45. Fol. 336v. Obadiah. Obadiah with scroll blessing.
46. Fol. 337. Jonah. Jonah in whale's mouth, hands clasped, looks towards Nineveh.
47. Fol. 338. Micah. Micah seated, head in cloud above.
48. Fol. 339v. Nahum. Nahum seated.
49. Fol. 340v. Hab. Habakkuk standing speaks with head in cloud above.
50. Fol. 341. Zeph. Zephaniah seated, with scroll, head in cloud above.
51. Fol. 342v. Haggai. Haggai with scroll stands under cusped arch.
52. Fol. 346v. Malachi. Malachi seated.
53. Fol. 348. 1 Macc. Mattathias with sword raised to slay kneeling man.
54. Fol. 359v. 2 Macc. King with drawn sword seated L., man with staff.
55. Fol. 367v. Matthew. Half-reclining figure. Very poor work.
56. Fol. 387. Luke. Zachariah, apparently kneeling before a small four-square altar, vested in a loose frontal covered with a linen cloth edged with coarse fringe, and censing it with a censer held in his R. hand by short chains.
57. Fol. 400. John. Father and Son cross-nimbed, with book, seated under cusped arch, blessing; below, under similar arch, S. John with scroll points and looks upwards.
58. Fol. 409v. Romans. S. Paul seated with sword, two mitred bishops before him.
59. Fol. 412. 1 Cor. S. Paul seated with sword, addresses one mitred bishop with crosier.
60. Fol. 420. Gal. S. Paul addresses crowd.

61. Fol. 423. Phil. S. Paul addresses two men, one nimbed, with book.
 62. Fol. 424 v. Col. S. Paul addresses two tonsured men with books.
 63. Fol. 425 v. 1 Thess. S. Paul addresses two men, one tonsured and bearing a book.
 64. Fol. 426 v. 2 Thess. S. Paul addresses two mitred bishops, one with crosier.
 65. Fol. 427. 1 Tim. S. Paul and Timothy seated.
 66. Fol. 428. 2 Tim. Similar, Timothy with crosier.
 67. Fol. 429. Titus. Similar to 65.
 68. Fol. 429 v. Philemon. S. Paul seated under strong tower (in prison), soldier guarding him L., figure with book R.
 69. Fol. 430. Hebrews. S. Paul seated addressing crowd.
 70. Fol. 451 v. Apocalypse. S. John seated writing at desk.

Provenance. This may be either a French or an English Bible. The only mark of ownership is on f. 472 v, the name Thomas Vestoun Scotus (16th century). It was presented by Alexander Waugh, 1672.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is exceedingly good, apparently by one scribe. The book is remarkable for its elaborate and beautiful penwork initials and marginal ornament, and is in good condition, written on fine vellum, and well spaced.

Genesis—2 Macc. Wants second prol. to Pentateuch; part of Gen. i; Ps. xxxvi 27—Ps. xlivi 14; Isaiah lxi-lxv; 1 Macc. xv and xvi; 2 Macc. i 1-14. The book of Ezra is complete, but in seven books instead of ten	3
Evv., Paul. Epp., Acts, Cath. Epp., Apoc. Wants Apoc. ii 24-end.	313

Provenance. One of the small 13th century Paris Bibles. There are no early marks of ownership. The ms. was presented to the Library by Rev. John Robertson,¹ minister of Old Greyfriars, in 1680 (vide inscription).

Writing and Illumination. The script is fair. The book is a good deal stained and its margins badly cropped. There are a few historiated book initials, but for the most part these are decorative, blue and lake with white and scarlet ornament.

Historiated Initials :

1. Fol. 1. Prologue. S. Jerome writing at desk.
2. Fol. 154. Judith. Judith beheading Holofernes.
3. Fol. 163. Job. Job, his wife, and one friend.
4. Fol. 171. Psalms. David, crowned, playing harp.
5. Fol. 190. Proverbs. Solomon teaching Rehoboam.
6. Fol. 219. Isaiah. Isaiah kneeling in centre clad in white, two men saw his head with cross-cut saw.
7. Fol. 233. Jeremiah. Two Jews stone Jeremiah kneeling.
8. Fol. 255. Ezekiel. His vision. Ezekiel in bed, the four evangelistic emblems above him.

Provenance. Probably one of the many small Parisian Bibles of the period. The first mark of ownership is the record of the gift of the book to the Library by Humphrey Wanley,¹ sub-librarian at the Bodleian, 11 Dec. 1696.

Writing and Illumination. Script fairly good; more than one hand can be identified, and the ink varies in colour. There are marginal notes in various hands. The usual red and blue filigree initials to chapters and decorative book initials are found, along with a few historiated initials.

1. Fol. 1. Prol. S. Jerome writing at desk, head of Deity above.
 2. Fol. 4. Gen. In upper part of decorative initial Christ seated in glory, orb in left hand, an angel on either side.
- Daniel, Amos, and Nahum have single figures; Matthew has a seated apostle.

There is no book of Psalms. Prayer of Solomon is inserted after Ecclesiasticus.
Evv., Paul. Epp., Acts, Cath. Epp., Apoc.	251
Hebrew Names. Aaz—Zuzim	320

Provenance. From the script and illumination this appears to be an Italian book. The earlier marks of ownership are obscure, consisting of an erased inscription on f. 1, a name and date on f. 319, P. Nobides [?] 1544, and a partially erased signature followed by two dates, 1595 and 1589, on f. 346 v. On f. 347 there is a long inscription by the same hand, L'estat de l'eglise avec le discours des temps depuis les Apostres sous Neron jusques a present sous Charles V, contenant en bref les histoires tant anciennes que novelles, celles specialement qui concernent l'Empire et le siege romaine, la vie et decrees des Papes, les conciles, le commencement, accroissement et decadence de la religion. Quatriesme Edition MDLXI.

This is the name of a book written by Jean Taffin and printed about this date. A copy of it is in the Library, printed at Bergen 1605.¹

The Bible was evidently one of Rev. Charles Lumsden's books,² as it bears on f. 251 the 17th century inscription, Ex libris Caroli Lummisden pastoris ecclesie Dudinstonensis, and by the same hand on f. 347 v, numeris foliorum 346.

Writing and Illumination. Extremely small, neat, and uniform script. The Hebrew Names are by a different hand, and indeed may have belonged to quite another ms. Both the vellum and ornament are different.

Chapters and prologues have red and blue filigree initials, the latter partly inset. Book initials are decorative, of a rather unusual type. Some are floriated on backgrounds of gold and colour, others have single heads rather indifferently executed.

Prologues of Jerome.	Frater Ambrosius	f. 1
	Desiderii.
Evv., Paul. Epp., Acts, Cath. Epp., Apoc.	327

Provenance. A Dutch Bible. There is an inscription on the fly-leaf of vol. ii in a contemporary hand, Liber monasterii Sororum ordinis prædicatorum in Westeroy prope Tyelam. On f. 231 the same hand has written, Weestroyen anno 13, huc asportatus. Again on f. 3, Weestroyen. I have not been able to identify this House. A contemporary list of contents of vol. ii gives original foliation, of which not a trace now remains in either volume.

On the second fly-leaf the hand of the above inscriptions writes the following verse : Dum male fecisti, mox inspice vulnera Christi, Flecte genu plora, crucifixum saepe adora.

There is a descriptive title in pencil, possibly by John Cochran, also Laing's signature, and a note to the effect that the ms. is described in John Cochran's Catalogue, No. 6. It fetched £15, 15s. at Cochran's sale.¹

Writing and Illumination. Script fair, with good wide margins. There is little ornament. The verse initials are black touched with red; chapter initials plain red, inset.

Prologues of Jerome. Frater Ambrosius	f. 1
Desiderii.
Genesis—2 Macc.	4
The order is a little unusual. Jerem. follows Treni and Baruch.
Lev. xv is found at the end of the book of Esther with explanatory rubric, and Hab. iii after 2 Macc. with rubric. Oratio Neemie is at the end of 3 Esdre, and the prologues to the Minor Prophets are placed in order before Hosea.
Evv., Paul. Epp., Acts, Cath. Epp., Apoc.	343
Summary of the contents of the Four Gospels in verse, attributed to Alexander de Villa Dei, with a key to the numerals used throughout the verses	410
Table of Lessons for the Year (containing the Feast and Translation of S. Dominic)	412 v

Provenance. An interesting colophon to the second prologue to the Pentateuch gives the provenance. It reads as follows, written in alternate lines of red, blue, and black :

*Laus tibi sit Christe, te glorificat liber iste
 Conditus impensis, Ottonis Patavienisis
 Qui quasi bos fratrum majorum traxit aratrum
 Rex bone me qui te colo, scribito codice vite
 Alme pater mestio pugili palme dator esto
 Esto dator palme pugili mestio pater alme
 Plaudo tibi vite genitor laudo colo rite
 Rite colo laudo genitor vite tibi plaudo
 In patria mihi prolatria pater atria dona
 Nata dei miserendo mei super astra corona
 Cui liber hic cedat mihi psalmos jugiter edat.*

From this it would appear that the Bible was written for and at the expense of Otto of Passau. Otto, Bishop of Passau (1254-65), had a fine collection of books, which he left to certain abbots and members of his chapter. *Otto praesul varios libros de camera sua abbatibus et pluribus capituli sui membris communicat.*¹ A catalogue of these books is extant² which mentions three Bibles: Item Biblia, Item vetustissima Biblia, Item Biblia vilis. This Bible might be the first or last of these, it could scarcely be called 'vetustissima' in 1265.

There are certain later marks of ownership. On the verso of f. 1^a a definition of the word energia is added by a 15th century hand, and signed Haec manu propria D. Pirchumbart. On the first fly-leaf is Laing's signature, the price £6, 16s. 6d., and, by another hand, Biblia Sacra cum praefationibus MS. 1847. At the end are the initials T. R. [Thomas Rodd?] and the number 8403.

Writing and Illumination. A well-written book with filigree initials in blue, red, and yellow; two plain gold initials on a blue ground and one, at the beginning of Malachi, of silver filigree.

9. BIBLIA SACRA (Genesis to Hester).

Provenance. The scribe signs his name at the end of the book, Liber Everhardi Konnyncpeters anno Domini 1367, and there is a modern inscription at the beginning, Ego Everhardus Trompeters [sic] vicarius Altaris Omnia Apostolorum in ecclesia

² Serapeum, xxv, pp. 242-7.

Reesensi scripti manu mea hunc librum. A.D. 1367. In the end of the volume. This exact inscription, in which the name appears to have been misread, does not now appear in the end of the volume. 'Rees' most probably refers to the town of that name in Rhenish Prussia. There are no other marks.

Writing and Illumination. Fairly good, uniform hand, signed by scribe, with little ornament. Chapter initials are plain red two-line capitals inset; book initials four-line, red, with purple penwork.

Tables of special Feasts and Epacts	f. 1 v
Kalendar	2
Evv., Acts, Apoc., Cath. Epp., Paul. Epp. (wants Apoc. xvii 8— 1 Peter ii 13; includes Laodicean Ep.)	8

Provenance. The script is Italian, and the Kalendar connects the book with North Italy. Additions to the Kalendar show that it went to Aquileja. The illumination on f. 1, a full-length figure of a white monk with a halo, suggests that it originally belonged to a House of white monks.

Kalendar. The following are the most distinctive names :

1 Feb., Severus [Bp. Ravenna]; 18 May, Fedentius [Fidentius]; 25 May, Zenobius [Bp. Florence]; 5 July, Romulus [Bp. Fiesole]; 18 July, Rofillus [Bp. Forli]; 7 Aug., Donatus [Bp. Arezzo]; 20 Aug., Leuntius and Carpoforus [Vicenza and Aquileja]; 4 Sept., Marinus M. [Rimini]; 4 Oct., Petronius [Bp. Bologna]; 8 Oct., Reparata [Florence]; 10 Oct., Cerbonus [Bp. Verona]; 25 Oct., Miniatis and Comp. [Florence]; 7 Nov., Prosdocius [Bp. Padua]; 9 Nov., Theodore M. [Venice]; 24 Nov., Prosper [Bp. Reggio]; 1 Dec., Anxianus M. [Ansanus, Siena].

The names of SS. Reparata, Zenobius, and Miniatis suggest a Florentine provenance, but many other places in North Italy are also indicated.

The additions to the Kalendar are by two hands, and include :

31 Jan., Trans. S. Mark [Aquileja]; 25 June, [Inventio Corporis] Marci [Venice]; 12 July, Hermacorius [Hermagorus, Bp. Aquileja]; 14 May and 27 Sept., Feast and Trans. of SS. Felix and Fortunatus MM. [Aquileja].

There is no doubt, therefore, that the book went to Aquileja early.

Of later marks of ownership there is first a description of the MS. signed by Henry Drury, Novum Testamentum Lat. MS. in memb. C. d. 2. With many miniatures of the seasons, signs of the zodiac, and a profusion of large illuminated initials. At Drury's Sale in 1827 the MS. was sold to Cochran for £7, 10s.¹

Laing notes that the ms. is described in the Printed Catalogue of John Cochran, No. 16,² and the entry on the inner board; £14, 14s. (16), doubtless indicates the price paid for it by Laing at Cochran's Sale.

Writing and Illumination. Script bold and clear, by one hand throughout. Verse and chapter initials and the first word of each book are alternately red and blue with penwork flourishes. Book initials are either purely decorative after a rather unusual crude style, frequently introducing birds, or they contain single figures of evangelists and apostles. S. Mark stands upon an unrecognisable lion, S. John upon a building like a church.

The colours used are green, blue, vermillion, and a dull yellow on burnished gold grounds. All the figures have vermillion-coloured hair.

Miniatures:

These include a full-page miniature of a white monk on f. 1 and pictures in the Kalendar, illustrating occupations of the months and the signs of the zodiac.

Evv., Acts, Cath. Epp., Apoc., Paul. Epp..	f. 1
Wisdom Books, including Proverbs vi 1—xxx 14, Ecclesiastes iii 7—viii 14, Sapientia (wants i 1-11), Ecclesiasticus, Job (wants last six verses). Contains Capitula to S. Matthew and to Ecclesiasticus	109

Provenance. The style of writing and illumination is Italian, and there is a late inscription over the name of David Laing, probably written by him, which reads, Bibliothecae FF. Ordinis B. MARIE Virginis de Monte Carmelo Placentiae. There are no earlier marks of ownership.

Writing and Illumination. The original hand is good, but degenerates in the Catholic Epistles. The inserted gathering at the end of Ecclesiasticus is very carelessly written, and the same hand has inserted some marginal divisions and the foliation, which is incorrect. Another hand has inserted a few titles in red and some missing prologues.

There are some good red and blue penwork initials. Each book has an ornamental initial containing either a figure or a head, executed in dull greyish white on burnished gold, and a partial border of conventional branching foliage with gold balls. S. Matthew (chap. xxvi) has a border and an initial with a head of Christ framed in a gold cross-nimbus, and the book of Job has a half-length figure of Job lying on his back, a black demon tormenting him.

Provenance. The 13th century inscription on f. 1, now very difficult to decipher, appears to read, Codex Sancti Eucharii sanctique [Matthiae] Apostoli extra muros [Trevi]renses, quem si quis abstulerit anathema sit in eternum. The words in brackets are quite illegible, but were suggested by Dr. James from the context.

The Benedictine Abbey of S. Matthias was founded in the 5th century and restored in 975. From 1015-92 it was known as the monastery of S. Eucharius, and the inscriptions on its books prior to 1150 read, Codex Sancti Eucharii, while those inscribed between 1150 and 1250 read as above, Codex Sancti Eucharii Sanctique Mattheiae Apostoli.¹ Of the subsequent history of the MS. prior to its acquisition by D. Laing there is little evidence. A 14th century title, together with the press-mark A. 1⁸ and the number 290, are found on f. 1, the two last being probably quite modern. The S. Matthias' books seem to have been widely scattered over Europe. One is reported to be at Cheltenham, but the B. M. manuscript (Egerton, 809), supposed to have belonged to this House, is really a S. Maximin's book.

Writing and Illumination. The script is a fine, clear minuscule. The smaller initials are plain red Roman capitals, the rubrics and the first line of ordinary text of each book being semi-rustic capitals. Each Gospel has an illuminated title and an illuminated page of text.²

Fol. 18v. S. Matthew. 'Initium Ewangelii Jhu Xpi sancti filii Dei Vivi secundum Mattheum,' in alternate lines of Roman capitals in silver and gold on green and red grounds. The full-page initial 'I' is of gold and silver branch work edged with red, on a mixed background of red, blue, and green. The beginning of the Gospel is similarly executed, but upon a smaller scale.

Fol. 82v. S. Mark. Very similar.

Fol. 121v. S. Luke. The backgrounds here are mainly red and brown, and the initial 'I' is of silver edged with black surrounded with tracery of raised gold.

Fol. 191v. S. John. Closely resembles the last described, with blue and brown backgrounds.

Provenance. This is an English ms. It has no illumination of any kind to help in fixing its provenance and no early marks of ownership. A slip has been inserted bearing some notes as to the authorship of the glosses and stating that the first four chapters and part of the fifth are wanting. William Black adds a note that the ms. begins, as it still does, in the middle of the ninth chapter. The ms. does not, however, correspond with any of the entries in Black's Sale Catalogue. F. 1 bears the signature J. O. Halliwell, Oct. 1838 (205). His books were sold in 1841, and in the Sale Catalogue¹ No. 80 seems to correspond accurately with this ms. It is evident that when Halliwell's signature was inserted, the ms. was as incomplete as it now is. According to a scroll list in Laing's hand, it was one of Lord Alva's books (James Erskine, Lord Barjarg and Alva, son of Charles Erskine, Lord Tinwald).² It does not, however, appear in Lord Alva's Press Catalogue (Edin. Univ. ms. Laing 755). If Laing is right, the ms. must have been bought by Halliwell at the Alva Sale and acquired by the Library from Halliwell's Sale three or four years later.

Writing. The script is of the usual 12th century type, and there is no attempt at ornament.

Provenance. A pencil note on a fly-leaf at the beginning (19th century) gives the most likely provenance and approximate date of the ms. It says, About A.D. 1200 MS. French execution. The inscription on f. 1, Bibliothecae Ivesianaæ, indicates that it was in the library of John Ives, Suffolk Herald Extraordinary, whose books were sold in March 1777.¹ Ives inserts a note to the effect that the ms. belongs to the beginning of the 14th century, obviously a mistake, but repeated in the printed slip on the first fly-leaf. This slip, evidently from an exhibition catalogue, has, in a modern hand, Lent by Godwin Austin Esq. A book-plate has been removed.

Writing and Illumination. The script is good, uniform, and well spaced. The initials are plain red, blue, or green; the first line of the prologue has red and blue capitals alternately and the first line of text red capitals.

There are also two decorative initials.

1. Prologue. The 'J' has been cropped. It is a plain gold initial on a green ground, with a grotesque animal, half bird, half snake, coiling round it.

2. Text. The 'I' consists of two broad bands of punctured gold with a band of lake between, on a green ground, with a central medallion, on which is an eagle on a blue ground. Conventional foliage and fruit make up an ornamental tailpiece.

Provenance. A contemporary inscription on f. 1, Liber Sancti Ruphi. Si quis abstulerit anathema sit, followed by the press-mark C. C. G., shows that it must have belonged to the monastery of S. Ruf at Valence. This abbey was founded near Avignon in 1039 and transferred to Valence in 1158, and is an Augustinian foundation.¹

There are no further indications of ownership save the signature of D. Laing and the information that it was bought in London, August 1877. On the inner cover at the end is a label with the number 51.

Writing and Illumination. The script is good, uniform, and well spaced. The first words of each epistle are in Roman capitals touched with yellow. Verse initials are black or red, touched with yellow; chapter initials red and yellow; prologue initials red, blue, green, yellow; epistle initials decorative, with foliage and grotesque dragons on coloured ground, the colours being blue, red, yellow, and brown.

Provenance. This appears to be an English book. A 13th century inscription on f. 243 v sets forth its owner and contents as follows:—Iste liber est fratriis Clementis [Rocha] ordinis fratrum predicatorum. In isto volumine sunt isti libri per ordinem; tota biblia abbreviata (sicut) poteris intueri; postea liber qui vocatur testimoniorum Ysidori contra Judeos et sunt du [.] boni et necessarii; postea tynicus platonis; postea marcianus; postea liber macrobii; postea liber tullii de natura deorum; postea trismogestus ad asclepium et hammonam et ermium, postea liber apulii (Platonici) madaurensis de deo socratis, postea liber calcidii in tynco, postea dicta albumasar. Iste liber est fratriis Clementis Rocha [?] ordinis predicatorum. The final clause is by a second hand, but of the same period. There are no other marks of ownership. The above inscription has been partly transcribed by a modern hand, completed by Laing, though this is not one of his books, and rewritten by a third hand.

Writing. This is a well-written ms., by several different hands, without attempt at ornament. There are plain black capitals, and the rubrics are in rustic capitals. Some of the headings are late insertions. On f. 85 v, a blank page, there is a crude pen-and-ink drawing of a ship in full sail, obviously also a late insertion.

Provenance. This is an Anglo-Norman ms. of a good type. There are no marks of ownership prior to the record of its gift to the Library on f. iii v, Liber Bibliothecae Edinburgenae ex dono generosi Juvenis Johannis Aikman (filii Magistri Gulielmi a Cairnie Causarum Patroni), An. 1692. The 17th century marginal notes towards the end of the book may have been the work of a member of this family. The inscription is written by William Henderson, Librarian, who adds two extracts about Petrus Comestor from Gerardus J. Fossius and Robert Bellarmine.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is very good and uniform, and there are a number of good decorative initials. The book is in good preservation and complete.

Provenance. From its general style it would seem to be an English ms. There are no early marks of ownership. It was presented to the Library by the Earl of Forfar in 1670.

Writing and Illumination. Written by several hands, all fairly good. Ornamentation consists of red and blue filigree initials. Capitula are marked in the margin by a later hand.

Text of Genesis follows (2 ff. missing).

Genesis—4 Kings.

Job (the abridgment called Petit Job).

Tobit.

' Jeremiah'—Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Daniel, and Susanna (historical narrative and abridgment).

Judith, followed by history from Cambyses to Nehemiah.

Hester, followed by the history of the Ptolemies.

Proverbs—Ecclesiasticus.

Isaiah—Malachi.

Maccabees.

Evv., Paul. Epp., Acts, Cath Epp.

Apocalypse (added soon after, vide inscription).

Provenance. The illumination is characteristically French, probably of South France, but there are no marks of local provenance. At the end of the Catholic Epistles there is an inscription by the scribe, Ci senist la bible en francois qui fu finee lan mccc et quatorze, l'apocalypse se ensuant. Explicit expliceat ludere scriptor eat. At the end of the Apocalypse, Ci fini la bible en francois et lapocalypse Saint Jehan ensemble. Explicit.

On f. 207 there are a few names in a pale brown ink in 16th century hands, Thomas Zowche, Henry Zowche, Helen Zowche, P [?] Barlowe.

It was presented to the Library by James Sutherland, Merchant of Edinburgh, in 1680.

Writing and Illumination. Well and uniformly written, in brownish ink, by one scribe throughout. The chapters have two-line, the Capitula one-line, initials of finely burnished gold with red and blue penwork, inset. These have a very pleasing effect, especially in the Capitula, where they are combined with line-endings in blue, lake, and gold. Book initials are decorative of the usual type, not particularly good. They are combined with line and leaf borders. The book is profusely illustrated with rectangular miniatures on backgrounds of blue or lake chequer, plain burnished gold, or of the two types combined, framed in bands of gold and colour edged with black. The figures and faces are characteristically French. The general effect is good, but the workmanship is disappointing at the beginning, though it improves notably later on. All the gold work in the book is good.

Miniatures :

1. Fol. 1. Prol. Diapered gold ground. Guiart des Moulins writing at desk.
2. Fol. 2. Letter to Archbishop of Sens. Lake chequer ground. Writer seated at desk L., white monk, kneeling, presents the letter to the Archbishop of Sens, who stands at R., attended by three white monks.
Some miniatures missing here.

Text. Ut sibi juncta magis nature dona resultent. . . .
Ends f. 121, Supplantare novas saltem post fata silebit.
Explicit Anticlaudianus Alani de Antiruffino.

Provenance. From its general appearance it would seem to be an English MS., but it bears no distinctive marks of origin or ownership.

Writing and Illumination. Well written in a small, clear, uniform hand, with ornamental initials. These are either filigree initials, or, in the case of some book initials, red and blue, filled and surrounded with conventional foliage in red, yellow, and green. In two cases near the beginning the lower margin has a piece of conventional ornament in these colours, and spaces have been left for pictures at the beginning of each of the books of the Bible. No gold is used throughout the first part. There is a very fine initial at the beginning of the Architrenius (f. 78), in which is a small miniature on a punctured gold ground, representing, in the upper part, Xerxes sailing over Mount Athos, and below, Xerxes crossing the Hellespont. Both the prologue and the text of the Anticlaudianus begin with a whole line of elongated capitals, red and blue alternately, with filigree ornament. The book is much stained with moisture at the beginning, and imperfect.

21. LIFE OF THE VIRGIN.

Laing 36.

Latin, vellum, $4\frac{3}{8}'' \times 2\frac{7}{8}''$, ff. 164, 32 lines to a page. Cent. xiii, English or French. Binding: Modern black morocco, lettered 'Vita Virginis Marie.'

Incipiunt auctoritates quedam beatissimi B. [?] ex[c]erpte a gloriosis dictis ejusdem et ex libris	119
Ends f. 164, et a facie tua defluxerunt montes.

Provenance. There is no indication of original provenance. Only two names appear in the book. On f. 118 v, the end of the first part of the volume, Richardus Barton Kal. Oct. 1628 [?] and Jacobus Charlemont Anno Domini 1741. Also on a paper flyleaf at the beginning, Jam. Charlemont. The latter must be James, 4th Viscount and 1st Earl of Charlemont (1728-99),¹ and the former is probably Richard Barton, Jesuit, successively rector of the English colleges at Liège and S. Omer (1601-69).¹

Writing and Illumination. A well-written MS. on very fine vellum, with rubrics and spaces for initials, but badly stained and discoloured with moisture.

22. VITA CRYSTY.

D. b. I. 14.

English, paper, $14\frac{3}{4}'' \times 10\frac{1}{4}''$, ff. 45, 36 lines to a page. Cent. xvi, English. Binding: Modern, lettered 'Vita Crysty.'

Provenance. Evidently a German or Dutch ms., but with no marks of definite provenance or ownership. It bears a label with the number 956, also a description of the ms. in French by a modern hand.

Writing and Illumination. It is fairly written with ornamental initials and partial borders of a rather rough and decadent type.

24. ANTIPHONER (Roman Use).

Laing 821.

Latin, vellum, $17\frac{1}{4}'' \times 12\frac{1}{4}''$, ff. 212, 6 lines to a page. Cent. xv/xvi, Italian. Binding: Modern.

Collation. a⁵ (wants 1), b⁸—m⁸, n¹⁰, o⁶, p⁸—C⁸, D⁷ (wants 1) = 212.

Contents :

Noted Anthems and Psalms for the year, beginning in Advent (Roman Use)	f. 1
Hymns. First Saturday in Advent at Vespers; Vigil of the Nativity at Vespers, Matins, and Lauds; Epiphany; First Saturday in Lent; Ascension; Pentecost at Vespers and Matins; Te Deum; Joseph fili David; O Lux Beata (inserted 17th century)	204 v

Provenance. The hand and general style of the book are Italian. Local connection does not seem to be indicated.

Writing and Illumination. Written in a large Italian Gothic hand with one or two hymns added at the end in ordinary running script. There are three types of initials: Gothic capitals in black, ornamented with heads and faces and touched with thin green and yellow; plain blue and red capitals, with penwork in red and purple respectively; and three-line initials, blue, with elaborate penwork in red, sometimes picked out with green.

25. BREVIARY.

D. b. III. 13.

Latin, vellum, $5\frac{7}{8}'' \times 4\frac{1}{8}''$, ff. 270, in double columns, 30 lines to a page. Cent. xv (late), French (Angers). Binding: Modern.

Contents :

Kalendar (January and February missing)	f. 1
Psalter (wants Psalms i and ii), with Creed, Canticles, Hymns,
Litany	6
Service of the Dead (incomplete)	90
Commune Sanctorum (from i Noct., In communi unius Apostoli to ii Noct. v Lect., In communi plurimorum Martyrum)	93
Proprium Sanctorum (from vi Lect., SS. Fabiani et Sebastiani
MM. to S. Thome Apostoli)	100

Provenance. The Breviary, on the evidence of Kalendar, Litany, and Sanctorale, appears to have been written for Angers. The celebration of three festivals of S. Maurice—22 Sept., 28 Sept., 2 Dec. (to commemorate the reception of relics of the Saint)—suggests connection with the Cathedral itself.

Kalendar. Entries specially connected with Angers are: 1 March, S. Albini Epi. And[egavensis], iii Cap.; 15 July, S. Benedicti Epi. And. Red, iii Cap.; 16 Aug., Trans. S. Maurilii, iii Cap.; 20 Aug., Trans. S. Renati, v Cap.; 13 Sept., S. Maurilii Epi. And. Red, v Cap.; 19 Sept., Oct. S. Maurilii, iii Cap.; 16 Oct., S. Magnobodi Epi. And., iii Cap.; 17 Oct., S. Lupi Epi. And., iii Cap.; 19 Oct., Trans. S. Maurilii, iii Cap.; 12 Nov., S. Renati Epi. And. Red, v Cap.; 19 Nov., Oct. S. Renati, ix lect.; 20 Nov., S. Aposthemii Epi. And., iii Cap. The Trans. S. Renati appeared originally on 18 April, but was erased.

Other names of interest are: 30 April, S. Eutropii Epi. [Saintes]; 10 May, S. Maturini C. [?]; 20 May, S. Yvonis Epi. [Chartres]. This name has originally been entered in Red as a feast of v Cap., and has later been erased and again inserted in Black. His Translation is also found on 29 Oct.; 25 June, S. Eligii Epi. Red, ix lect.; 1 July, S. Theobaldi C., ix lect.; 21 July, S. Serenedi, v Cap.; 13 Aug., S. Radegundis V., iii lect.; 1 Sept., S. Lupi Epi. Prici; 22 Sept., S. Mauricii soc. ejus Red, v Cap.; 28 Sept., Oct. S. Mauricii Red, iii Cap.; 10 Oct., S. Tanche V.M., ix lect.; 11 Oct., S. Melani Epi., iii lect.; 13 Oct., S. Geraldii

C., iii lect.; 24 Oct., S. Martini, Abb. Vertanensis, iii lect.; 11 Nov., S. Martini, Arch. Tur. Red, v Cap., with his Translation, 4 July; 2 Dec., Recepcio brachii S. Mauricii, iii Cap.; 19 Dec., S. Gaciani, Arch. Turon., iii Cap.

Litany. Among the confessors are: SS. Paternus [Brittany]; Eligius, Ludovicus, Maurilius, Renatus, Licinus, Magnobodus, Benedict, Albinus, Lupus, Aposthemus, Armagilus [Brittany], Yvo.

Among the virgins: S. Radegund [Poictiers].

All the names connected with Angers and most of the others are also in the Sanctorale.

The Breviary is extremely incomplete, lacking the whole of the Temporale. It was probably one of two volumes. It contains no later marks of ownership.

Writing and Illumination. A fairly good French script by two hands. Capitals are for the most part plain red and blue, and larger initials dark lake and gold on blue grounds.

Provenance. This is a Sarum Breviary, but not one written for use within the diocese. It has no Kalendar, and the Litany is regular Sarum. Prominence is given to S. Richard of Chichester, whose office is not in its usual place in the Sanctorale, but is added at the end of the Benedictions, as a 'Solempne Festum' of nine lessons. His Translation is added on f. 380 v, again with nine lessons. The book was, therefore, probably written for the neighbourhood of Chichester. The first page has a border with five shields, but they are now unidentifiable. The collect for S. Moluoc, a Scottish addition, is of late date. There are no other marks.

Writing and Illumination. The script is of a good Gothic type. Verse initials are alternately blue and gold, with red and purple penwork. Initials of sections (two line) are burnished gold on backgrounds of blue and lake. From their extremities spring cusped branches of blue, lake, and gold, ending in foliage or grotesque animal forms, and these extend down the margins to form partial or complete borders. Where there is a historiated initial these borders are rather more elaborate (e.g. stag and hound in lower margin, f. 1). There are fourteen historiated initials, and a number of others have been removed.

1. Fol. 1. Proprium de Tempore. So much defaced that it is only possible to distinguish two figures dimly. The border here, which is mainly interlaced work in coils and spirals, has five shields also too defaced for identification.

2. Fol. 5. Dom. 1^a in Adventu—Respond after Lectio i. Aspiciens a longe. Isaiah sits pointing to his eyes. The border has a very fine hound pursuing an antlered stag.

3. Fol. 215 v. Ascension. Punctured gold ground. Virgin and apostles, hands clasped, feet of Christ with marks of wounds disappearing above.

4. Fol. 223. Pentecost. Punctured gold ground. Virgin and apostles seated, Dove descends in a cloud.

5. Fol. 229. Trinity. Punctured gold ground. Italian Trinity.

6. Fol. 283. In Dedicatione Ecclesie. Punctured gold ground. Scene representing the consecration of a church. The church is represented by a small, conventional white building with a sloping roof and large doorway in the gabled end. The bishop is shown sprinkling it with holy water. He is vested in an apparelléd alb and amice, scarlet chasuble and gold mitre. With his R. hand he is dipping the sprinkler, like a large ladle, in a tub of holy water hung from a bar of wood resting on the shoulders of two assistants not in ecclesiastical vestments.

7. Fol. 299 v. Dominus illuminatio. Blue lake and gold chequer ground. David, crowned, kneels before a small altar, covered with a linen cloth which hangs over the side in ample folds and shows a large moulded plinth below. He points to his eye.

8. Fol. 307. Dixi custodiam. Same as No. 7.

9. Fol. 319. Salvum me fac. Punctured gold ground. David, naked in the waters, praying for deliverance.

10. Fol. 328. Exultate Deo. Punctured gold ground. David seated, legs crossed, playing with two hammers on three bells. (Finely executed.)

11. Fol. 429. Annunciation. Gold ground. Virgin, blue nimbus, carrying a book. Gabriel, pink nimbus, scroll.

12. Fol. 544 v. S. Michael. Gold ground. Michael, in white robe, scarlet winged and nimbed, bearing a scarlet shield with white cross in his L. hand, slays a scarlet and green dragon with sword.

13. Fol. 603. In Natale Unius Apostoli. Gold ground. Nimbed apostle with sword in L. hand, book in R.

14. Fol. 605. In Vigilia Unius Apostoli. Gold ground. Apostle with book, preaching.

Proprium Sanctorum	289
Commune Sanctorum (much damaged)	444
Service of S. Kentigern (added by Scottish hand in the 15th century)	478 v

Provenance. This is a Sarum Breviary with a full Sarum Litany, and a Kalendar which does not afford very clear evidence of provenance. The occurrence of S. Botulph (17 June), S. Frideswyde (19 Oct.), and S. Hugh, specified as Bishop of Lincoln (17 Nov.), may point to Lincoln diocese.

As to the date of the ms., the presence of the Feast of Relics on 15 September places it before 1319, while external evidence also seems to suggest the early years of the 14th century. The book has certainly no marks of Scottish origin, but from the many 14th and 15th century additions, including the Chronicle entries, insertion of saints, records of events, obits, etc., in the Kalendar, and most notably the Service of S. Kentigern at the end of the book, it is evident that it soon came into Scottish hands, very possibly during the wars of independence, the events of which are chronicled in the volume. A considerable number of the obits and many of the saints in the Kalendar are connected with Aberdeen and the North, and the name of S. Machar, 12 Nov. (Duplex Festum), as well as the dedication of the Cathedral Church of Aberdeen, 3 Nov., is added, so that its connections are evidently with that diocese.

The additions to the Kalendar include the insertion of the number of lessons and the names of the following saints, written by at least four different hands of the 14th and 15th centuries :

February—19, S. Colman Bp. C., ix lect.; 26, S. Alexander Bp., ix lect.; 28, S. Oswald Archbp.

March—1, S. Monan C.; 2, S. Chad Bp., ix lect.; 4, S. Adrian and his Comp. MM., ix lect.; 6, S. Baldred Bp. C.; 7, S. Thomas Aquinas, ix lect.; 8, S. Duthac, ix [lect.]; 10, S. Kessog Bp. C., ix lect.; 11, S. Constantine K. M., ix lect.; 16, S. Boniface; 17, S. Patrick; 30, S. Olaf M., ix [lect.]; 31, S. Regulus C. Pont., Duplex Festum.

April—2, S. Mary of Egypt, ix lect.; 3, S. Richard Bp. C., ix lect.

May—9, Trans. S. Andrew, iii lect. cum re[gimine chori]; 16, Whitsunday; 19, S. Potentiana.

June—3, S. Erasmus M., ix lect.; 9, S. Columba Bp. [sic] C.; 25, S. Eloy Bp. C.; 26, S. Duthac C.

July—4, Trans. and Ordination S. Martin Bp., ix lect.; 15, Divisio Apost.; 26, S. Anne, mother of B.V.M.; 28, S. Pantaleon M.

August—6, Transfiguration, Dup. Fest.; 20, S. Bernard, Ab.

September—15, S. Nichomede; 16, S. Ninian Bp. C.

November—2, S. Eustace and Comp. MM.; 3, Dedicatio Ecclesie Cathedralis de Aberdene; 7, S. Willibrord Bp. C.; 11, S. Menne V.; 12, S. Machar Bp. C., Dup. Fest.; 16, Item S. [Margarete] Reginæ, Dup. Fest. translatio.

December—1, S. Giles C.; 4, S. Barbara V.M.

The following obits and events are noted :

February—5, Obiit Johannes Scotte anno 1373; 10, Obiit J. Comyne apud Dumfres 1305; 17, viii Kl. Martii obiit Rex David anno 1370; 20, Obiit [.] 1372; 23/24, Bellum de Roslone 1302.

March—5, Natus fuit Rex David, 1323; 18, Obiit Johannes de Keth anno 1374; 19, Obiit Rex Alexander, 1270 [?] [Alexander III died 1285]; 25/26, Coronatio Regis Roberti, 1306; 30, Captio Berwici per Anglicos, 1296.

April—27, Obitus Magistri Simonis de Katnes, 1387.

June—18/19, Bellum de Methwen, 1306; 24, Bellum de Bannokburne, 1314.

July—12, Obiit Rex Robertus, 1329 [accepted date 7 June]; 17, Obitus Domini Laurencii Wisman, 1385; 19, Bellum Berwicci, A.D. 1333 [Halidon Hill].

August 11, Bellum de Dupplyn apud Perth per Edwardum de Balliol, 1332.

September—7, Obsessio Berwici per Anglicos, 1319; 27, Obitus Magistri Roberti f[.] de Camera, 1383.

October—15, Obitus Willelmi de Keth, 140—; 16/17, Bellum de Doram, 1346 [Neville's Cross].

November—7, Obitus Domini Willelmi de Calabre, 1406 [Canon of Aberdeen]; 26, Coronatio Regis Davidis, 1331; 30, Obiit Comes Atholiae, 1335.

December—16, Bellum apud Anand, 1332; 16, Obitus Domini Andree de Gillamby Capellani.

The rest of the historical material in the volume is of such interest that I have transcribed it fully in the Appendix.¹ It consists of a brief chronicle of events in the history of Scotland from 1056–1401, written in regular chronicle form. A small portion at the beginning, covering the years 1058–1154, is an almost exact copy of the Chronicle of Melrose for these years,² but from that point onwards it does not follow any of the existing chronicles exactly. It is rather an independent and very brief record of events, kept possibly by the canons of Aberdeen, since the ms.

² See Chronica de Mailros, Bannatyne Club, 1835, pp. 51–2, 'Malcolmus filius Duncani . . . [regnans gloriose] xvii annis.'

seems to have been in use there. Of the later history of the ms. there seems to be no indication. One or two vernacular and other insertions are noted in the Appendix,¹ but none later than the early 16th century.

Writing and Illumination. The script is good and uniform. A second hand has added the Rubricae Generales, a third the Procession and Mass of Corpus Christi (ff. 284-8), and a fourth the Service of S. Kentigern (15th century). The last two are distinctly Scottish in type.

The ornamentation consists of red and blue filigree initials, floriated and historiated initials, and complete borders of blue and lake, cusped and floriated and embellished with animals and grotesques.

Historiated initials:

1. Fol. 36. Christmas Day. Gold ground. Nativity—Virgin on couch, Child in manger, with ox and ass above.
2. Fol. 145v. Easter. Gold ground. Christ with resurrection banner, stepping out of the sepulchre R., speaks to an angel kneeling L.
3. Fol. 169. Pentecost. Gold ground. Virgin and two apostles, Dove descending.
4. Fol. 233. Beatus Vir. Gold ground. David crowned, seated, playing on harp.
5. Fol. 239v. Dominus illuminatio. Gold ground. David crowned, kneeling, points to his eye. Head of God in cloud above.
6. Fol. 247. Dixit insipiens. Gold ground. The fool, in his L. hand a club, driving a sword into his side with his R.
7. Fol. 251. Salvum me fac. Gold ground. David, naked in the waters, holding a budding rod.
8. Fol. 256v. Exultate Deo. Gold ground. David crowned, seated, plays on two bells with two hammers.
9. Fol. 261v. Cantate Domino. Gold ground. Two clerks singing at desk.
10. Fol. 266v. Dixit Dominus. Gold ground. Father and Son seated, hands joined.
11. Fol. 289. S. Andrew. Gold ground. S. Andrew on his cross.
12. Fol. 313. Purification. Gold ground. Presentation.
13. Fol. 327. Annunciation. Gold ground.
14. Fol. 344v. S. John the Baptist. Gold ground. S. John nimbed, holding medallion with lamb upon it.
15. Fol. 377v. Assumption. Father and Son [?] seated, Father with orb and cross in L. hand, R. hand raised, blessing.
16. Fol. 477. In Natali unius Apostoli. Gold ground. Nimbed apostle, preaching.

Provenance. The book is Flemish in style and illumination. The Kalendar and Litany are also Flemish and Augustinian.

Kalendar. Names connected with the Low Countries are: 8 Jan., S. Gudile V., ix lc.; 14 Jan., S. Pontian M., mem. [Utrecht]; 18 March, S. Gertrude V., ix lc.; 4 May, S. Walburge V., mem.; 13 May, S. Servace Bp., Missa; 12 June, S. Odulph, Missa; 11 Aug., S. Gaugericus Ep. [Cambrai], ix lc.; 25 Aug., S. Gregory Ep., Missa [Utrecht]; 17 Sept., S. Lambert Ep. M., ix lc.; 5 Oct., S. Meynulph C., mem. [Archdeacon of Paderborn]; 23 Oct., S. Severinus, iii lc. [Cologne]; 7 Nov., S. Willibord Ep., Missa; 12 Nov., S. Lebuinus C., Missa; 12 Dec., S. Autbert Ep. [Cambrai], ix lc.

Other significant entries are: 4 May, S. Monica; 28 Aug., S. Augustini Patris Nostri Ep. et Doctoris, Solempne; 4 Sept., Oct. Augustini, Duplex; 11 Oct., Trans. Augustini Patris Nostri, ix lc. 'sequenti feria tercia semper est festum solempne festum dedicationis ecclesie (Red) Sci Pauli in Zonia cum Oct. Solempnibus.'

Litany. The significant names are those of the Kalendar, and they also occur in the Sanctorale in so far as they come within the summer part of the year.

All these evidences together point conclusively to connections with an Augustinian foundation in the Netherlands, almost certainly to a church of S. Paul, at Zonia or Zon.

Of later marks there are the following: an erased Ex Manuscriptis on f. 1 and a catalogue number, No. 482 Lauderdale 38 [. . .], in Laing's hand. Finally, a name printed on the binding in gold letters, now worn, which may conjecturally be D. Marguerite Ganhois.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is clear and uniform, written by one scribe throughout. The smaller initials are plain blue and red, the three and four line initials red or blue, with fine penwork in red and green, or purple and blue respectively. At all the greater feasts there are six-line initials delicately floriated in flat colour with occasional touches of gold. Many of these have complete or partial borders of delicate penwork foliage, small gold roundels, and occasional butterflies or birds. In addition to these the book contains four complete and two partial borders of the usual Flemish type at this period. The borders consist of plain bands of dull gold or monochrome, upon which are strewn single wild flowers, wild strawberries, butterflies, snails, etc. The initials connected with these are of the rustic type in monochrome. Two borders have the ordinary blue and gold acanthus foliage interspersed with flowers, fruit, animals, insects, and birds upon plain vellum grounds. The edges have been badly cropped.

Provenance. This is a Cistercian book on the evidence of Kalendar and Sanctorale.

Kalendar. The distinctively Cistercian marks are: 10 Jan., Viliemi [i.e. Guillelmi] Ep. C., xii lc.; 11 Jan., Red, Commemoratio Episcoporum et Abbatum; 16 Feb., Red, Julianae V.M., xii lc.; 20 Ap., Red, Roberti C., xii lc.; 30 Ap., Petri M., xii lc.; 8 May, Red, Petri Ep., xii lc.; 20 May, Commemoratio omnium defunctorum ordinis nostri [inserted]; 13 July, Red, Obiit Reverendus pater bone memorie dominus Johannes et Sancte Rufine Episcopus et fundator; 19 July, Red, Margarete V.M. [inserted]; 11 Aug., Festum Sancte Corone Domini, xii lc.; 20 Aug., Red, Bernardi Abb., xii lc.; 19 Sept., Sequani Abb.; 5 Nov., Malachie Ep., xii lc.; 16 Nov., Edmundi Ep., xii lc.; 20 Nov., Commemoratio parentum nostrorum. All these are also in the Sanctorale.

Other distinctive names are: 29 Jan., Red, Constantii Ep. M., xii lc. [Bp. Perugia]; 1 March, Red, Herculani Ep. M., xii lc. [Perugia—his Translation feast]; 7 Nov., Decollatio Herculanii, xii lc. [inserted]; 7 March, Thome C. de ordine fratrum predicatorum [inserted, can. 1323]; 19 May, Yvonis Pbr. C. [inserted, canonised 1347]; 25 Aug., Red, Trans. B. Julianae V.M., xii lc. [inserted]; 1 Sept., Red, Oct. B. Julianae V.M., xii lc. [inserted]; 3 Dec., Red, Galgani C., xii lc. [Siena]. None of these last appeared in the original Sanctorale. S. Yvo, S. Anne and S. Juliana are inserted in the Commune Sanctorum, and Capitula and Collects for S. Malachy, S. Galganus, and S. Juliana are added at the end.

Litany. This is not very distinctive. S. Anastasia and S. Benedict are doubly honoured. The Suffrages are individual and masculine, Ut spiritum famuli tui in sinu Abrahe recipi jubeas, etc.

A Perugian provenance is clearly indicated, with Sienese connections. The significance of the obit of John of Toledo (13 July), an English Cistercian who became Bishop of Porto and Santa Rufina in 1262, is not quite clear. The addition of the feminine forms in the prayers and of several female saints, notably S. Juliana, throughout, seem to point to its later sojourn in a Cistercian nunnery. It does not appear in the first instance to have been written for nuns.

There is one later signature on the end fly-leaf, Dominus Fabritius Bartilla [?] confessor vidit [?] 1678 [or 1628]. A sale entry pasted on the inner board gives the price as £3, 3s.

Writing and Illumination. A good Italian Gothic script with rubrics and red, blue, and purple filigree initials. The initial at the beginning, probably an illuminated one, has been removed, but part of the border remains. There are certain additions at the end by later hands.

John, Peter M., John Baptist, Dominic, Katherine, Hymns for certain Sundays, Services of Corpus Christi, Visitation, S. Anne, the Transfiguration, 11,000 Virgins, S. Katherine, Trans. S. Psalter (incomplete) 236

Provenance. That the book is Dominican is clearly shown by the Kalendor as well as by the Special Services. The Kalendor contains many Dominican saints, and one or two which might suggest that the book was Bohemian. The occurrence of an octave to the feast of S. Katherine here, together with the special prominence given in the Sanctorale to her office and its rubric, In festo Sancte Glorioso Katherine et matris alme (f. 221 v), would further suggest that it comes from a nunnery dedicated to S. Katherine.

Writing and Illumination. The book appears to have been written by several hands, one being responsible for the Kalendar, another for the Breviary, and a third for the Special Services. The ornamentation consists of coloured capitals, and one illuminated initial in gold and colours at the Service of S. Katherine.

Provenance. This ms. has a full Franciscan Kalendar and Litany, and the Collects and Special Services are many of them Franciscan, while the Sanctorale closely follows the Kalendar. The Kalendar shows early connection with Verona. The name of S. Cerbonius, Bishop of Verona, occurs on 10 Oct., though with no special prominence, and on 14 July S. Toscana, widow, Solemne Verone, is inserted. Again on 12 April, after the Deposition of S. Zeno, the words Solemne Verone are inserted.

The Suffrages to the Litany include Ut civitatem et patriam istam. Regarding the date of the ms. we have the following indications. The original Kalendar includes the names of S. Nicholas of Tolentino and S. Bernardinus (his Translation is added on 17 May and his Service inserted on f. 99 v). This would place it in the second half of the century. S. Bonaventura is inserted both times in the Kalendar (Trans., 14 March, Feast, 7 July), and is added to the Litany, but apparently by the original scribe. He was canonised in 1482. The five Franciscan Martyrs are added both in Kalendar and Sanctorale (canonised 1481). From all these facts one would suggest circa 1480 as the probable date.

There are some liturgical notes by a modern French scholar at the end of the Kalendar, and also on a slip of paper inserted. Later there is a pencil note under W. H. Black's signature of date 25/5/57. Laing records that it came from W. H. Black's library. It is described in his Sale Catalogue No. 418, and noted as having been sold to 'Saunders' for £2, 10s.¹

Writing and Illumination. The script is fair, very unequal, and by several hands not all of the same date. There is little ornament, the capitals being for the most part plain red.

Provenance. This is clearly indicated in rubrics and colophons in the 'Contents.' The ms. was written in and for the Benedictine monastery of Ottenburg (diocese of Augsburg) by John Väschler, Prior, in 1527, during the abbacy of Leonard Widemann.

Kalendar. This is Benedictine, of Augsburg Diocese, and written for the monastery itself.

Kyrie fons bonitatis and Credo (a still later paper addition)	183

Provenance. Originally the Gradual must have been written for a House of Augustinian Canonesses in Holland. From the Sequences¹ it appears to follow the Use of Utrecht, and the conjunction of Augustinian Use with that of Utrecht suggests the 'Congregation' of Windesheim. The Augustinian origin is clearly shown both in the Sanctorale and in the Sequences, and the rubrics are all written for a nunnery. All evidence, both internal and external, points to Holland.

Apparently in the 16th century the Gradual has been adapted to Unreformed Roman Use, partly by marginal alterations,

le ecce rex tuus ve nit scis et salu

partly by additions on inserted folios or written over erasures. The Augustinian parts remain unaltered, however, and it seems possible that it passed into the hands of nuns following the rule of the Augustinian Friars, who would use Roman books.

Certain of the additions are, however, not Roman, as is indicated in the Contents, and their significance is not yet clear. The sequence Audi tellus audi is noted by Chevalier¹ as found in an Antiphoner of Notre Dame de Lorette at Bois-le-duc (1491).

From a note on the inner board the book seems at some time to have been sold for £17.

Writing and Illumination. Apart from the last two pages, two hands are distinctly indicated, both good, uniform Gothic. The first is responsible for the main portions of the ms., the second for whole folios occasionally inserted, and for the replacing of the original text in places. The Dutch rubrics are by the second hand, which can very readily be distinguished by the particularly black, lustrous ink used.

The ordinary capitals are of two types: Gothic line initials with penwork ornament, and plain blue and red verse initials. There are also three types of illuminated initials: blue and white, filled and surrounded by penwork in red and pale green; large initials floriated in colour, blue, lake, vermillion, and green, on burnished gold grounds (very characteristically Dutch); and historiated initials. The last two types are combined with magnificent borders of wild flowers and fruit, beasts, birds, snails, butterflies, and grotesques, etc., with acanthus scrolls, gold roundels, and delicate gold scroll work on the plain vellum. Some of the grotesques are interesting. On f. 1, two monkeys winding wool on a winder; f. 10 v, man playing bagpipes; f. 107, a bird in a cage with bath beside it, and a pig wheeling a lawn-mower.

Miniatures (in initials):

1. Fol. 1. Advent. Annunciation. The Virgin kneels before a draped stool L., angel with lily rod kneels R., canopied couch in the background, tessellated pavement, glimpse of landscape through doorway.

2. Fol. 10. Christmas. Nativity. Virgin, with two angels and S. Joseph behind her, kneels adoring the Child, who lies naked in a halo of rays. The stable, a thatched building, is behind, and the ox and the ass can be seen. Surrounding all is a ruined wall with windows and doorway, through which one can see the shepherds on a distant hill, and a flying angel in a gold cloud with scroll. Over the stable itself are seen two flying angels with trumpets in cloud.

3. Fol. 62. Easter. Christ in crimson robe, bearing Resurrection banner, steps from the tomb, on the parapet of which kneels a white angel adoring. Two soldiers on either side asleep, hilly landscape.

4. Fol. 74. Pentecost. Virgin kneels at desk, apostles grouped round in room furnished with settle, dresser, two windows, two doors, one opening on to loggia, the other into a bedchamber. Rayed dove descends.

5. Fol. 92. S. Andrew. Saint, nimbed, carrying cross and book, stands in an apsidal chamber, a screen of crimson and gold behind him.

6. Fol. 103. Assumption. Coronation of Virgin. Virgin and Child within sun-coloured mandorla, two flying angels above holding crown, two on either side with instruments, two upholding a crescent resting on a brazen dragon upon which the Virgin stands.

Proprium Sanctorum	.	.	.	90
Misse Votive	.	.	.	109

Provenance. The book is Carthusian, but its provenance is doubtful. From a 16th century inscription inserted on a vellum leaf at the beginning we learn that it was presented to the Carthusian House of S. Laurence in Ittingen by Jerome Scheckenbirli, Prior of Basle in 1526:

Graduale Carthusiense. Praesentem librum donavit Domui Sancti Laurentii in Ittingen Ord. Carth. venerabilis pater Hieronymus Scheckenbirli Prior Basile Anno Domini 1526. Circa Festum S. Marci I.H.S. Propter gloriam nominis tui Domine libera nos et propitius esto peccatis nostris propter nomen tuum Psal. 78.

Ittingen is now known as Chartreuse. The Church of S. Laurence and a convent of the Augustinian order were built in 1128 and sold, on account of poverty, to the Carthusians in 1461, who drove out the nuns. It was burnt in 1524 and reconstructed at the time of the Counter-Reformation.

Of earlier date than this inscription is a series of special Masses in honour of S. Margaret written on a vellum slip and pasted on the inner board at the beginning: In die reliquiarum beate Margarete, In solemnitate beate Margarete, In festo commemorationis beatissime Margarete, Missa infra octavas. The same hand which has written the Masses inserts S. Bruno and S. Margaret in the Litany and S. Bruno in the Sanctorale, and these facts would seem to point to connections with a Carthusian nunnery dedicated to S. Margaret, possibly at Basle.

In the Sanctorale at the feast of S. Maurice a supplementary rubric has been added both by an early and a late hand, sub honore Auganensium Martyrum. This refers to Agaunum, the Benedictine monastery of S. Maurice in the Canton Valais.

There are a number of 17th and 18th century additions, all of which follow the Carthusian Use.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is a fairly good specimen of Gothic, with elaborate red and blue penwork initials at the beginning of the different sections. There are also some interesting verse initials in black, with occasional touches of green ornamented with small, delicate penwork faces.

Litany. Martyrs. Photinus [Lyons], Hyreneus [Lyons], Ferreolus and Ferrucius [Besançon], Benignus [Dijon], Guibaudus [Cambrai].

Confessors. Justus, Lupicinus, Eugendus, Ypolitus, Claude [all of Condat], Taurinus [Evreux], Robert, Bernard, Philibert [all Benedictine].

Virgins. Blandina and Consortia [Lyons], Radegund [Poictiers].

Most of these names belong to the Jura district and the south, but there seems to be some connection with Evreux and even with Flanders. In addition to the large number of saints connected with the Abbey of S. Claude, in the Kalendar, S. Claude appears in the Memoriae (ff. 106 v and 107), and is represented in a picture as archbishop. I am doubtful of the identity of Simon, Count of Champagne (3 Oct.). One Simon, Count of Crépy, was a Benedictine of S. Oyand, 1077-1082. Nor can I identify the Church of S. Peter, the dedication of which is observed on 22 August as an important feast.

Two shields, bearing the arms of the original owners of the ms., are inserted into many of the borders. One bears the arms of the Viry family,¹ the other that of Viry and Des Clets quartered.¹ Both are Genevois names, but I have not succeeded in identifying the actual owners of the quartered coat.

According to a note in his own hand, Laing bought the book at Sotheby's. It has the sale number 180.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is Gothic, good and uniform. The ornamentation consists of burnished gold initials on blue and lake grounds, line-endings, floriated initials, Kalendar illustrations, and miniatures with borders. The borders are composed of blue and red or blue and gold acanthus scrolls, with flowers, fruit, birds, and grotesques executed either on plain vellum or dull gold. The pictures are extremely crude in drawing and colour, but the perspective of the landscape backgrounds is good. They suggest the influence of Rouen in details.

Miniatures:

January. Two men and a woman feasting. Aquarius. A cherub on a rock pouring water out of a jar.

February. Man, warming himself, is served with bread and wine by a serving-man. Pisces. Two fish in river.

March. Pruning vines or trees. Aries. Ram feeding.

April. Young man with flower and hawk. Taurus. Bull feeding.

May. Young man and maiden riding. Gemini. Twins, half-length in tree.

June. Sheep-shearing. Cancer. River landscape, crab.

August. Opening of wine cask. Virgo. Maiden with laurel wreath and palm branches.

September. Treading grapes. Libra. Scales.

October. Sowing. Scorpio. Scorpion suspended above landscape.

November. Swincherd about to kill pig. Sagittarius. Centaur.

December. Heating the oven. Capricornus. White he-goat caught in thicket.

1. Fol. 13. Matins. Tree of Jesse, each of its seven branches showing a crowned king emerging from a flower, while the Virgin and Child, within a mandorla, emerge from the central stem.

2. Fol. 26. Lauds. The Visitation.

3. Fol. 37. Prime. The Nativity.

4. Fol. 44. Tierce. The Angel and the Shepherds.

8. Fol. 97. Service of the Dead. Burial scene in which a gravedigger, standing in the grave, is lowering the shrouded body into it. At the head of the grave a priest in full surplice and blue cope with red and gold orphrey is reading the service from a book. On his L. a clerk in amice and alb holds a gold processional cross. Behind the priest are mourners in black cloaks and hoods. In the background is a porch of a church in flamboyant style of architecture.

Provenance. The Use is Roman. In so far as the Kalendar is distinctive, it points to S. Omer.

Kalendar. 8 June, Red, S. Omer en fleurs; 25 June, Red, S. Eloy; 25 Aug., Red, S. Louis Roy de France; 5 Sept., Red, S. Bertin Abbé; 9 Sept., Red, S. Omer Evesque; 9 Oct., Red, S. Denis; 1 Dec., Red, S. Eloy; 14 Dec., Red, S. Nichase.

Litanie. Not really distinctive, but includes S. Louis among the Confessors, and S. Gertrude among Virgins.

The spelling is northern, i.e. Franchois, Mikiel, etc.

The arms inserted in the border on f. 20, and repeated within the initial on f. 119, On a field argent, 9 choughs sable (unidentified), must belong to a possessor of the book, but whether to the original owner is doubtful. That it was written for a lady seems to be indicated by the feminine forms in the prayer O intemerata, f. 117.

Writing and Illumination. Written in a fair pointed hand common in Flemish mss. of the latter part of the 15th century. The ornamentation consists of burnished gold initials on lake and blue grounds, blue, lake, and gold rectangular line-endings, larger floriated initials, and eight miniatures with full borders composed of feathery branch work, flowers, fruit, and acanthus scrolls. Blank leaves have been inserted for several miniatures which have been lost. The subjects of the pictures, which are very flat in effect, are as follows :

1. Fol. 20 v. Matins of the Virgin. Annunciation. Shield inserted in border.

2. Fol. 30 v. Lauds. Visitation.

3. Fol. 41 v. Prime. Nativity. Some fine diaper in background.

4. Fol. 46 v. Terce. Angel and Shepherds.

5. Fol. 50 v. Sext. Adoration of the Magi.

6. Fol. 54 v. None. The Presentation.

7. Fol. 58 v. Vespers. The Flight.

8. Fol. 87 v. Service of the Dead. The Raising of Lazarus. Christ, cross-nimbed with orb, one disciple with him, the three Maries with Mary Magdalene in front, Lazarus rising from the grave. Fine diaper background.

Provenance. The hand is an unusual one, and, though the ms. is unsigned, comparison with a signed ms. in the possession of Mr. S. C. Cockerell shows that it was apparently written by Petrus Antonius Salandus of Reggio, who worked at Bologna.¹ The coat of arms² in the first border is that of the Manzoli family of Bologna, for whom Mr. Cockerell's ms. was also written.

The Kalendar yields further evidence in support of the above, the distinctive names being: 20 May, S. Bernardinus Gold; 4 Oct., S. Petronius [Bp. Bologna] Gold; 10 Oct., S. Cerbonus [Bp. Verona]; 28 Nov., S. Prosper [Bp. Reggio]. The Litany also celebrates S. Petronius and S. Prosper, so that all the internal evidence coincides.

Mr. Cockerell's ms. is dated December 1496; it is, if anything, more carefully written than this book, and is probably of earlier date. Internal evidence as to the date is found in a collect following the Litany (f. 146), Omnipotens sempiterne Deus miserere famulo tuo papae nostro I. This might refer either to Pope Innocent VIII (1484-92) or to Pope Julius II (1503-13). On the whole, the later reference seems to be the more likely from the appearance of the book.

There are some later indications of ownership. An inscription on the fly-leaf, Catalogue de Mr de Macarti au No. 106 page 11 vendu [. . .] il contient 16 miniatures, would suggest its having been in the MacCarthy Reagh Collection, but in the Catalogue of this Library³ No. 106 refers to an entirely different book. Mr. Cockerell thinks it is probably a MacCarthy binding. Two pencil entries, probably made by Laing, are found on the fly-leaf, £200 and £25 (v. lowest).

Writing and Illumination. A very finely written ms. in a distinctive round hand with certain characteristic letters, the rubrics being in dull gold. The verse initials, plain Roman capitals in dull gold on square grounds of blue, red, or green, are exceedingly effective. Psalm initials are similar but larger, and on alternate red and blue grounds with white tracery. Sectional initials occupy from five to seven lines; are of dull gold enclosed within a double square frame of red, green, or blue, outlined in gold, and are either floriated in the centre with conventional or natural flowers, or historiated.

Historiated Initials :

1. Fol. 13. Hours of the Virgin. Within initial D, which is of lake on gold ground, Virgin and Child, landscape background. Manzoli arms in border.
2. Fol. 123. Penitential Psalms. Similar initial, and within it David seated, playing on his harp. Landscape background.
3. Fol. 149. Service of the Dead. Within a gold initial on a red and gold scroll ground, a skull lying on grass, blue sky behind. Border with skulls, arabesques, etc., on black ground.
4. Fol. 202. Hours of the Cross. Initial, gold, on a red and gold scroll ground within a green frame. Within it a gold cross on a green hill stands out against the sky.
5. Fol. 207. Hours of the Holy Ghost. Initial, gold, on a red and gold scroll ground within a blue frame. Within it a dove, against the sky, nimbed and rayed, flames rising towards it from below.

All the initials are enclosed within regular arabesque borders in Renaissance style.

Provenance. This is an English book showing English illumination of the early part of the 15th century at its best. The Kalendar and Litany are of the regular Sarum type. The occurrence at the beginning of the Hymn of S. Katherine of Alexandria, along with the feminine prayer at the end of the Psalms of the Passion (see above), possibly indicate that its first owner was a lady named Katherine, but it is to be noted that the hymn seems to have been an afterthought, the initial letter being left unfinished. The erasure of the name of S. Thomas of Canterbury from the Kalendar and of his Memoria from Lauds shows the book to have been in England in the first part of the 16th century. There is an interesting series of birth entries, on f. 135 v, of fourteen members of a family named Babham, or more probably Babhram, dating from 31 May 1451 to 30 October 1474.¹ The dates prove this family to have been early, if not original, owners of the book.

There is another signature on a fly-leaf at the beginning, Franciscus Bodley [Bidle] natus fuit in anno domini millesimo quingentesimo trecesimo secundo, and it bears the further inscription, Gift of Mr. Thomas Douglass, Doctor of Medicine 1679. In the record of donations no further details are given about this donor. A tradition exists connecting the ms. with the Convent of Scientes, but this probably rests on the evidence of the hymn at the beginning, which is wrongly attributed to S. Katherine of Siena. There are no other traces of Scottish connection.

Writing and Illumination. The script is Gothic, large, clear and dignified. The illumination, which consists of initials, line-endings, borders and miniatures, is of the finest description.

Hic incipiunt igitur mortuorum p.

Circumdederunt me dolores mortis: pericula inferni. invenerunt me tribulationem: et dolorum inueni: et nomen domini invocam. Domine libera animam meam: misericors dominus: et misericordia eius semper misericordia. Custodiens parvulos dominus: humiliatus sum: et liberavit me. Conseruare animam meam in re quiem tuam: quia dominus benefecit tibi.

Initials—Verse initials are of burnished gold on square grounds of blue and lake; Psalm initials (two line) in colour, on backgrounds of burnished gold, their centres either floriated conventionally in lake, blue, green, vermillion, or containing finely executed heads in wedgwood blue or red, some of a grotesque nature. Many are probably portraits drawn from life, and are the most striking characteristic of the ms. Historiated initials are described below.

Line-endings—The Litany has abundance of these in the form of bands of blue and lake with white tracery and gold ornament.

Borders—Each page of the ms. has a partial border formed of two bands of burnished gold and either lake or blue, with clusters of interlaced, curling foliage at the corners and feathery branch work with spoon and cup-shaped terminals springing from either end. There are also eleven full borders of similar design, but much more elaborate, with circular bosses of foliage, much burnished gold, and brilliant colour.

Historiated Initials :

In this ms., as in most Sarum Horae, the Hours of the Cross are combined with the Hours of the Virgin, and the series of pictures is the one usually found illustrating the Hours of the Cross. The initials for Matins, Terce, Evensong, and the Penitential Psalms are missing.

1. Fol. 13 v. Lauds. The betrayal. Christ, cross-nimbed, followed by Peter, nimbed and tonsured, sword raised in the act of cutting off Malchus's ear, and one other disciple. Malchus has fallen at Christ's feet. Judas gives the kiss, soldiers in mail with swords and torches.

2. Fol. 30. Prime. Christ before Caiaphas. Christ, nimbed and bound in centre, four soldiers behind, one carrying a short mace. Caiaphas seated on red and gold dais with canopy, robe of blue and ermine, conical hat. Black and gold ground.

3. Fol. 35. Sext. Christ bearing the cross. Christ, thorn-crowned, naked, and bleeding, carrying a tau cross, led by a figure in yellow robe, followed by soldiers. Lake and gold scroll ground.

4. Fol. 37. None. Crucifixion. Christ on tau cross, Jew with spear, the three Maries and S. John L., the disciple supporting the Virgin, Jew in conical hat speaks to soldiers R., ground strewn with bones. Black and gold ground.

5. Fol. 43. Compline. The entombment. Two Jews, S. John, Simon the Cyrenian, and four women place the bleeding body in a stone tomb, leaden sky behind.

6. Fol. 55 v. Gradual Psalms. David in prayer. Gold hand of Deity emerges from blue cloud above. Scarlet and gold scroll ground.

7. Fol. 62 v. Litany. The Father, nimbed, seated on red throne, holds before him the Son on a tau cross. Six apostles kneel on either side, six cherubs' heads in blue cloud surround the Father.

8. Fol. 70. Service of the Dead. Scarlet and gold scroll ground. Coffin in centre, covered by black herse-cloth, powdered with gold sprays and rings, divided by a broad white cross the whole length and breadth. Two large brass candlesticks with heavily moulded bases and cups, containing yellow tapers lighted, stand one at each end of the coffin, and two similar but smaller candlesticks with tapers, one on either side. On one side are mourners in black cloaks and hoods, on the other a priest, in blue-apparelled amice, alb and blue cope powdered with white flowers, holds a sprinkler in his L. hand, and is apparently making the sign of the cross with extended thumb and two forefingers of his R. hand, while reading from a book held open by a clerk in a surplice. Behind him is another priest similarly vested. Other clergy are in the background, and another mourner stands near them.

9. Fol. 102. Commendation of Souls. Two flying angels bear a soul upwards to heaven from an open stone tomb below. Head and shoulders of the Deity surrounded with flame-coloured mandorla, hands and face yellow as flame, a blue starry cloud with two blue cherubs above.

10. Fol. 114. Psalms of the Passion. The Resurrection. Two winged angels lift the bleeding body of Christ from the tomb. Black and gold scroll ground.

11. Fol. 123 v. Fifteen Oes. Pieta. Lake and gold scroll ground.

Provenance. This is an English book, probably written for use in the diocese of Lincoln, but the illumination is French, and possibly the hand also.

Kalendar. The Lincoln connection is to be inferred from the feast of S. Hugh (17 Nov.) being in red and having its Octave noted, and also from the Translation of S. Hngh on 6 Oct. SS. Guthlac (11 Ap.), Ossitha (7 Oct.), and Pelagia (8 Oct.) are also consistent with Lincoln connection. S. Paulinus (10 Oct.) belongs to York, and does not occur usually in Lincoln books, and, taken with the rest, which include other names found at York, suggests the extreme north of the diocese. The Kalendar also contains a foreign element, e.g. S. Gertrude (17 March), S. John Hermit (19 March), S. Willibord (7 Nov.). Although S. David, the Visitation, Transfiguration, the Holy Name, and S. Winifred are absent, S. Chad (2 Mar.), Trans. S. Etheldreda (17 Oct.), and S. Frideswide (19 Oct.) are present. S. Valentine, Bp., is specified. The entry 'Edwardi virginis' (18 March), though indicating S. Edward the Confessor, is probably for S. Edward, K. and M., whose Translation is on this day. 'Balbini Episcopi' (31 Mar.) seems to be a mistake for 'Balbino virginis.' 'Johannis ante portam latinam' (13 May), the Octave day, is perhaps a mistake. This day was kept with an Octave at Meissen and Schwerin. S. Leufrid (21 June) occurs at Durham, Exeter, Winchester, and York; S. Grim bald, Abbot of Winchester (7 July), at Exeter, Winchester, and York. S. Margaret Virgin on 13 July instead of on 20 July is common in German rites, but not elsewhere. S. Filibert, Abbot of Jumièges (20 Ang.), occurs at Winchester, S. Albans, Sherborne, and in France; S. Evurtius, Bp. of Orleans (7 Sept.), occurs at Exeter and York. S. Mellonus, Bp. of Ronen (22 Oct.), is chiefly in French books. S. Germanus, Bp. of Capua (30 Oct.), is found at Exeter, Worcester, and York.¹

The erasure from the Kalendar of the name of S. Thomas of Canterbury and of his Memoria from Lauds shows that the book was in England in the early part of the 16th century. The pencil additions, which include the names of S. Donan and S. Giles, show Scottish connections, but are by quite a modern hand. There is one record of a marriage on 20 April, A.D. 1559 hora x Crystofar Ken and ladye E. Belwyth ma. Certain additions have been inserted on paper slips apparently in the 17th or 18th century, the headings of which are in French. The same hand has inserted the Stabat Mater and reinserted S. Thomas of Canterbury in the Kalendar, and may possibly be the owner of the initials 'A. G.' on f. 1.

Writing and Illumination. The illumination is certainly by a French hand, and possibly the script also. It may have been executed by a Frenchman in England or in France for an English owner. The hand is Gothic of a good type. The ornament consists of initials, borders, and miniatures within initials. Verse initials are alternately blue and gold, with very fine red and blue penwork. Psalm and Collect initials are interesting, the letters being burnished gold on square grounds of blue and lake, their centres filled with fine pen drawings of human heads, flowers, birds, etc., in gold on a dark lake ground. Initials of sections occupy six lines, and are either historiated or floriated in blue, lake, and green on a gold ground. In addition the sections are marked by complete borders of feathery branch work, combined with acanthus foliage, animals, birds, or wild flowers in natural colours.

Miniatures :

These are either in roundels enclosed by plain gold bands, illustrating the Kalendar, or within initials. The Kalendar illustrations are as follows:

January. Man warming himself at fire in room with latticed windows.

February. Pruning trees.

March. " " [?]

April. Man bearing green branch.

May and June missing.

July. Corn harvest.

August. Threshing with flail.

September. Treading grapes.

October. Sowing.

November. Feeding swine with acorns.

December. Killing pig.

Historiated Initials :

1. Fol. 40 v. Memoriae at Lauds. The Holy Spirit. On a scarlet ground, the Dove rayed, with cross-nimbus in which are two nails.

2. Fol. 41. S. Michael. The saint, scarlet-winged, in armour, stands upon a dragon, transfixing it with sword.

3. Fol. 41. The Holy Cross. Crucifixion.

4. Fol. 42. SS. Peter and Paul. Two saints with sword and keys.

5. Fol. 42 v. S. Andrew. Saint with cross and book.
 6. Fol. 43. S. Laurence. Vested as a deacon in alb, amice with blue apparel, dalmatic with short sleeves and narrow gold orphrey and scarlet maniple shown by mistake on R. instead of L. wrist. He carries a book of the Gospels in his R. hand, a gridiron in his L.
 7. Fol. 43 v. S. Stephen. Vested exactly as above, with three stones in his hand.
 8. Fol. 44. S. Nicholas. Vested as a bishop in alb, red, close-sleeved dalmatic, blue cope embroidered with gold, no orphrey, with gold morse and white mitre, a crosier in his L. hand, his R. hand blessing the three children.
 9. Fol. 45 v. All Saints. Ten nimbed saints, one with papal tiara.
 10. Fol. 46. Pro Pace. Interior of a church, showing an altar with the figure of a layman (possibly the owner) kneeling near the north side. The altar is vested in a red frontal embroidered with gold and a green frontlet from which hang two short apparels, one near each end of the altar. The mensa is covered with a linen cloth. A blue panel, the exact length of the altar, and about the same height, powdered with gold stars within a gold line running round the edge and possibly representing an embroidered textile upper frontal, takes the place of the reredos. Red riddels or curtains hang close to each end of the altar from brass rods projecting one at either side of the reredos. Standing on the altar immediately in front of the reredos is a large crucifix, which rises not only above the reredos but above two small windows in the east wall behind, being, like the figure of the layman in the foreground, entirely out of proportion to the altar. Both figures were presumably drawn of large size to enable the artist to show them in sufficient detail in a small miniature. The altar stands on a wooden footpace, on which rests the layman's hat.
 11. Fol. 46 v. Matins of the Cross. The betrayal.
 12. Fol. 51 v. Prime of the Cross. Christ before Pilate.
 13. Fol. 59. Sext of the Cross. Christ bearing the cross.
 14. Fol. 63. None of the Cross. Crucifixion.
 15. Fol. 68 v. Vespers of the Cross. The descent from the cross.
 16. Fol. 74. Compline of the Cross. The entombment.
 17. Fol. 89 v. Ad Crucem Christi. Three empty crosses on a green mound.
 18. Fol. 90. Ad Caput Christi. Head and shoulders of Christ with crown of thorns and cross-nimbus.
 19-23. Fol. 90 onwards. Prayers to the Five Wounds. Initials containing the hands, the Five Wounds, and the feet of Christ.
 24. Fol. 180 v. Gaude Flore Virginali. Virgin and Child.
 [The miniature for Terce of the Cross is missing.]

Provenance. Originally this seems to have been a regular Sarum Horae written for a masculine owner. Neither Kalendar nor Litany are really distinctive, but additions to the Kalendar prove that it went to Yorkshire very early, and the entry on 8 April of the marriage of John, son of Sir Brian Roucliffe of Cowthorpe, Yorks, and Margaret, granddaughter of Sir William Plompton,¹ shows that it probably belonged to the Roucliffe family.

The additions in question are all by one 15th century hand, and are as follows :

8 April. Matrimonium factum fuit inter Johannem filium Briani Roucliff et Margaretam filiam Willelmi filii Plompton militis apud Colthorpe A.D. 1644 et Regis E. iiiii¹ quarto, littera dominicalis G.; 8 June. Sci Willelmi Eboraci Arch.; 17 June. Sci Botulphi abbatis. Eclipsis universalis A.D. 1433; 17 Oct. Sancte Etheldrede Virginis non Martyris; 19 Oct. Sancte Frideswide Virginis non Martyris.

On f. 54 there is further evidence of Yorkshire connection in the name Richard Banke of Wsixlye Yorke (16th century).

On the fly-leaf is a long, almost illegible, inscription and two names, Thomas Hall and Ralph Hall, referring apparently to later owners.

and Assistant Keeper of the Record Office, is noted, Codicibus suis addidit W. H. Black, 4 September 1830, and Laing enters the record of its purchase by himself at Mr. Black's sale, London, July 1873. It is described in the Sale Catalogue,¹ and noted as having been bought by 'Saunders' (for Laing) for £2.

Writing and Illumination. The script is Gothic of a fair type. The ornamentation consists of the usual blue and red pen-work initials, larger initials in burnished gold on blue and lake grounds, and complete or partial borders consisting of two bands of gold and colour surrounded by feathery branch work. Many of these are missing.

Provenance. The general appearance of this book, the kind and quality of the illumination, together with the occurrence of the unusual Hours of S. Ninian, suggest that it is a Scottish book. Rev. E. S. Dewick possesses a Book of Hours containing the same Service of S. Ninian, the only variation being in the Collect.¹ His ms. has Deus qui populos pictorum, which occurs also in the Arbuthnott Missal. The present ms. has D. J. C. filii dei vivi qui beato niniano praedilecto confessori tuo. The Aberdeen Breviary has a variation of the former, beginning, Deus qui hodiernam diem beati niniani.

The insertions (noted as they occur in the Contents) are by various Scottish hands, the most interesting being a vernacular rubric or indulgence for a special prayer not included. It occurs on f. 128 v, and reads as follows :

*Quhasaev[er] otherys his orisoun
 Ilk day with gud devocioun
 Our lady sal nocht thyle him dee
 Wnstre wyn weil wyt zee
 In Aragon it prowit sa
 A clerk to dede was ordanit to ga
 Hai ordanit to strik of his hed
 Je clerk he deit nocht in pat stede
 Perfyte and haly of his gilte
 He was confessit as our lady wylte
 His myracle apnit i^mc^c iiiii^y and nyne
 In Aragowne na lange syne.*

altogether. It contains comparatively few names, but seems to be connected with Rochester. This is to be inferred from the entries on 10 June, S. Ythanari Epi (red), and 10 Oct., S. Paulini Epi (red). S. Ythamar was bishop of Rochester and S. Paulinus of Rochester and York. There are three feasts of S. Cuthbert—13 Feb., Cuthberti Epi (red), an unusual date; 20 March, Cuthberti Epi et Conf. (red); 4 Sept., Translacio Cuberti. The Litany is not significant.

The book does not seem to have been written for a woman, but two special prayers are inserted, both in late 15th century hands, one on f. 62, for a lady called Beatrice, another on f. 75 v, for famula tua Victoria.

On the fly-leaf at the beginning can just be deciphered Iste liber pertinet Johannis Thompson [.] . .] (16th century). On the same leaf is the table of Festis and fastin days commandit be the Kirk from January to September, apparently added in the 17th century, by the same hand which inserts explanatory titles to the pictures.

The MS. was presented to the Library in 1670 by George Purves (entered in the book of donations as divinity student). He afterwards became minister of Glencorse.¹

Writing and Illumination. A Gothic hand, with laterally compressed letters. The illumination consists of Verse initials—alternately blue and red and gold and black filigree; Psalm initials—two line, burnished gold on grounds of blue and lake; Sectional initials—five line, floriated in blue, lake, vermillion, and green, on grounds of burnished gold and colour, combined with full borders; Line-endings—blue and gold scroll; Borders—surrounding the miniatures and enclosing the first page of each section. These last seem to be imitations both of French and English work of the 15th century. The broad bands of conventional foliage or pleated spiral design are English in type, while the feathery branch work of gold ivy-leaf or roundel combined with flowers and fruit seem as typically French. None of the work is of the best quality, and it resembles the hybrid work of Scottish books of the period.

Miniatures :

1. Fol. 15 v. Matins. Annunciation. Under a canopy the Virgin kneels by desk, Gabriel kneels facing her L. with scroll Ave . . . tecum, a lily pot between them, head and shoulders of Deity, nimbed and rayed, with orb, in blue cloud above. Lake and gold chequer ground, floor of scarlet tiles.

2. Fol. 44 v. Terce. Same background. Angel and shepherds. Three shepherds feed their sheep on a green oasis among sandy hills, flying angels seen against red and gold chequer ground, with scroll Gloria . . . Deo above.

3. Fol. 54 v. Evensong. Presentation. Apsidal building. Virgin, followed by Anastasia with doves, presents the Child, naked, cross-nimbed, to the high priest behind the altar. A second priest is with him. The altar has a red frontal with two small gold apparels, and is covered by a white linen cloth which comes a few inches over the edge. An outline cross is embroidered in the middle. No attempt is made to represent Christian vestments, and the adaptation to circular form is an attempt to represent an altar of the old covenant.

4. Fol. 62 v. Salve Virgo. Virgin and Child, throned on a pink stone wall in a flowery meadow, three winged angels, two of whom present golden chalices, kneeling. One angel is represented in a scarlet garment with openings at the side like a bishop's chimere, through which the arms project, vested in the close white sleeves of a rochet or alb. The Virgin is crowned, the Child cross-nimbed, and a halo of starry rays surrounds their heads. Scarlet background.

5. Fol. 67 v. Obsecro te. Descent from the cross. Lake and gold chequer ground. Virgin seated on a scarlet cushion at the foot of the cross, Christ upon her knees. S. John supports His head, and a winged angel is seen behind. The Virgin's feet are upon the rainbow and the orb.

6. Fol. 72 v. *Hours of S. Ninian.*¹ Lake and gold chequer ground. S. Ninian vested as a bishop, in amice with blue apparel, full alb, red dalmatic, blue chasuble lined with green, with a thin gold-shaped orphrey and a high, pointed mitre. In his R. hand he holds a large book with clasps, the back being in his hand, the fore-edge uppermost. The hand is fettered with a massive chain of ten links. In his L. hand he holds a gold crosier with a small knob, from which rises an exceptionally large head, which divides, after the first turn, into two volutes, the one curved to the R. within the circle of the head, the other to the L. outside it. The head is crocketed. On the saint's R. kneels a layman in a blue robe with a large black purse hanging from his girdle, and on his R. shoulder a small red hat to which is attached a long red scarf or liripe, the longer end of which rests on the ground. On his L. the kneeling figure of a winged angel holds up an object like a golden chalice.

7. Fol. 76 v. Prayer of Bede. Same background. Image of Pity. Our Lord rising from the empty tomb but represented as undergoing His Passion, supported by angels and surrounded by all the instruments of the Passion.

8. Fol. 79 v. Penitential Psalms. Judgment. Same background. Our Lord in glory, throned on rainbow, wearing a green robe, showing the five wounds, and with a rayed nimbus, His feet resting on the orb. A seraph with a trumpet is represented on either side, bearing the scrolls Surgite vos mortui and Venite ad judicium. The Virgin and S. John kneel on either side below, and four figures are seen rising from graves.

MS. 42, No. 6

9. Fol. 90 v. Gradual Psalms. Same background. Virgin, nimbed, ascends the steps of the temple reading. Joachim and Anna follow her at a distance. The temple is represented as a conventional church, built of ashlar masonry, with plain square-headed windows, a low-pitched roof, with a small cross in the gable and a deep buttress at one side. The gable end is almost entirely occupied by a large plain elliptical-headed doorway, through which can be seen part of an altar, vested in a pink frontal with a short golden apparel near one side, hanging from beneath the linen cloth which slightly overhangs the edge, occupying about the space of a frontlet. A green riddel curtain hangs from a rod at the north end of the altar.

10. Fol. 101 v. Service of the Dead. The centre of the picture is occupied by the coffin, which is covered by a blue herse-cloth, powdered with a conventional ornament which may be intended for flowers or stars. It has a long white fringe and a small white cross on the top in the middle. Around it are four lighted candles of twisted yellow wax in brass candlesticks, the only one fully shown having iron tripod feet. In the foreground two mourners in black cloaks, hoods, and veils are seated on a bench which is covered with a green cloth. In the background to the R. is a large wooden desk, over the middle of which is loosely thrown a plain pink desk-cloth. A large choir book is open on the desk, and three clerks, in surplices or albs and copes, are represented as singing the service from it. The copes are pink, green, and blue respectively. They have no orphreys, are made of thin material, which hangs in large folds, are fastened by small gold morses, and have large hoods which extend from the morses round the shoulders behind. The form of the copes is that of the black choir cope ('cappa nigra'), rather than of the rich silk cope ('cappa serica'), of the period. Or they may be described as being like the copes shown in 13th century illuminations. The rest of the background on the L. side is occupied by an altar, vested in a red frontal, powdered with gold spots, having two gold orphreys or apparels hanging from beneath the linen cloth which falls over the edge of the altar in front to about the same depth as the frontlet, and is embroidered with a somewhat large outline cross with a short stem, shown in the centre of the mensa. Behind the altar rises a low reredos, taking the form of a 'table' or picture within a rectangular frame and containing small gold figures of saints. From each end of the reredos projects a brass rod turned up at the end, from which a green riddel curtain is suspended by laced cords.

11. Fol. 129 v. Commendation of Souls. Same background. In the centre of the picture two angels, represented as winged half-length figures, bear up a sheet by the four corners, containing three souls, who are represented as young, sexless beings. Above, in the heaven, the Deity is seen in a blue cloud of cherubim.

Provenance. External evidence shows the ms. to be of North French execution, possibly from Rouen or neighbourhood, but its contents, notably Kalendar, Litany, and Memoriae, are fundamentally English with strong French influences, and the Kalendar has a number of Scottish names. The Hours are according to the Sarum Use. One may conclude that the book was executed in France for a Scottish owner. It was bound and presented to the library by George Mosman, Stationer, 16 July 1692.

Kalendar. This is interesting as showing clearly English, French, and Scottish connections, but the arbitrary arrangement of the colouring (alternate blue and red) destroys some of the significance of the names. The Scottish saints commemorated are: 9 Jan., S. Felan [Fillan]; 13 Jan., S. Kentigern; 5 March, S. Baldred; 17 March, S. Patrick; 24 March, S. Dongard; 31 August, Trans. S. Ninian; 16 Sept., S. Ninian. The English names include the ordinary Sarum saints in gold, and S. Oswald, Bp. of Worcester and Archbp. of York, S. Wulfram [Worcester], and S. Wilfrid, Archbp. of York. The French names are mainly connected with N. France, especially with Angers.

The Litany shows only English and French influences. There are no names of Scottish saints.

The Memoriae include S. Thomas of Canterbury (twice), and a rubric for S. Ninian, though the Service itself is missing.

Writing and Illumination. The script is Gothic, good and uniform. The ornament consists of illuminated initials, line-endings, borders, and miniatures. Verse initials are dull gold on square grounds of blue or red with gold penwork. Psalm initials are greyish white on dull gold grounds with a single flower in the centre. Sectional initials are larger, but of the same type. The line-endings are composed of plain bands of blue and red with gold line tracery. Each page has a partial border down the outer margin, consisting of flowers and fruit in natural colours and acanthus foliage in blue and gold, arranged occasionally in geometrical designs with flat gold background. Where there is a miniature, large or small, there is always a full border similarly executed, but with birds, animals, and grotesques occasionally introduced, and sometimes conventional acanthus foliage in greyish white.

Miniatures :

January. (a) Man feasting at a table. (b) Aquarius pouring from two pitchers.

February. (a) Man sitting by a fire, servant bringing a bundle of wood. (b) Pisces, in stream.

1-3. Fol. 13. Sequences. Picture of S. John missing. Pictures of the other evangelists with their symbols inset in the text.

4. Fol. 15. Obsecro te. Three-quarter-page Pieta with S. John, Mary Magdalene and two other Maries. Cross with landscape and city in the distance behind.
5. Fol. 18 v. O intemerata. Inset in text. Half-length Virgin nourishing Child.
6. Fol. 22. Virgo templum. Virgin and Child enthroned. Winged angels with harp and lute kneeling on either side.
7. Fol. 25 v. Gaudie flore virginali. Coronation of the Virgin. Virgin and Child in gold mandorla against azure sky with stars, crowned by two flying angels.
8. Fol. 28. Matins. B.V.M. Annunciation. Within a Gothic-arched chamber Virgin kneels at desk L. Gabriel, winged, with scroll, wearing an apparelled amice, alb, and large rich cloth of gold dalmatic with bold pattern, kneels R., a lily pot between them.
9. Fol. 34. Lauds. Visitation. Mary and Elizabeth greet one another; two angels in cloth of gold follow the Virgin; hilly landscape, city and lake in distance.
10. Fol. 40. Memorie at Lauds. All inset in text. The Holy Ghost. Descent of the Dove, nimbed with flame, upon the Virgin and the Twelve in the upper room.
11. Fol. 40 v. Trinity. The Father, with cross-nimbus of rays, orb and cross in L. hand, R. hand blessing, seated with the Son, cross-nimbus of rays, bearing the Cross and showing wounds in hands and side; the Dove, with a circular nimbus enclosing a cross, between them.
12. Fol. 41. S. John Baptist. The saint, nimbed, bearing the lamb in his arms, in a rocky, hilly region.
13. Fol. 41. SS. Peter and Paul. Two saints, nimbed, with their emblems, keys and sword, each carrying a book.
14. Fol. 41 v. S. James. The saint, nimbed, with staff, satchel, and open book.
15. Fol. 42. S. Stephen. Vested as a deacon, in amice with gold apparel, alb, and blue and gold shot dalmatic, stoned by two men.
16. Fol. 42 v. S. Laurence. Vested similarly, but with red dalmatic, carrying a book of the Gospels in one hand and a gridiron in the other.
17. Fol. 43. S. Thomas Martyr. His martyrdom. S. Thomas in amice with gold apparel, alb, and blue chasuble with gold orphrey, stands on a wooden footpace in front of an altar which has a plain grey front, apparently without a frontal, but with a deep scarlet frontlet embroidered with gold. The mensa is covered with a fair linen cloth which hangs down over the south end of the altar. On the middle is spread the corporal, and upon it stands the chalice, in front of which lies the paten. An open book lies on the south side of the altar. Behind the altar is a low reredos consisting of a large panel on which are two images. At each end of the reredos red riddel curtains, powdered with gold spots or stars, hang from rods which are turned up at the ends. A clerk in alb and amice is at the south end of the altar. Two murderers in armour, one cleaving the saint's skull.
18. Fol. 43. S. George. Saint in gold and silver armour with red cross, mounted on white charger, attacks dragon with his spear. Princess kneels in the distance beside a lamb grazing, castle in background.
19. Fol. 43 v. S. Nicholas. Vested as bishop, in amice and alb, red dalmatic, blue cope with gold orphrey, white mitre, holds in his R. hand a crosier, while with his L. he blesses the three attendant children.

20. Fol. 44. S. Mary Magdalene. Saint bearing her alabaster box of ointment.

21. Fol. 44 v. S. Margaret. Saint clad in blue and red, holding a gold cross, is represented in the jaws of a green and gold dragon.

22. Fol. 45. S. Katherine. Saint crowned, bearing palm branch, wheel behind her, transfixes the Emperor Maximian, who lies prone beside her, through the head with a sword.

23. Fol. 45. All Saints. Deity with orb and cross, enthroned, surrounded by a red and blue cloud of cherubim and seraphim. The Virgin and S. John on raised dais at either side. A crowd of saints of every type around, including SS. Peter, Paul, Stephen, Mary Magdalene, Katherine, Barbara; a pope, a cardinal, a soldier, a bishop, etc.

24. Fol. 45 v. Peace. Deity in triple tiara, nimbed, with jewelled robe, bearing orb and cross; angels on either side.

25. Fol. 45. Matins of the Cross. Inset. Crucifixion.

26. Fol. 47. Prime. The Nativity. Virgin and S. Joseph adoring the naked babe in a mandorla of rays on the ground. Two gold angels kneel behind, the ox and the ass in manger L., two shepherds looking over wattled enclosure.

27. Fol. 50 v. Terce. Angel and shepherds. Three shepherds, two with crooks, one with bagpipes, a woman fondling a sheep, a dog, groups of sheep. Gold angel in cloud above with scroll; city, river, and hills in the distance.

[The beginnings of Sext, None, Evensong, and Compline missing.]

29. Fol. 94. Service of the Dead. The interior of a church, showing Mass for the Dead. In the foreground the coffin, with a pointed top, is covered by a blue herse-cloth powdered with gold flowers and marked with a large gold cross extending its whole length and breadth. At the intersection of the arms of this cross a plain rectangular yellow panel, which may be an additional cloth separate from the herse-cloth, is marked with a cross. Four lighted tapers of yellow wax stand in brass candlesticks, two on either side of the coffin. At the west end of the coffin is a large wooden book desk at which four clerks, in full surplices with narrow sleeves, and embroidered copes with gold orphreys, two of which are red and one blue with a green lining, are singing the service. In the background on the L. is the altar. It is without a frontal, and the grey front of the altar is visible, having a plain sunk panel. There is a deep blue frontlet embroidered with gold, but without fringe. On the mensa can be seen the chalice. Behind is a low reredos with the central part raised and a sunk panel carved with a crucifixion and attendant saints. At the south end a blue riddel curtain, powdered with gold spots or stars, is pushed back to make room for the deacon who is standing at the south end of the altar with one arm resting upon it. Before the altar is a wooden footpace, on the middle of which stands the celebrant, and at the north end of which the subdeacon is kneeling facing south. The sacred ministers are vested in amices with gold apparels, albs, and red chasubles, dalmatics and tunicles, which are plain except that the chasuble has a narrow Ψ cross orphrey.

30. Fol. 112 v. Domine Deus Omnipotens. Trinity. Father, seated with Son upon his knees, naked and showing wounds. The Dove rests on their shoulders.

31. Fol. 117. Mass of S. Gregory. S. Gregory kneels before an altar on which stands the Image of Pity, supported from behind by an angel. The altar is without a frontal, and is of plain grey material, presumably stone, with a moulded plinth, the front and end having single plain sunk panels. There is a deep blue frontlet embroidered with gold without a fringe. The mensa is covered with a linen cloth which hangs about halfway down the end, is not fringed, but appears to be embroidered with plain bands. On the middle of the altar is the corporal on which stands the chalice, and an open book lies on the south side. There is a low reredos with a sunk panel, on which is a series of small carved figures. At each end of the reredos pink riddel curtains powdered with gold rings hang from brass rods turned up at the ends. On the footpace S. Gregory is kneeling, vested in amice with gold apparel, alb, blue dalmatic, pink chasuble lined with green, with narrow Ψ cross orphrey, white tiara with three crowns. Behind him kneel deacon and subdeacon in amices with gold apparels, albs, and plain blue tunics. Two cardinals are behind them, and the instruments of the Passion are in the background.

32. Fol. 125 v. Memoria of the Holy Face. S. Veronica with the Holy Face, rayed, on a white cloth.

[Beginning of S. Jerome's Psalter missing.]

33. Fol. 141 v. Rhymed Memoria of S. James. Saint seated with book, staff, and wallet.

34. Fol. 142 v. S. Christopher. Saint in midstream with Christ-Child on his shoulders. The Child holds orb in L. hand and blesses with R. Ferryman on R. bank holds lantern.

35. Fol. 144. S. George. Saint in gold armour, silver shield with red cross, white charger, smiting a green dragon. The princess kneels behind with lamb beside her. King and queen look down from battlements behind.

36. Fol. 145. S. Adrian. Saint in golden armour with blue cloak, red cap, sword, silver anvil in L. hand, lion at his feet.

37. Fol. 145 v. Memoria of S. Thomas Martyr. Same treatment as No. 17 (f. 43), but a larger and finer picture with a little more detail.

38. Fol. 147. S. Sebastian. Saint in the act of being bound to a tree, two men shooting at him with arrows.

39. Fol. 148 v. S. Erasmus. His martyrdom. He lies naked, fastened in a windlass, which is worked by two men, king and three nobles look on; hilly scenery.

40. Fol. 150. S. Francis. Saint in brown robe receiving the stigmata, scarlet-winged, crucified Christ suspended above.

41. Fol. 150 v. S. Barbara. Saint with palm branch standing beside tower. [Probably six miniatures at least are missing.]

Prose of the Virgin. O Domina piissima.
Praycr. Je te depreie dame saincte Marie (inserted).
Memoriae. SS. Stephen, Medard, Drochon, Sebastian, Holy Trinity, Assumption, Michael, John Baptist, John Ev., Jerome, Augustine, Angelus, SS. Gregory, Ambrose, Magdalene, All Saints, Peter and Paul, Maturin, Christopher, 11,000 Virgins, Susanna, Katherine (inserted)	167

Provenance. The Use is that of Sens, and the general appearance of the book suggests Parisian illumination, but neither Kalendar nor Litany are distinctive.

The Memoriae, which appear to have been added in a late 15th century hand, include the names of two unusual saints: S. Drochon (died at Sébourg), and S. Maturin, Bp. of Arles (died at Larchant on the borders of Mayenne).

On a fly-leaf at the beginning are some 15th century entries referring to a family of the name of Choillot.

The ms. was presented with the Mackay Collection in 1912.

Writing and Illumination. A good Gothic hand, well spaced, and with wide margins. The ornamentation consists of burnished gold initials on blue, lake, and white grounds, rectangular line-endings to correspond, and fourteen miniatures with ivy-leaf borders.

Minatures :

1. Fol. 17. Matins. Annunciation. Fine miniature. Virgin with halo stands to the L. under a canopy of scarlet and gold. Head of Deity in cloud of cherubim speaking. S. Gabriel, scarlet-winged with lily rod, kneels before her; fine diapered ground, blue and gold. The initial below has a Virgin and Child. In the corners of the ivy-leaf border are three winged angels, each with a stringed instrument (harp, violin, zither). This border has a piece of fine grisaille work showing a hound coursing a hare.
2. Fol. 30. Lauds. Visitation. Red and gold chequer ground. Mary and Elizabeth meet on the top of a pale yellow mountain.
3. Fol. 44. Prime. Nativity. Blue and gold scroll ground. Virgin in scarlet bed with curtain, Child cross-nimbed in manger, ox and ass feeding, S. Joseph stirring a posset over a brazier.
4. Fol. 50 v. Terce. The Angel and the Shepherds. Three shepherds with crooks like hockey-sticks, dog and sheep on a pale yellow conical mountain against blue sky. Angel with scroll.
5. Fol. 55 v. Sext. Adoration of the Magi. Blue and gold diaper ground. Two kings crowned, one kneeling with crown off, another carrying box; one of the kings points to a star.
6. Fol. 60. None. Presentation. Red and gold scroll ground. Simeon takes Child from Virgin, S. Anastasia with the doves, S. Joseph.
7. Fol. 64 v. Vespers. Flight. Blue and gold diaper ground. Virgin and Child on white ass, Joseph with bundle; hilly road of a pale yellow colour.
8. Fol. 72. Compline. Red and gold chequer ground. Virgin and Christ crowned and nimbed, seated together on yellow seat.
9. Fol. 79. Penitential Psalms. Red and gold chequer ground. Our Lord in glory, with gold nimbus and cross, the orb in L. hand, the R. hand raised in blessing, seated on a throne. In the background, one on either side, are two altars, of pale magenta colour, without frontals, the fronts having each a single large sunk panel without ornament. Low reredoses rise behind, panelled and coloured exactly like the front. The altar on the R. has a linen cloth with stripes across the end and falling slightly over the edge of the altar in front. About the same height as the reredos, and leaning against it, are what seem to be intended for two Tables of the Law, thus indicating that the altar represents the Jewish Church. The altar on the L. has a similar linen cloth, but with fringed end and double stripes, upon which stands a large gold chalice with mullet-shaped foot, covered with a folded corporal upon which lies a circular object apparently intended for the Host. This represents the Christian Church.

- 10. Fol. 90 v. Hours of the Cross. Crucifixion. Blue and gold chequer.
- 11. Fol. 102 v. Hours of the Holy Ghost. Pentecost. Blue and gold diaper ground. The Twelve Apostles with S. Peter and S. Paul in front, a Trinity in the cloud above (Father and Son holding chalice, the Dove between).

- 12. Fol. 107. Fifteen Joys. Virgin and Child. Blue and gold scroll.
- 13. Fol. 114. Seven Requests. Blue and gold scroll ground. Christ throned on rainbow, blue robe, cross-nimbus, showing wounds.

14. Fol. 119. Service of the Dead. Blue and gold chequer ground. Coffin in centre with pointed top covered with scarlet herse-cloth embroidered with gold. The ends of the two wooden stools upon which the coffin rests are seen projecting from beneath the herse-cloth, which falls between them in heavy folds. Round the upper part of the herse-cloth at the edge of the coffin lid is a deep red and gold fringe, and a large white cross is attached to the middle of the herse-cloth lying along the ridge of the coffin lid, falling over it at the ends and at the sides, but not reaching to the border of the cloth. This cross appears to be represented as attached to the herse-cloth only for part of its length. Around the coffin stands the unusual number of six brass candlesticks holding short yellow tapers lighted. A brass holy water stock and sprinkler are also standing on the floor. Beyond the coffin a group of three clergy in black copes with gold orphreys are standing singing from a book on a wooden desk. The desk is on a movable arm, adjustable as regards height upon a wooden screw at the top of the stand. One of the clergy is wearing large spectacles. Behind is a group of mourners in black cloaks and hoods.

Provenance. Both Kalendar and Litany appear to belong to the diocese of Toul. The Use is unidentified, but may be Toul also.

Kalendar. 19 Ap., Leonis Pape Tullen. Epi.; 23 Ap., Red, Gerardi Tullen: Epi.; 11 May, Red, Gengulphi M. [Toul]; 14 June, Trans. S. Mansueti [Toul]; 3 Sept., Red, Mansueti Prius Epi. Litany. Martyrs. Gengulphus [Toul].

Confessors. Esuberius [Exuperius ?], Florentinus, Gerard, Mansuetus, Aper, Amon [all of Toul].

Virgins. Libaria [Ghent], Ursula, Monica, Gertrude, Walburga.

of France, and in 1499 his successor, Louis XII. External evidence suggests that the book must have been written for her after her marriage with Louis XII. It is curious, however, that none of the prayers have feminine forms.

The book seems to have been in the possession of a family named Remiel throughout the 17th century. The inscription on f. 1, Le septieme Novembre 1596 sont les presentes heures venues en partage au Balthasar Remiel Chancellier de Ma [.] des biens delaissés par feu Jeanne Bertrand sa mere grande, lesquelles le dict Remiel a donné à Barbe Remiel sa fille aisnée pour souvenance de la defunte et affin quelle au memoire dicelle en ses praves [?] le dict vi^e Novembre an susdict 1595, E. [?] Remiel, records the way in which it came into their possession, and the carefully erased notes in the Kalendar record its possession by the Remiels as late as 1682. I have found no information about this family.

Laing records that it was given to him by Robert Mercer, Esq., as a keepsake. The sale entry on the fly-leaf, which contains a not very accurate description of the ms., gives its price as £15, 15s.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is good throughout. The pictures are elaborate and interesting, though rather decadent in type, and the border work shows an extraordinary variety of treatment.

Miniatures :

1. Fol. 15. Matins. Annunciation. Under a gold canopy the Virgin kneels beside desk, Gabriel with lily and scroll facing her.
2. Fol. 25. Lauds. Visitation. Virgin and Elizabeth salute one another. Landscape background.
3. Fol. 35 v. Prime. Nativity. The Virgin, S. Joseph, the ox and the ass adore the Babe, who lies naked in a halo, a rosary in his hands.
4. Fol. 43. Terce. The Angel and the Shepherds. Three shepherds, one with bagpipes, scarlet-winged angel with scroll, good landscape background.
5. Fol. 48. Sext. Adoration of the Magi. Usual picture. One of the kings is black.
6. Fol. 53. None. Presentation. Virgin, S. Anastasia with doves, S. Joseph, three other figures, and the high priest Simeon receiving the Child upon the altar.
7. Fol. 57 v. Evensong. Flight. Usual picture, fine landscape background.
8. Fol. 64 v. Compline. Coronation of the Virgin.
9. Fol. 71. Hours of the Holy Ghost. Pentecost. Virgin enthroned in centre, apostles kneeling on either side, Dove descending.
10. Fol. 76. Hours of the Holy Sacrament. The Last Supper.

11. Fol. 81. Penitential Psalms. David crowned in courtyard of castle, playing harp, three small dogs beside him.
 12. Fol. 100. Sequence. S. John in Patmos, with cagle and scroll, writing.
 13. Fol. 103. Service of the Dead. Job and his three friends, each with a musical instrument, pipe, zither, etc.

Provenance. Both Kalendar and Litany are of Cologne, and Memoriae also.

Litany. Apostles. S. Matthias.

The Three Kings.

Martyrs. SS. Pontian, Lambert, George, Albinus, Maurinus, Pan-thaleon, Gereon and Companions.

Confessors. SS. Severinus, Kunibert, Heribert, Anno, Lutger, Servace, Willibrort, Egidius.

Virgins. Walburch, Geirdruyt, Dorothea, Ursula.

Memoriae. The Three Kings, Erasmus, and Ursula.

The provenance is, therefore, clearly Cologne, most of the important saints of that diocese occurring in both Kalendar and Litany, and again among the Memoriae. The feast of the Three Kings has special prominence throughout.

There is an inscription on f. 1 in a modern hand, Zum Geburts-tag seiner cousin Ottilie geschenkt. [.] . .]

Writing and Illumination. The writing is clear, black, and uniform, and besides coloured capitals and illuminated initials of subsections, each section has, along with a full-page miniature, a large initial on a gold ground elaborately floriated in blue, pink, vermilion, green, magenta, surrounded by a floral border, with conventional foliage, natural flowers, birds, etc., mingled with roundels and scroll work of gold.

Miniatures. The book contains seventeen full-page miniatures, with probably one wanting. These are all rectangular, enclosed within plain bands of colour, and painted upon backgrounds of plain burnished gold. The figures and draperies are good.

The subjects are as follows :

1. Fol. 1 v. Before Kalendar. The Holy Face. Head beautifully drawn and shaded.
2. Fol. 14 v. Horae B. V. M. Annunciation. Virgin kneeling by wooden desk with book and scroll, Ecce ancilla . . . verbum tuum. Gabriel, lavender robe, green and pink wings, kneels L., bearing lily rod and scroll, Ave gratia . . . tecum. Dove descends on Virgin. Green and pink tiled floor.
3. Fol. 60 v. Horae S. Crucis. Crucifixion.
4. Fol. 72 v. Horae de S. Spiritu. Pentecost. Virgin with book, and apostles, all gold nimbed against a blue ground, nimbed Dove descending. Red and orange tiles.
5. Fol. 95 v. Penitential Psalms. Judgment. Christ in glory, seated on rainbow, pink robe, showing marks of wounds. Virgin and S. John kneeling on clouds at either side, four figures rising from graves, two women and two men.
6. Fol. 120 v. Memoriae. SS. Peter and Paul. S. Peter, pink and blue robe, with keys and book; S. Paul, green robe, with sword. Red and orange tiles.
7. Fol. 121 v. S. Christopher. Saint in midstream, pink and green robe, with staff, bearing the Child, whose R. hand blesses while his L. carries the orb. Peasant with lantern on bank.
8. Fol. 122 v. S. George. Saint in gold armour bearing white shield with red cross, stands on green fire-breathing dragon and transfixes it. Pink and green tiles.
9. Fol. 123 v. S. Anthony. Saint in pink and black robe, high hat, bearing staff surmounted by cross, and book. Pink and green tiles.
10. Fol. 124 v. S. Katherine. Queen in pink robe, bearing sword and wheel. Red and green tiles.
11. Fol. 125 v. S. Barbava. Saint in blue robe with martyr's palm, tower by her side, stands on grassy hill.
12. Fol. 126 v. Service of the Dead. The coffin stands on wooden trestles just visible beneath the plain loose blue herse-cloth. Upon its flat top lies what appears to be a wooden processional cross, with staff painted red and head silver. Around it stand four lighted tapers of yellow wax in large brass candlesticks with heavily moulded cups and bases. The heads of two mourners in black hoods are just visible kneeling upon the farther side.
13. Fol. 127 v. Prayers for the Week. Christ in scarlet robe showing wounds, bearing resurrection banner, steps from tomb.
14. Fol. 180 v. Mass of S. Gregory. S. Gregory kneels before an altar upon which is standing the Image of Pity. The altar is vested in a plain pale heliotrope frontal which is gathered or pleated at the top, and covers the end as well as the front of the altar. A deep fringe of red, blue, and green goes round the front and end below the edge of the mensa in place of a frontlet. It seems to hang from a narrow gold border attached to the fair linen cloth which only covers the actual surface of the mensa. Below the frontal at the end of the altar a moulded stone plinth is just visible. Before the altar, and of the same length, is a wooden footpace divided into two steps. Upon the mensa is a golden chalice in the middle, a brass candlestick with a lighted candle at each side, and a wooden desk supporting an open book on the L. Behind the mensa rises a low reredos, with a single plain panel, the central part of the whole being raised. At the end of the reredos is a green riddel curtain. S. Gregory is kneeling on a scarlet cushion below the footpace, and is vested in alb, unapparelled, amice with short apparel, and pink chasuble with gold Ψ cross orphrey. Behind, an assistant, apparently in a cope, holds the papal tiara, and in the background are the instruments of the Passion.

15. Fol. 183 v. The Three Kings. Virgin with Child, cruciform nimbus, seated in flowery meadow, three kings with their gifts around her, one kneeling, one black.

16. Fol. 185 v. Erasmus. Figure is standing in unapparelled alb, amice which seems to be apparelled, plain scarlet dalmatic with gold border, blue cope with gold border and gold quatrefoil morse, white mitre and gloves, holding a crosier to which a short vexillum is attached. In the background is seen a windlass, the instrument of his martyrdom.

17. Fol. 190 v. S. Ursula and her Maidens. Queen, with spear and palm, shelters under her cloak four maidens. Red and black tiles.

Provenance. The Kalendar, Litany, and one Flemish rubric establish a Flemish provenance, and seem to point further to Thérouanne and S. Omer.

Of later indications of ownership there are several :

1. A book-plate of the Duke of Sussex. The ms., however, does not appear in his Catalogue, Bibliotheca Sussexiana, 1827.
2. Signature on f. 1, Wm. Pierce, Mayus iv 1823.
3. Note on fly-leaf, Presented by Vice-Admiral Sir Ross Donelly, K.C.H.

Writing and Illumination. Both are very rough. There are burnished gold initials and some attempt at floral borders.

Seven Masses to be said in time of difficulty, stress, or heartache .	173
Prayers to S. Anne. Ave Santa Anna	175
Prayer of Confession	175 v

Provenance. The book would seem to be North German, from the dialect of the prayers (ff. 172 et seq.) and the presence of S. Wilhad and S. Ansgar in Kalendar and Litany. It has also strong Swedish and Danish connections. Possibly it was written for Schleswig.

Kalendar. 30 Jan., Aldegundis V.; 17 March, Gertrudis V.; 3 June, Erasmi M.; 4 July, Odalrici M.; 8 July, Kiliani M.; 11 July, Ketilli C. [Wiborg]; 29 July, Olavi R. M. Red; 23 Oct., Severini Ep. [Cologne]; 30 Oct., Theodgari C. [Jutland]; 8 Nov., Wilhadi C. [Bremen]; 19 Nov., Eliz. Vidue Red; 20 Nov., Berwardi C.

Litany. Martyrs. Alexandri, Victoris, Erasmi, Henrici [Upsala].

Confessors. Anscharii [Hamburg and Bremen], Severini, Galle, Alexius.

Virgins. Walburgis, Gertrudis, Helene, Birgitte [Sweden].

The book contains some names of owners. On f. 72 v the name apparently of the original owner is written in gold, Johannes Hartenstein. On ff. 178 and 181, Sum liber Gualteri a Schevichaven, Johannes a Schevichaven. The last may possibly be Johannes Hartenstein himself. All the prayers are for a masculine owner.

Writing and Illumination. The script is very good and uniform. The ornament consists of plain blue and red verse initials, Psalm initials alternately blue, red, or gold, and sectional initials of blue and red filigree.

49. PRAYER BOOK AND BOOK OF HOURS. Laing 665.

Latin and Italian, vellum, $5\frac{1}{8}'' \times 3\frac{5}{8}''$, ff. 64, 14 and 15 lines to a page. Cent. xv (late), Italian. Binding: Modern red morocco, gold tooling, entitled 'Preces Piae.'

Provenance. The Litany is Italian, as are also the hand and the illumination. The arms of the original owners, the Nobili family of Florence,¹ are incorporated in the first border. The volume also contains the book-plate of Count D. Boutourlin, Senator and Director of the Imperial Library at Petrograd. He seems to have lived for some years in Florence, where he doubtless bought this book. A Catalogue of his library was published in Florence in 1831, in which this ms. is described.² The library was sold in Paris c. 1841. The next clue to its history is a note on the fly-leaf, Dering Sale, No. 835, 15th July 1865,³ possibly written by Laing, for whom it seems to have been purchased there. The Sale Catalogue records that it was sold to 'Hugo' for £2.³

Writing and Illumination. Written in good minuscule hand with plain red or blue capitals, except in the prayers at the end, which have burnished gold letters on a square ground of lake, blue, and green. There is one miniature in the initial at the beginning, showing David with his harp, and a fine complete border of vine-leaf design, blue, lake, green, and gold, with a green parrot. The coat of arms is inserted in the lower margin.

Martyrologium secundum usum Ecclesie Aberdonensis	25

The Obits and the Scottish entries in the Martyrology have been printed in the Proceedings of the Society of Antiquaries, Scotland, vol. ii, part 2, pp. 256-72. The Scottish entries in the Martyrology appear also in Forbes's Kalendars of Scottish Saints, p. 127, and a partial List of the Scottish and Irish Saints in the ms. is printed as an Appendix to the Preface to the Aberdeen Chartulary printed by the Spalding and the Maitland Clubs.

Provenance. The Kalendar is almost identical with that of the Aberdeen Breviary. The Obits seem to connect the book directly with the Cathedral Church of Moray at Elgin.

It would appear, from entries at the end, to have been owned successively by Alexander Gordoun, Patrick Dunbar, and James Spens. The following inscriptions are found : Per me Patritium Dunbar manu propria Amen. This buk pertinns to Alex. Gordoun. Per me Jacobum Spens manu propria. An Alexander Gordoun (1516-74) was bishop-elect of Moray and administrator of the diocese of Caithness (1544). Patrick Dunbar appears in the Registrum Moraviense as succentor of Moray in 1532. James Spens may be Sir James Spens of Wormiston (1571-1627).

It was presented to the Library in 1677 by Laurence Charteris, Professor of Theology in Edinburgh.

Writing and Illumination. Written in a large, rather decadent Gothic hand with plain blue and red capitals. One border and several initials are rudely painted in water colour, but it is poorer in quality than even most Scottish work.

51. MISSAL (Use of Toulouse).

D. b. I. 6.

Officium Synodo	57
Ordinary of the Mass	58 v
Canon of the Mass	71

Provenance. The Missal seems to be a variant of Toulouse Use, written for the diocese of Lombès, which was taken from that of Toulouse in 1317.¹ I have not been able to collate it with a Toulouse Missal, but its Sequences are, with one exception, according to Toulouse Use (1553).² The exception is the Sequence for Ascension Day, Rex Omnipotens die hodierna, mundo triumphali redemptor, which is common to most Uses, but not apparently used at Toulouse.² There is no Kalendar, but the connection with Lombès is confirmed by the coat of arms³ on f. i v, which is that of Pierre de Lancrau, Bishop of Lombès from 1561. There are no later marks of ownership save a sale entry apparently of late date.

Writing and Illumination. A large, uniform Gothic hand with blue and red penwork initials, illuminated initials, and one miniature. The illuminated initials are plain Roman capitals in gold, silver, or colour upon square grounds of the same with conventional or natural foliage. The half-page miniature of the Nativity is of a rather decadent Renaissance type.

In dedicatione Ecclesie	174
Missae Votive (Missa pro benefactoribus and Dies Irae added by another hand)	175
(From the Commune Sanctorum to the end is foliated by the original hand in red, i-lxxii.)

Provenance. I am indebted to the Rev. E. S. Dewick for some notes on the provenance of this Missal. He regards it as a variant of Tournai Use, written for the Church of S. Peter at Lille.

Comparison with the Tournai Missal of 1540¹ yields the following results: the Temporale is practically the same in both, but there are considerable variations in the Kalendar, and correspondingly in the Sanctorale.

The Kalendar contains S. Eubertus and his Octave (1 and 8 Feb.), which do not occur at Tournai; S. Eleutherius is celebrated only once (18 Feb.) instead of three times; S. Piatus and his Octave are in a higher grade at Tournai, and the dedication days differ (in the ms. 2 Aug., at Tournai 9 May).

The presence of S. Eubertus in Kalendar and Sanctorale points, Mr. Dewick thinks, to the Church of S. Peter at Lille, where his body was enshrined; and the unusual feast, Oblatio Sancte Crucis Dup. (16 July), may possibly be the commemoration of a gift to the church of a reliquary with a fragment of the 'True Cross.'

Writing and Illumination. It is an exceedingly well-written MS. of a late type.

The ornamentation consists of blue and red initials, one illuminated initial at the Canon and one full-page miniature with border before the Canon, all of which are characteristically Flemish.

The subject of the miniature is the Crucifixion, with S. John, the Virgin, Mary Magdalene, the centurion, and soldiers; a landscape background. Round the miniature is a border of single flowers, viola, vetch, wild strawberry, butterflies, bees, etc., on a dull gold ground. There is a square medallion in the centre of the lower margin with a quatrefoil design. A similar border surrounds the next page, the first page of the Canon.

Benedictio panis, ovorum, herbarum et fructuum (original hand)	257 v

Provenance. The hand is Gothic, of North Italy. The Missal is according to Carthusian Use, and both Litany and Kalendar are Carthusian. The Litany contains no names of local significance, and the Kalendar is very incomplete. Collation with a printed Carthusian Missal of 1771¹ reveals few significant variations except in the Sanctorale. Rubrics in the ms. are fewer and simpler throughout, indicating a much greater simplicity in ceremonial, but in all essentials variations are slight and insignificant.

There is a partially erased inscription on the inner cover, probably of the 15th century, which seems to read, Iste liber est domus sanctorum et Gorgonii [?] et Joannis Evangeliste . . . Pisani dyoc. . . . and, on the end board, the word Pisa can be distinguished, written by the same hand.

This coincides with the addition by the original scribe on f. 241, in the opening Votive Mass, of the words ac beati Johannis Evangeliste et beati Gorgonii Martyris. I have not yet been able to identify any House of this name either at Pisa or elsewhere.

The Benedictions added on f. 256 may indicate that the book was in Ferrara in the 17th century. Further marks of ownership consist of pencil jottings on the inner cover in a modern hand, MS. Misc. No. 8. Missale secundum ordinem Cartusiensem. Fine bold MS. 15th century. Wanting first two leaves of Kalendar, and other leaves probably cut out for the ornaments thereon.

Writing and Illumination. Written in a fine bold Italian Gothic script, well spaced, and with good wide margins. The illumination consists entirely of red and blue filigree initials of varying sizes, those marking the special feasts being most elaborately ornamented.

Kyrie and Gloria 'in sollempnitatibus beate Marie' (noted) . . .	286 v

Provenance. The Kalendar unfortunately lacks eight months. What remains—January, February, November, and December—is Franciscan of Italy. The fact that it does not contain the names of the five Franciscan martyrs, 16 January, suggests that it was written before their canonisation in 1481. The Litany is not distinctive. The feast of the nativity of S. Francis has an illuminated initial in the Sanctorale. Comparison with the Unreformed Roman Missal¹ shows that variations are chiefly in ceremonial, rubrics in the ms. being more numerous and more elaborate, especially in the Canon and Ordinary of the Mass, and, as one would expect, in the feasts of S. Francis.

There are certain 16th and 17th century insertions in the Kalendar which are rather obscure. 2 Jan., Sancti Sbordone; 10 Feb., Apolonia V. et M.; 1 Dec., Inquista di more papa leone x a sei ore de nocte 1521; 2 Dec., Consecratio cimiterii hospitalis fraternitatis Virginis Marie de [...] Nicadrii. This last, which seems of 17th century date, may possibly refer to the Abbey of San Nicandro, near Messina.

According to a note preserved along with the ms., it was in the library of Cardinal Albani, at the sale of which it was bought by Thorpe, for Laing, for £3, 6s.²

² See Sale Catalogue of Cardinal Albani, Sotheby, March 1868. No. 333, B.M. S.-C.S. 588 (2).

Writing and Illumination. Italian Gothic hand, well written. The ornamentation consists of red and blue filigree initials and eighteen large illuminated initials. These last are pale pink and yellow letters, floriated in blue, green, and vermillion, on blue grounds with foliage springing from the corners. On f. 1 this is continued in the margin to form a partial border. In addition to these there is a large miniature representing an Eastern ecclesiastic, pasted on the leaf preceding the Kalendar, which must have been inserted as late as the 17th century.

Colophon—Scriptus hic libellus instantia et impensa Reverendissime Domine Sororis Justine Canosse Abbatissae Monasterii Sancti Michaelis in Campanea de Verona. Die 28 Aprilis a christiana salute 1541.

Provenance. This is fully given in the colophon, which states that the ms. was written by the desire and at the expense of the Reverend Sister Justina Canossa, abbess of the Monastery of S. Michael in Campanea at Verona on the 28 April 1541. The order of consecration differs pretty widely from the Roman form, and also to a greater or less extent from all others which I have seen, and may be peculiar to this monastery. There are no later marks of ownership. One press-mark appears on the inner cover, B 4642, and the number 579 is on a label on the back.

Writing and Illumination. A very clear, uniform Gothic hand, with rubrics and one floriated initial in blue, lake, vermilion, and green on a gold ground.

Psalter (Hebrew version)	f. 1
Prayer 'Domine Jhesu Christe qui in hunc mundum' (added in 14th century)	48 v

Provenance. It is very difficult to determine the provenance of this MS. with any accuracy. It has neither Kalendar nor Litany, nor any mark of ownership earlier than the 16th century when it was in Aberdeen. The usual Canticles are not now found, though they may originally have been included at the end of the Psalter, which is now missing.

The script is Irish minuscule, probably written in Scotland. I was fortunately able to obtain an authoritative opinion upon the date of the script from Professor W. M. Lindsay, who assigns it to the 11th century. His notes upon the MS. are incorporated in an Appendix.¹ Principal Laurie's study of the illumination, with special reference to materials used, leads him to assign a still earlier date.² Of its history little can be discovered. The prayer on f. 48 v and an entry on f. 141 v have been inserted as late as the 14th century, probably by a Scottish hand. Another late insertion is the illumination superimposed on f. 50. The only definite mark of ownership is the inscription on f. 143 v, Liber magister [sic] Johannis Reid Cancellarii Aberdonensis. John Reid was Chancellor in 1537 and following years.¹ He may have added the missing verses at the beginning and end of the Psalter. The book must have been in the Library before 1636, as it is mentioned in a catalogue of that date.

Writing and Illumination. The script has already been spoken of. It is a very fine example of its kind. The ornament consists of large and small initials, line-endings, and a few scrolls in the lower margins, with two complete pages of illumination.

The verse initials have their centres coloured purple, green, blue, yellow, or red. Psalm initials show a considerable variety of fine interlaced work, the terminals being frequently animal heads. All the letters are surrounded by a single line of red dots. The colours used are purple, blue, green, red, and yellow. One initial, on f. 21 v, is in the form of a fish, a somewhat unusual convention in such MSS.

In addition to spiral or triangular scroll line-endings touched with colour, a number of the leaves have in the lower margin a curious elongated grotesque animal form, which seems to resemble the convention known as the elephant symbol found on Pictish stones in Scotland. The frequent occurrence of this form of ornament, together with the fish, which is also found on these stones, may eventually be discovered, in Mr. Ludovic Mann's opinion, to have some significance as connecting the book with Pictland, but as the study of this subject is only now being opened up, this can only be the merest suggestion for further investigation.

As in most Celtic Psalters, there has been the triple division, marked by more elaborate illumination at the 1st, 51st, and 101st Psalms. Unfortunately, however, the first page of the Psalter is missing, and the first leaf of the 101st Psalm is left blank, so that only one of the more elaborate illuminations remains—that at the beginning of Psalm li (f. 50).

Here there are two pages of illuminations, the second of which (f. 50 v) remains as it was originally written, showing the second verse of the Psalm written in six lines of half-uncials on a yellow ground, divided horizontally by narrow bands of purple, blue, and red, a seventh line being filled with the familiar triangular scroll pattern, and the whole surrounded by a good interlaced border.

The recto of this leaf has originally been similarly treated, for the outer edge of an interlaced border can still be seen, but over it has been superimposed a late imitation of English 11th century work. 'Quid gloriaris' is written in capitals, the rest of the verse in minuscules, in gold upon a dark background of blue-grey clouds framed in double lines of gold. The date of this insertion is difficult to determine. It may not improbably belong to the same period as the prayer inserted before it, i.e. to the 14th century.

Unfortunately the margins are badly cropped, all catchwords having disappeared, and a few of the initials have been partially mutilated.

Canticles and Quicunque vult	148
Litany	161
Service of the Dead (Prayers have both masculine and feminine forms)	168 v

Provenance. The Kalendar of this Psalter shows direct connection with Worcester. It contains the Translation of S. Oswald, Bishop of Worcester and Archbishop of York, on 8 Oct., and the Translation of S. Wulstan on 7 June. The only other unusual saint is S. Thomas of Canteloup, 2 Oct. (Bishop of Hereford 1275, canonised 1317 and 1320).

The rubric to the 'Gradus Scale Virtutum' (f. 5) shows that, though English, the book was written for a church which did not follow Sarum Use.

The Litany is not of special interest, but it has, in addition to the usual collects, the following :

Per horum omnium sanctorum Angelorum; Gloriosa passio domini nostri Jhesu Christi; Deus qui es sanctorum tuorum.

There is an inscription of the 15th century on f. 168, as follows : Memorandum quod istum Psalterium cum Kalendario et aliis in principio praescriptis cont[inet] usque huc XVI [.] et X capitales littere de auro.

Of its later history we learn from notes on f. 1 that in 1810 it was in the possession of William Mavor, LL.D., Rector of Stones-field, Oxon.¹ He seems to have procured it from the Wenman Library, Thame Park, Oxon., when it was dispersed in the beginning of the 19th century. Laing acquired it in 1866.

Writing and Illumination. The writing is large and rather coarse, the vellum not of the best quality. The Kalendar and Psalter are by one scribe, the earlier portions by another contemporary hand. The ornament consists of red and blue filigree initials to verses and Psalms and historiated initials at the regular divisions of the Psalter. To each historiated initial a partial border of blue and lake, cusped and ending in branches of ivy and vine foliage or grotesque half-human figures or heads, is attached. But all save four of these initials have now disappeared. The work, on the whole, is rather poor for this period.

Historiated Initials:

1. Fol. 46 v. Dominus illuminatio. David crowned, pointing to his eye, kneels before an altar vested in a pleated frontal with a deep fringe hanging from the very narrow frontlet. Upon the altar stands a cross. Burnished gold ground.
2. Fol. 93 v. Exultate Deo. David, crowned, plays on four bells. Burnished gold ground.
3. Fol. 106 v. Dixit Dominus. Trinity. Father and Son, both cross-nimbed, both holding orb in L. hand and blessing with R., seated on a long bench. The Dove rests above them. Burnished gold ground.
4. Fol. 148. Confitebor tibi Domine. Figure kneeling in prayer before similar altar with cross. Both frontal and cloth which covers the mensa of the altar are represented as being of rich figured material. Burnished gold ground.

The beginning of Beatus vir with initial has been inserted by a modern owner, with some attempt at imitation, but in penwork only.

Kalendar	f. 1
Psalter (wants Ps. xcvi 1—Ps. xcvi 9; Ps. xlvi 5—Ps. xlvi 24)	7
Canticles and Quicunque vult (incomplete)	116

Provenance. The Kalendar is English, probably Sarum. The occurrence of S. Erkenwald twice, 30 April and 14 November (in red), points to London. Other significant names are: 25 Feb., S. Ethelbert, C. [Kent]; 20 May, S. Ethelbert [East Anglia]; 28 Feb., S. Oswald, C. [Worcester and York]. There is unfortunately no Litany. The illumination is distinctively English. The occurrence in most of the borders of the figure of a kneeling bishop suggests, along with the other evidence, that it possibly belonged to a bishop. The prominence of a hind and an eagle in all the borders may or may not be significant.

On the first vellum fly-leaf at the beginning is an inscription, Ex libris Jacobi Smart 1698. Both fly-leaves and many of the margins in the body of the book are full of medical lore, prescriptions, etc., all in a 17th century hand.

Writing and Illumination. The script is a very clear small Gothic, the vellum fine, and the illumination good. The verses have blue and gold penwork initials and line-endings of blue and gold scroll throughout. Each Psalm has a two-line initial of burnished gold on a background of blue and lake, and each has attached to it a marginal border consisting of two narrow bands of blue and gold with feathery branch work and gold ivy leaves springing from the centre and corners. The initials to the divisions of the Psalter occupy eight lines of text, are historiated, and accompanied by full borders of elaborate design. The borders are formed of broad bands of gold and colour with foliage curling round them, surrounded by feathery branch work, interspersed with starry flowers and ivy leaves. At the upper R. hand and lower L. hand corners in each case there is an eagle bearing a scroll, Da gratiarum munera. At the lower R. hand corner a pink hind lies upon the grass and bears the same scroll. In all the borders but one a bishop kneels in prayer above the eagle in the L. hand corner, bearing a scroll generally uninscribed, but in one case (f. 52) bearing the words Deum time. The initial to

Ps. xcvi is missing, and the margins are very badly cropped, so that the borders in many cases have suffered.

Minatures:

The subjects are rather unusual. Each miniature has a background of crimson and gold scroll.

1. Fol. 7. Beatus Vir. The Father crowned, centre, the Son L., nimbed and showing the marks of wounds, David crowned, R., each with one hand on a book on their knees, the other blessing.
2. Fol. 23. Dominus Illuminatio. David slays the lion in the sheepfold.
3. Fol. 33 v. Dixi custodiam. David slaying Goliath.
4. Fol. 42. Dixit insipiens. David, bearing Goliath's head on his sword, meets two women at the gate of the city.
5. Fol. 52. Salvum me fac. God crowned, with sceptre, seated by the side of a river, David carrying his harp in mid-stream.
6. Fol. 65. Exultate Deo. Priest in green robe, blue hat, marrying a king and queen, two men blowing trumpets at either side.
7. Fol. 90. Dixit Dominus. David crowned, with harp, five attendants.
8. Fol. 116. Confitebor tibi. Floriated initial with floral border.

Kalendar	f. 1
Psalter (wants Ps. xxiv 14—Ps. xxv 4; Ps. 19—Ps. lii 4; Ps. lxxxix 19—end of Ps. lxxxii)	7
Canticles and Quicunque vult	112

Provenance. Both internal and external evidence point to English origin, the Kalendar being English and Briggittine, and the illumination English, characteristic of the first half of the 15th century.

Kalendar. Specially distinctive are the following names: in Red—7 May, S. John of Beverley, cum regimine chori (with his Translation, 25 Oct., in black); 28 May, Trans. beate Birgitte, Majus Duplex; 23 July, Nat. beate Birgitte, Majus Duplex; 13 July, S. Mildred.

Other significant entries are: 28 Feb., S. Oswald [Bp. of Worcester and York]; 30 April, S. Erkenwald, ix lc.; 11 May, S. Fremund; 16 May, S. Brendan, Abbot; 4 Sept., Trans. S. Cuthbert, ix lc.

The probability is that it is a Syon book, this being the only Brigittine foundation in England. The occurrence of S. Mildred and S. Erkenwald further suggest London district. There are some curious insertions in a 16th century hand, the significance of which is not clear.

9 Jan., S. Marcyan; 19 Jan., S. Herry [?]; 23 Jan., S. Babile [?]; 6 Feb., S[. . .] oye Virgyn Quoyne; 31 March, S. Arnulph; 2 April, S. Theodosia; 5 April, SS. Agapy, Thyony, and Hereny; 31 Aug., S. Edbrad [Eadbyrht, Lindisfarne ?]; 9 Sept., S. Dorothy.

There is also a 16th century entry in the lower margin under December, Elynor Mowise lowe was borne into yis world upon ye innocentys day in ye mornynge betweyne xii and on of ye cloke ye yere of our Lord 1543. God make her a good woman. ye 25 day of December yan beyng on a Fryday. According to an inscription on a fly-leaf, the MS. was presented to the Library by the graduates of the year 1636.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is Gothic, fairly written. The ornament consists of plain red and blue verse initials; blue and red filigree Psalm initials, and floriated initials, blue and lake on burnished gold grounds, at the divisions of the Psalter. The initial to Beatus vir has a full border consisting of two narrow bands of gold and colour with circular bosses at each corner and feathery branch work with foliage and gold balls. The others have partial borders of similar design. Probably four of the floriated initials are missing.

Contents :

Benedictine Psalter, with noted Anthems and Hymns, and Chapters with their Versicles and Responds, arranged in the following order:
Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays at Prime; Matins and Lauds for the whole week	f. 1
Canticles from the Commune Sanctorum with various Anthems for feasts of Apostles, Evangelists, Martyrs, Confessors, and Virgins, and for use between Easter and Pentecost	141
Short Lessons with Responses for use from Easter to Pentecost; and within the Octaves of Pentecost, Corpus Christi, S. John Baptist, SS. Peter and Paul, Assumption and Nativity	146
Grail of Easter Day. Hec dies (inserted later)	147 v
Sundays at Prime, Terce, Sext, None; Mondays and Tuesdays at Terce, Sext, and None; Regina Coeli; Evensong	149
Compline; Nunc Dimittis; Gloria; Credo	192 v
Litany	197
Agenda Mortuorum	201 v
Hymns for the Year beginning in Advent	207
Commemorations Communes (incomplete)	243

Provenance. Evidence of contents, writing, and illumination show the book to be Italian and Benedictine. Local connection does not appear to be clearly indicated. Certain slight variations from Benedictine Use, e.g. in the Versicles and Responds to the Chapters, and in the Anthems at Prime, etc., may have some local significance.

In the Sanctorale at f. 224 the feast of S. Benedict is headed In festo sanctissimi Patris Nostri Benedicti Abbatis. He heads the list of doctors in the Litany, which also includes S. Placidus, a Benedictine saint, and S. Ansanus (Rome and Siena).

Writing and Illumination. Good, large, uniform, Italian Gothic hand. Besides penwork initials, there are a number of large floriated initials in the Psalter, the colours being blue, green, vermillion, yellow, and lake on square backgrounds of burnished gold with branching foliage, gold roundels and, usually, a bird in the margin. The 'B' of Beatus vir resembles these in colouring, but contains in the upper compartment a figure of Christ, and in the lower a figure of David. There is also a figure of Christ in an initial on f. 169.

61. PSALTER WITH ANTHEMS (Roman Use). Laing 485.

Latin, vellum, $20\frac{7}{8}'' \times 15\frac{1}{8}''$, ff. 153 (+2 end papers), 15 lines to a page. Cent. xvi (early), Italian. Binding: Original, oak boards covered leather, 5 brass studs and corners, and central star all stamped with Christian symbols, 2 brass pins for straps, one strap only remaining, title 'Psalt. Noct. Dom. Feriae II and III' on vellum let into a small brass frame, brass pins round the edges, and vertical wooden supports on back board.

Hymns (Roman Use). At Matins and Lauds of Dedication of a Church; at Lauds on Christmas Day (incomplete); at Lauds and throughout the Octave of the Epiphany (altered to another Use); at Matins on the first Sunday in Lent (beginning erased, verse 5 transposed, and hymn incomplete); at Lauds in Epiphany (Benedictine, not Roman, but has been written over another hymn); to S. Clara (incomplete); at Lauds on Trinity Sunday (wants part of verse 1); at Matins and Lauds of the feast of Corpus Christi; at Matins, Conversion of S. Paul (incomplete)	f. i
Nocturnal Psalter for Sundays, Mondays, and Tuesdays in each week, with noted Anthems, Hymns, Versicles, and Responds (Roman Use)	7
Hymns. For Widows 'Fortem virili pectore'; hymn of which rubric and first verse is missing; hymn at Matins of S. John Baptist's Day (incomplete)	152 v

Provenance. The whole style of the book is Italian. No local provenance is indicated. Among the hymns at the beginning is one to S. Clara suggesting Franciscan connection.

Writing and Illumination. Large uniform, Italian Gothic hand with plain blue and red capitals, some three-line floriated initials in lake, green, and dull gold, and four large historiated or floriated initials, some of which are badly cropped.

1. Fol. 9 v. Beatus Vir. David, head and shoulders, crowned, playing on harp; landscape background. Initial of Renaissance type on square burnished gold ground with branching foliage, prolonged in the margins, colouring magenta, green, blue, vermillion, and gold.

2. Fol. 51 v. Benedictus. Same type of initial, similar colouring, on square ground of blue and gold, filled in centre with conventional hyacinth bud in pot on black ground.

3. Fol. 54. Dominus Illuminatio. Similar initial upon square ground of lake and gold. In centre, against a black ground, flecked with blue clouds, David, crowned, hands crossed on breast, looks up to heaven.

4. Fol. 82 v. Dixi custodiam. Similar initial on square ground of blue and gold. In centre, against a background dotted with clouds, David crowned, with harp, finger on lip.

Kalendar (wants January and December; much mutilated)	f. 1

Invitatory, Venite exultemus (inserted by another hand)	9
Psalter	9 v
Canticles and Quicunque vult	149
Litanies	153
Service of the Dead (incomplete)	155 v

Provenance. Both external and internal evidence point to Flanders as the home of this MS.

Kalendar. January and December are missing, which may explain the non-occurrence of S. Eloy, who occurs twice in the Litany; 5 Feb., Amandus; 8 Feb., Ansbertus [Abbot of Fontenelle]; 9 April, Waldegrave [Abbess of Mons, Hainault]; 10 July, Amelberga [Low Countries]; 5 Sept., Bertinus [Abbot of S. Omer]; 17 Sept., Lambert [Bp. Liége]; 26 Oct., Amandus; 31 Oct., Quintin; 6 Nov., Winnoc [Abbot of Wormhout].

Insertion—10 Sept., Nicholas of Tollentino [Augustinian hermit canonised 1445].

Litanies. Martyrs: Livinus [Apostle of Flanders].

Confessors: Eloy (twice), Ansbert, Amandus, Audomar.

Virgins: Amelberga, Benedicta [Sens].

The Flemish origin of the book is clear. Its subsequent history is unknown. It has Laing's signature and a note to the effect that he bought it as an example of the beginnings of border illumination. There is also on the fly-leaf the signature M. J. Johnson in pencil.

Writing and Illumination. A well-written book. The ornamentation consists of initials, Kalendar illustrations, the subjects and treatment of which are characteristically Flemish of the period, and a series of pictures. Verse initials are plain red and blue capitals; psalm initials, three-line letters of burnished gold, outlined strongly in black, on backgrounds of blue and lake. The letters are prolonged in the margins, showing the beginnings of border work. Three of the larger initials to the divisions of the Psalter have been cut out. Those that remain, with the exception of the 'B' of Beatus vir, which occupies a full page, occupy twelve lines of text, and are all of the same type. The letters are either blue or pale lake, outlined in black, on square grounds of lake or blue outlined in black and gold. Within the letter, against a background of burnished gold, a youthful figure in a blue gown with a red halo is seated, L. hand raised in blessing, R. hand holding a book (either the Psalmist or Christ). In the 'B' of Beatus vir there are two figures. Above, David, crowned, legs crossed, plays harp; below, a bearded figure in blue cloak holds something in L. hand and points with R. This figure is much mutilated, but may be meant to represent S. John the Baptist.

Illustrations of the Kalendar:

January, February, and December are missing.

March. Pruning trees or vines. Here, as in each of the illustrations, the figure is represented in profile on a pink ground framed in gold. The features and drapery are picked out in heavy black lines, and there are touches of green here and there.

April. Man holding up a flower in each hand.

May. Man with hawk on wrist.

June. Man carrying a load of wood.

July. Hay harvest with scythe.

August. Grain harvest with sickle.

September. Sowing.

October. Grape picking.

November. Swineherd feeding swine.

Miniatures:

There are three of these left, evidently part of a series following the Kalendar. They are full-page pictures, each enclosed in a rectangular frame, composed of bands of blue and lake outlined heavily in black, as are the faces and draperies, and ornamented with gold balls at the corners.

1. Fol. 6 v. Nativity. Burnished gold ground.
2. Fol. 7 v. Adoration of the Magi.
3. Fol. 8 v. Christ in glory, seated upon a rainbow, within a blue mandorla, R. hand raised blessing, orb in L., four evangelistic emblems in corners.

63. PSALTER (Incomplete).

Confitebor tibi domine qui iratus , followed by the other five Canticles said on week-days at Lauds	98
Notation of the eight Psalm tones	108
The ferial anthems are included passim , and the chapters, hymns, versicles, responses, and collects of the ferial day hours are added in their places after the corresponding sections of Ps. cxviii, Beati immaculati (Prime, f. 62; Tierce, f. 68; Sext, f. 71; Nones and Compline, f. 78), in smaller lettering and closer lines, often with cues only. The hymn Jam Lucis precedes Ps. cxvii, f. 55 b, and Quicunque vult follows the section Retribue of Ps. cxviii, f. 59.

Provenance. Script and illumination, together with certain Dutch rubrics, e.g. Antiffen, suggest Dutch origin. There is no Kalendar or Litany or other indication of provenance. A sale entry in German, of late date, is pasted on the first fly-leaf.

Writing and Illumination. The script, a rather compressed irregular Gothic, is probably Dutch. The ornament consists of plain blue and red initials with three large filigree initials, red and blue, with red and purple filigree work, and one miniature.

Miniature.

On a rectangular square of vellum, pasted on f. 1, and surrounded by a double line of colour with feathery branch work springing from each corner, within a medallion, the ground of which is punctured silver, is the half-length figure of a bishop in blue chasuble, lined with green, with gold Psi-shaped orphrey, red dalmatic showing underneath, a white mitre and yellow nimbus. No apparel is visible on the amice. He holds a crosier in his R. hand and a heart in his L.

D. b. I. 7.

Latin, paper, $10\frac{5}{8}'' \times 7\frac{1}{2}''$, ff. 137 (including 6 ff. of thick vellum at the beginning and end, and between each volume), 6 and 7 lines to a page. Cent. xvi, Scottish. Binding: Modern yellow calf, lettered 'Antiphonarium Ecclesie Dunkeldensis.'

2 f. [pre]conia preconia nostra

Contents :

A number of Anthems, chiefly in honour of the B. V. M., followed by the Music for the Ordinary of the Mass (Kyrie, Gloria, Credo, Sanctus, Benedictus, Agnus Dei), arranged for five parts and divided accordingly into five volumes, each containing the above material arranged for one part. The Music is Pricksong.

Provenance. This book is said (vide title) to have been used at Dunkeld Cathedral. It very strikingly resembles a much larger ms. in the Advocates' Library¹ which belonged to a canon of Scone, 1513-46, and which Mr. Eeles describes as 'the earliest book of church music of Scottish composition.'²

On f. 103 is written, Robert Dowglas with my hand at the pen William Fische, and the verses on ff. 41 v, 42 may be by the same hand. The volumes are numbered by Laing. There is no clue to how the ms. came into the Library.

Writing and Illumination. Neither hand nor ornament are particularly good. They closely resemble the ms. in the Advocates' Library above mentioned.

Provenance. The Prayer Book was written for a woman, many of the prayers having the feminine forms. The Suffrages, together with the spelling, would suggest the Low Countries or the extreme North of France. There is a Flemish phrase on one of the blank leaves at the end, lijest doet doelen. The only other mark of ownership is a book-plate, Ex libris Gulielmi Fingland. In a recent note on the first fly-leaf the book is inaccurately described as Missal circa 1490, a fine specimen of binding in the Grolier style and exquisitely finished mounts.

Writing. A fairly good characteristic Netherlandish or North French script, with pale lake rubrics and capitals.

Ends f. 139 v. Transit dominus cum de judicio ad regnum reddit.
Deo Gracias. Explicit liber omeliarum doctoris Aymonis Super Evangelia. Marevilh. A. Marevilh.

Provenance. This is a French book. It appears to have been written by one A. Marevil for a member of the family of Marevil of Perigord. The signature A. Marevilh is added at the end of the book in the hand which wrote the whole, and the coat of arms in the border (f. 1) belongs to an abbot of the house of Marevil.¹ The initials W. C. H. in pencil are written on the end board in a modern hand. An earlier inscription in the lower margin of f. 1 has been erased.

Writing and Illumination. Well and uniformly written throughout, with rubrics, blue and red filigree capitals, and one illuminated initial with a complete border at the beginning. The border is composed of flower and acanthus scrolls in blue, red, gold, and natural colours combined with gold ivy leaf. The initial is lake and gold, and there is a small miniature representing the author writing at a desk. The coat of arms¹ in the lower margin may possibly be a later insertion.

Provenance. A Dutch ms. Only one mark of ownership is found on the fly-leaf at the beginning. Frater Joannes Vessa-minus [?] de Tiw [.] me uititur anno 1568 in Tongr [.] The same hand writes a title below this inscription.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is good throughout, but the pages are much stained with moisture. There are red filigree initials, and at the beginnings of Psalms large Gothic letters.

Quid illud Nabugodonosor sompnium juxta litteram designet Ends f. 183 v, vias nostras dirigat, qui sine fine vivit et regnat Amen. Explicit. Deo gracias.

Provenance. The hand is a good example of late 15th century French or Flemish script, the penwork ornament in the initials suggesting Flemish provenance. There is a note on the dates of Hugo and Richard of S. Victor on the fly-leaf in a 17th century hand, and a pencil signature, J. Cam, later.

Writing and Illumination. A good 15th century Gothic hand, uniform and well spaced, with blue and red filigree initials, the two at the beginning of the sections being finely executed.

Ends f. 308 v, ad quem perducat nos Xpe Jhesu feliciter. Amen. Explicit quadruplex expositio ad thess. et pertinet ad Car- thusium in Erfordia.

Provenance. There is abundant evidence in colophons and in inscriptions that this belonged to the Carthusians of Erfurt, and that it was written by the hand of John of Hagen, the author of the treatises, in 1467. F. 1, Hic liber est ordinis Carth: et primo pertinet ad domum ejusdem ordinis quae est Errfordia. F. 125, Carthusiensium prope Errfordiam. End board, Liber Carthusiensium prope Errfordiam. The colophon on f. 47 fixes the date 1467, and the place Erfurt; that on f. 124 v states that it was written per manum Jo. Indaginis; that on f. 308 v adds Pertinet ad Carthus. in Errfordia; that on f. 340 v gives date 1460.

A comparison between this and the other Erfurt books reveals that No. 109 is partly written by him, also that No. 153 has his signature and some notes by him, and that No. 147 has a Tabula and notes in his hand.

The colophon on f. 47 gives information as to the homes of certain other treatises of Hagen. The first, second, third, fourth and fifth of the Expositions he says he placed with the Carthusians in Erfurt, 1470; the sixth in Frankfurt in 1462; the seventh in Stettin in 1464 at the request of the Carthusians at Rostock; and the eighth (that here given) in Erfurt, 1467. A 17th century note inserted here says that the sixth and seventh have perished with the monasteries in Frankfurt and Stettin.

The original binding is here preserved. A 14th century treatise in double columns has been used to line in the boards, and an early 11th century ms. to guard the strings. The book seems to have been in Germany till the early 19th century. It has a label on the back with the number 676.

Writing and Illumination. It is written entirely by John of Hagen himself in a minute hand, very difficult to read, but familiar in the other Erfurt books. There are roughly executed red capitals and quotations, and titles are underlined in red.

Provenance. Probably a Scottish book. Part of an inscription by a contemporary hand on f. 3 reads, ad dompnum Robertum Ferguson monachum et claustralem Dunfermlynensem priorem. The Town Records of Dunfermline show that Robert Ferguson was prior about 1530. There are some bibliographical notes on the ms. in a modern hand bound in with it, and to these Laing adds a note: *This MS. was in the Library collected by Sir Robert Gordon of Gordonston, Bart., and sold by auction in London, March 1816. It was bound along with a work by John Major, 1528. See No. 1541 of the Sale Catalogue.*¹

Writing and Illumination. Written in a fair hand with some roughly ornamented initials at the beginning. The margins are badly cut, and there is some damage from moisture.

 [Another Miracle has been added at the foot of f. 227.]

Provenance. According to the very full colophon the ms. was written by Francisco Cattaneo of Piacenza, in the Benedictine monastery of Padolirone in the diocese of Mantua, in a cell called after S. Justina, on the 10th of October 1477. This scribe attributes the Treatise to Egidius de Roma, rejecting the various authors to whom it has usually been attributed. On the lower margin f. 1 is an 16th century inscription, Est Sancti Xijsti [Sixti] placentini signat: 801. The church of San Sisto dates from 1499, and is the same for which Raphael painted his Sistine Madonna.

The only other mark of ownership is a note on the fly-leaf indicating that the ms. was in the Libri Collection, and is described in the catalogue.¹

Writing and Illumination. Written in a small, neat, Italian hand with plain red capitals, complete and in excellent preservation.

Provenance. The script is probably German, but there are no specific marks. The title, a modern one, shows that it was in a German library up till a late date. Binding in the front board was a fragment from an 11th century book, probably a Psalter now removed and placed among the fragments (MS. 211. xviii).

Writing. Fair Gothic hand, plain red capitals.

Colophon. Hoc opus perfectum fuit per me Philippum de Homodeis in loco viglevani die primo mensis Septembris 1466.

Capitula. Quod sit officium sapientis 228
De statu mundi post judicium.

Provenance. The exact provenance of this ms. is given in the colophon (see Contents), which states that it was finished at Viglevanum on 1 September 1466 by Philippus de Homodeis. Viglevanum, or Viglebanum, is the modern Vigevano in the province of Vercelli, duchy of Milan.

There are no later marks.

Writing and Illumination. A beautifully written ms. with blue and red or red and purple filigree initials to chapters, and four magnificent illuminated title-pages to the books.

1. Fol. 1 v. Book I. A rectangular panel, enclosed by a plain band of gold, flanked on either side by a conventional floriated border of blue, lake, green, vermillion, and much burnished gold relieved by gold rayed discs. The panel is divided into five sections, a central panel with three divisions, and on either side of this a narrow panel with the following figures within elongated gold quatrefoils —L., S. Matthew, S. Mark, S. Jerome (as Cardinal), S. Ambrose (mitred, with scourge), S. Bonus [Bonaventura?] (monk with rosary); R., S. John, S. Luke, S. Gregory (as Pope), S. Augustine (with mitre and book), S. Theodora.

In the top division of the central panel is a small medallion of the Virgin and Child set in conventional foliage. Below this on a gold ground the initial V in lake, blue, and green, containing the figure of S. Thomas Aquinas in Dominican habit seated at wooden desk with book and inkhorn, the figures of SS. Peter and Paul on either side. Below again, on a rectangular panel of burnished gold, a white scroll with the first words of Book I in gold letters. In the lowest section of all, within a medallion encircled by a laurel wreath, is a lady in red and black robe with black coif, reading (possibly the owner).

2. Fol. 38 v. Book II. Within a rectangular frame, surrounded by rayed discs of burnished gold with touches of conventional foliage, a large historiated initial M, and the first sentence of Book II in gold capitals on square coloured grounds. The initial, which occupies almost half the page, is of blue, lake, and green on a background of plain burnished gold. In the centre of it, against a background of shaded blue sky with gold clouds, the author, again in Dominican habit, sits meditating at square wooden desk, a scroll before him, quill in right hand, ruler in left, a small white dove on his left shoulder. The remainder of the page is filled with the first words of the book in Roman capitals on square grounds of green and lake alternately.

3. Fol. 89 v. Book III. Similar in style. Within the initial D, against a background of blue sky touched with gold clouds, the author kneels, and in the sky above Christ on the Cross appears to him. Across the picture in small white letters is a sentence which, if read in a mirror, would read Bene scriptisti de me Thoma. In the lower half of the page is written in two columns of gold capitals, with blue and purple penwork between the lines, the first words of Book III.

4. Fol. 169 v. Book iv. The initial E is in this case much smaller, occupying only a third of one column. Within it, S. Thomas sits in profile at a combined desk and book cupboard, with book, inkhorn, ruler and quill; a flying angel with scroll inspires him. The book cupboard at the back of the desk is open showing two shelves with red books upon them. The opening sentence of the book is written in two columns: the first in gold capitals on alternate grounds of green and lake, the second in smaller letters on the plain vellum with red and purple filigree ornament.

Ends f. 195, vie et patrie ergo dilectio non est dos [. . .]

Provenance. This is not clear. From its appearance the book may be English or French. There is an old 15th century press-mark on f. 1, P. XXI, but no other early mark of any kind. It would seem later to have been in German hands. The binding (probably 17th century) looks German, and one pencil note of more recent date, 194 Blätter, is additional evidence of its having been in Germany.

A Sale Catalogue entry (of unknown date) gives its price as £3, 3s.

Writing and Illumination. A beautifully written ms. in a uniform Gothic hand and very black ink, well spaced with good margins, now partially cropped, on fine vellum. The ornament consists of rubrics, marginal references in red, and good blue and red filigree initials.

Provenance. The colophon on f. 188 v gives the exact details of provenance. The book was written by Brother Nicolas of Neridono [Nardo] in the kingdom of Naples in 1472. It contains a Dominican Litany, with collects following. Its subsequent history is not indicated prior to its acquisition by Laing.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is fairly good, the illumination rather below the average. There are plain red and blue capitals, floriated initials with conventional foliage and gold balls, a few initials with figures and partial borders, and one complete border of a more elaborate kind. Enclosed within plain bands of blue and gold is an oak-leaf spiral combined with feathery branch work. In the lower margin three winged amorini are pointing to a rabbit which sits in the centre eating lettuce.

Provenance. This is a German book. A 17th century inscription on f. 1, Ex Bib. Monasterii Amorbacensis O.S. Benedicti, gives its probable provenance. Amorbach is a Benedictine abbey in the diocese of Wurzburg. A number of the treatises it contains were written by Fr. Sigfrid Slimdlin; the first one, according to the colophon, in Mount St. Gothard, in Switzerland. No. 1 is signed and dated 1466; No. 3 is said to have been rewritten by Fr. Sig-frid, at the expense of Prior Oswald, in 1464. No. 6 is also signed, and Nos. 9 and 11 are dated. A list of the Contents, probably of the 18th century, has been written in the fly-leaf. Part of a fine 12th century Psalter has been used in binding. According to a bookseller's sale entry (date unknown), the price was £1, 11s. 6d.

Writing and Illumination. A good cursive hand with plain red capitals and rubrics.

Incipit tractatus moralis de virtutibus [Gul : Peraldi O.P.] . . .	2 v
Prol. Cum circa utilia studere debemus—de beatitudinibus.
Text. Si seperaveris preciosum a vili	3
Ends f. 195, parentes nostri celestem hereditatem. Tractatus virtutum explicit. Benedictus dominus virtutum qui incipit et perficit. Amen. Amen.
Capitula of above Treatise added in the 14th century	196 v
2. Tractatus de Vitiis. [Wants 8 ff. at the beginning]	198
Ends f. 349, sapientie locutum est aliquando penituit tacere vero iniqua.

Provenance. From its appearance it is difficult to tell whether the ms. is English or French. There is no other evidence of provenance, and no indication of where the Library obtained it.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is good and very uniform throughout, and there are good blue and red filigree initials.

Some of these have unfortunately been cut out, otherwise the book is in good condition. Eight folios are wanting at the beginning of the second treatise according to the 14th century foliation, which makes it difficult to identify. There are marginal notes, and also a Tabula to Part I, both in 14th century hands.

5. Sermones Dominicales Fratris Ferrarri ordinis fratrum predicatorum regentis in theologia	170
In prima dominica post trinitatem:—Mortuus est dives et sepultus.
In secunda dominica post trinitatem:—Filioli mei non diligamus	173

6. Sermones super Beatitudines 211
 De Humilitate. Beati pauperes spiritu. . . .
 Ends f. 233 v, Beati mundo corde—et aliud apertum dimittere proficit.

Provenance. The script, especially that of the first few pages, resembles French work more than English. There is a 15th century inscription, Liber Sancte Marie de Kynlos, but it is unlikely that it was written at Kinloss Abbey originally. There are no later marks.

Writing. The first nine folios are written in a singularly beautiful court hand of the early 14th century; the greater part of the Summa de Vitiis also in court hand, but of a more ordinary type, and the rest in Gothic script, all of the early 14th century. There are fairly good filigree initials. The volume has suffered at the beginning from mice.

Filiis autem concubinarum largitus est. . . .

Provenance. Beyond the fact that the hand and ornament are English, there are no indications of provenance, an early inscription on the fly-leaf at the end being completely erased. It is one of Lord Alva's books, and occurs in his Press Catalogue.¹

Writing and Illumination. An average legal hand with blue, red and purple filigree initials, rubrics and two partial borders of penwork.

Explicit liber de amore et dilectione Dei et proximi et aliarum rerum et de forma vite quod Albertanus Causidicus Brixien[sis] de honore Sancte Agathe compilavit A.D. 1238 mensis augusti quo anno et mense obsidebatur civitas Brixie per Fredericum Imperatorem Indictione xi ^a .
2. Incipit liber de doctrina dicendi et tacendi	67 v
Initio medio ac fine—ut eterna gaudia nos faciat pervenire. Amen. Explicit liber de doctrina tacendi et dicendi ab Albertano Causidico Brixiente de honore Sancte Agathe compositus et compilatus sub 1245 mense decembbris.
3. In Christi nomine Amen. Incipit liber de consilio et consolatione	77
Quoniam multi sunt qui in adversitatibus—cum gaudio et letitia recesserunt. Explicit liber consolationis et consilii quem Albertanus Causidicus Brixensis de ore Sancte Agathe compilavit atque composuit sub annis 1246 in mensibus Aprilis et Mayi.

Provenance. Both script and illumination are English. Two entries, one on the fourth fly-leaf at the beginning and the other on f. 112, give 16th century owners.

Constat iste liber domino Thome Wem[m]e [?] clerico ex dono Johannis Harrys quondam Bristollie vicecomitis. Dominus statum dirigat deus et anime propitietur.

f. 112, Orate pro anima Johannis Haris quondam ville Bristollie vicecomitis qui dedit hunc librum domino Thome Wem[m]e [much erased]. One John Harryes was sheriff of the town and county of Bristol in 1505-6.¹ Thomas Wemme I am unable to trace.

There is another entry on the third fly-leaf at the end. Johannis Sheperdi Katheryn vedo [?] de parochia Coundsbury [Congresbury, Somerset, still pronounced thus], and on the recto of the same leaf as the first entry, Andreas Carre est hujus libri legitime possessor; Master Lane After my harty [. .]. On the verso of the first fly-leaf at the end are some lines which look like a cipher. All these entries are of the 16th century, but later than the first two. I have not identified any of the names, but all seem to belong to Somerset.

Finally we find the record of its gift to the Library inscribed in William Henderson's hand, Liber Bibliothecae Edinburgenae Ex dono Caroli Gray mercatoris Edinensis. The gift of Charles Gray, merchant in Edinburg 1684.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is good. The first page has an illuminated initial with a complete border in the English 15th century style. Otherwise the ornament consists of filigree initials and rubrics.

84. MAPHEI VEGII DE PERSEVERANTIA. Laing 57.
TRACTATUS JOHANNIS CHRYSOSTOMI.

Latin, vellum, $8\frac{1}{2}'' \times 5\frac{3}{4}''$, ff. 192, 28 lines to a page (at end double columns 46 lines to a page). Cent. xv, Italian. Binding:

4. Nota quod septe[m] modis fit facere de [. . .] tio mortalis . . .								190 v
Ends, talem est in debitus, etc. [?]

Provenance. A semi-erased inscription on f. 191 gives the provenance. Iste [liber] est monasterii Sancti [. . .] in [. . .] quem donavit nobis dominus Bartolomeus Rovarell[ensis] Archiepiscopus Ravennensis. This may have been written by the hand which wrote the Treatises of S. John Chrysostom. The name of the monastery and the place are totally erased. Bartholomew of Rovarella was born at Rovigo in 1406, Bishop of Adria 1444, Archbishop of Ravenna 1445, Priest of S. Clement 1461, died at Rome 1476.¹

Its later history is unknown. According to the Sale Catalogue entry pasted in the volume, it was sold for £2, 12s. 6d., whether to Laing or to an earlier owner is not clear.

Writing and Illumination. The Vegius is written in a clear sloping italic hand which grows smaller at the end. The final treatises are in Gothic script. The vellum is very fine, and the hands both good, but many of the pages have suffered from damp and become almost illegible. The book initials in Part I are burnished gold ornamented with vine-leaf pattern in blue, vermilion, and green, that at the beginning having a partial border of foliage, flowers, and gold-rayed discs. Chapter initials are plain red Roman capitals. Part 2 has two initials of a different type, in dull gold, pink and green, floriated on square, burnished gold grounds.

Provenance. The script is typically English. The illumination, which is of a later date, is exceedingly crude. On f. 1 in a 17th century hand is the name Thomas Fyton, and of a later date Ph. Mainwaringe Pr. E. 4^t.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is very clear and uniform, and the rubrics good, but no initials have been inserted by the original scribe. Historiated initials to the books have been very crudely executed later, possibly in the 16th century, along with complete or partial floral borders. This late work may have been done in Scotland.

Provenance. The book is written in an English 15th century hand. It bears the inscription on f. 129 v, in an Elizabethan hand, Friar Tindall Oxoniensis Academie fulgentissimus Bacca[larius]. Fortuna favet fatuis. One, John Tyndall, a 'Carme or Whyte Fryer,' was made Bachelor of Divinity on 17 July 1531.¹ This may be the owner of the volume. There are no other marks of ownership, and it is not apparent how it came into Laing's hands. There is a label with the number 744 on a vellum fly-leaf. It has originally formed part of a larger volume, as the contemporary foliation begins at f. 79.

Writing and Illumination. A fair English hand with rubrics and plain red capitals. The volume is somewhat soiled and stained.

[From Meditaciones Vite Christi, chaps. lxxiv-lxxxv.]

Provenance. This is an English book, but a more definite provenance is not indicated. The earliest mark of ownership is the book-plate of Thomas Dawson. On this book-plate is written in a modern hand, Cat. H. A. W. These are the initials of H. A. Wilson, Secretary of the Henry Bradshaw Society. There is a label with the number 318 on the front board.

Writing and Illumination. It is written in a careful hand with tinted penwork capitals and titles within ornamental scrolls.

Provenance. An English ms., but bears no indication of local provenance. It has been paged by a 17th century hand, and bears two signatures, Thomas Awdeley 1668 (f. 2), and J. Ames (ff. 1 and 100). The latter is Joseph Ames, bibliographer and antiquary. He annotates the lections from f. 100 as follows: *I take to be Wicklif's Translation. J. Ames.*¹ The volume was evidently bound as now, with the first folio misplaced, when Ames got it, as his name appears on f. 1. The previous owner, Thomas Awdeley, may have been a descendant of Lord Chancellor Awdeley (1488-1544).

Writing and Illumination. A good English 15th century hand, with filigree capitals.

Text. In principio creavit deus coelum et terram.
Ends f. 144 v, sumnum sacerdotium post mortem patri sui [i.e. end of Chronicles].

Provenance. An English ms., but with no marks of local connection or ownership. A Tabula of the 14th century is added on the margin of f. 1. Descriptive titles to the sections are given by a 17th century hand. This is one of Lord Alva's books.

Writing and Illumination. The Homilies are written in a small minuscule of the 11th or early 12th century, with plain red and green capitals. Folios 43-53 are by another, larger, 12th century hand. The rest are by various 13th century hands. The margins all through are disastrously cropped.

Text. Da mihi domine scire—te praestante qui vivis et regnas deus per omnia sec. sec. Amen.
5. Sermo [Anonymous]	133 v
Videbunt filium hominis venientem.
Ends, quia visionem nobis cedat qui sine fine.

Provenance. Probably an English MS. There are various names indicating ownership. On f. 139 v, Memorandum quod dompnus Thomas de Byghenale prior, in a contemporary hand. On f. 1, Ric. Byngham of Newarke in ye County of Notts, and on a fly-leaf at the end, M^d yt I Ric[hard] Bingham of Newarke, and the name Stamfford.

Of later date the volume bears the autograph of Peter le Neve, Norroy Herald (1704-29), with some notes by him of its contents. The inscription is as follows : Libcr Petri Le Neve Norroy Regis Armorum 1704 ex dono Laud Doyley generosi de le Strand merceri. Peter le Neve's books passed to Thomas Martin of Palgrave, who married his widow, and were finally sold by auction in 1731.¹

¹ See Catalogue of Peter le Neve, 22 February 1731. Sold by John Wilcox. No. 538 or 540. B. M. 270, i 23 (3).

This ms. seems to have been acquired by Lord Alva, and to have come into the Library with others of his books.

Writing and Illumination. It is written in court hand of a good average type, without much attempt at ornament.

96. SERMONES PROVINCIALES.

Hora est jam nos de sompno surgere. Est triplex sompnus igno-rantie. . . .

Ends f. 106 v, salientes magnas foveas uno [?] R. Christo [92nd Sermon].

Provenance. The original provenance is not clear. It looks like a French ms. There is a late inscription on f. 2, Ex Biblioteca PP. Carmelitarum Divionensium, showing that it passed into the possession of a Carmelite monastery at Dijon. Its present binding is French. It is not known where Laing obtained it.

Writing and Illumination. The book is written by several hands, all good and some very beautiful, about the middle of the 13th century. It has 14th century foliation and notes. The only ornament consists in plain red initials to the sermons.

Collation. a¹⁰, b², c⁷=19.

Contents :

Johannis Antonii Campani Oratio in die cinerum et apud Pium Papam Secundum. Quia pulvis es et in pulverem reverteris	f. 1
Cui est inter tot ritus ceremoniasque christianas. . . .
Ends f. 19, cuius nomen sit benedictum in secula seculorum.
Oratio Campani viri eloquentissimi explicit. Rome habita in palatio Summi Pontificis A.D. m ^o cccc ^o lxii die vero iii Martii.

Provenance. This seems to be an Italian MS. executed in the Papal scriptorium, though it shows French influence. A MS. note in the volume calls it Manuscriptus cum notis pulcherrimus in membranas scriptus, olim Maffeianus. According to a sale entry pasted on the boards it was probably the very copy presented to Pius II, the celebrated Aeneas Sylvius Piccolomini. It was formerly in the collection of the Marquis Maffei at Verona, and was sold for £2, 12s. 6d.

Writing and Illumination. The script is beautiful, resembling that of the Virgil (No. 195), which is stated to have been executed in Paris. There is a full border of flowers, fruit and birds with blue and gold acanthus foliage, and a floriated initial in the French manner on f. 1.

Provenance. This ms. belonged originally to the Carthusians at Dülmen, as appears from the contemporary inscription, Liber Carthusiensium prope Dulmaniam. The same hand is responsible for the title on the vellum fly-leaf. Later ownership is not indicated.

Writing and Illumination. This is a well-written ms., with plain red capitals.

11. Alia excerpta ex Sermonibus Bernardi super Cantica [Sermons 11 and 12]	183
Posuerunt me custodem—qui vivificat ut vivam in eis.

Provenance. This is given by the inscription on the inner fly-leaf, G. G. iii. Liber Sancte Marie Virginis in Huysborch. This must refer to Huysburg in Prussia, and to the Benedictine Abbey there. The inscription is followed by a list of contents all written in the 15th century. A modern hand adds in pencil 183 Bl. [Blätter], from which it would seem to have been in German hands till a late date. An unknown Sale Catalogue entry on the inner board gives the price 15s.

Writing and Illumination. Rather roughly written with plain red capitals. The extracts from S. Bernard's sermons have been added in the margins and blank spaces in a neat, small hand, contemporary with the ms.

4. De sacramento altaris	116 v
In virtute sancte crucis et in sacramento altaris.
Ends f. 119 v, in tertio est differentia.

Provenance. Like No. 101, this ms. is from the library of S. Mary's Abbey, Reading. It contains the same inscription, Hic est liber Sce. Marie de Radingia. Quem qui celaverit vel fraudem de eo fecerit anathema sit, by the same hand. It is also described in the Catalogue which is part of Lord Fingall's Cartulary.¹ Its subsequent history is unknown, even to how it came into Laing's possession. The book has been very skilfully repaired.

Writing and Illumination. The script is scarcely so good as that of the other Reading ms., and it is probably rather later. Nor is the illumination so fine. It consists of ornamental initials in red with some rough filigree work. The general appearance of the volume is extremely dignified and good.

Contents :

Incipit liber primus dialogorum Beati Gregorii pape urbis rome de miraculis sanctorum patrum	f. 1
Quadam die nimis. . . .
Ends f. 105v, hostia ipsi fuerimus. Explicit liber dialogorum beati Gregorii pape urbis rome de miraculis sanctorum patrum.

Provenance. The only mark of ownership is the inscription on f. 106, Liber Sancte Marie de Dulci Corde qui alienaverit anathema sit, written in a large Gothic hand of the 15th century, repeated in court hand of the same period on the verso of this leaf. The ms. is, however, of too early a date to have been written at Sweetheart Abbey, which was founded in 1275, so that its original provenance is undetermined. Bound in with it, at the beginning and end, are two interesting fragments.

(1) At the beginning, a leaf from a noted Antiphoner of the 14th century, of York Use, containing almost the whole of the service of the Translation of S. Martin (4 July). The leaf has been reversed in binding.

(2) At the end, two leaves from a French 15th century ms. containing, on the recto of the first and verso of the second, part of a sermon or theological treatise on the Will, written apparently in Picard dialect; and, on the verso of the first and recto of the second, part of the Breviary Services for Trinity Sunday (Use undetermined).

This is another of Lord Alva's books.

Writing and Illumination. It is written in a clear, good 12th century hand, with rubrics and coloured capitals, the small capitals alternately blue and red, the book initials blue and red, the first clause of each book in black half uncials touched with red. The book has suffered very sadly from mice, the lower corners being entirely nibbled away, but fortunately the contents have not suffered.

4. Oratio contra inimicos et malevolos [inserted by a later cursive hand]	72
O vos inimici mei ad vos venio—qui vivis et regnas per infinita sec. sec. Amen.

Provenance. An Italian ms. A small square of paper pasted on the first leaf of the Tabula appears, when held to the light, to read Ex Biblioth. Margaritis. There are no other marks and no indication of when or how it was acquired.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is very good Italian minuscule of the period, with plain blue and red capitals, rubrics, and one blue and red filigree initial at the beginning, where also the first four lines are alternate blue and red capitals with purple filigree between.

 Ends f. 34, e felice e beato serai. In secula seculor. Amen.
 Explicit.

Provenance. Hand and illumination are Italian. The only mark of ownership is the book-plate of the Duke of Sussex, to whose library the ms. belonged, and in whose catalogue it is described.¹

Writing and Illumination. Written in good Italian minuscule. Folio 1 has a conventional border down the margin on the left, a gold initial on a green and lake ground, and in the R. margin a winged S. Michael in gold armour carrying scales and standing on a black dragon. Underneath is a scroll Et non prevaluit. Folio 2 has a similar conventional half-border and a gold initial on a blue ground, in which the heads of two winged seraphs are represented. Within the initial appears the head and shoulders of S. Augustine vested as a bishop, with white and gold mitre and gold halo, green embroidered cope with gold morse, a crosier in his R. hand.

Provenance. This is fully given by two identical early 13th century inscriptions, one on a fly-leaf at the beginning, the other on f. 227, which obviously stood at the beginning of each of the two volumes into which this was originally divided. Both read Hic est liber Sancte Marie de Radingia. Quem qui celaverit vel fraudem de eo fecerit, anathema sit, which is the usual inscription found in all Reading books at that time.

In the Catalogue taken from Lord Fingall's Cartulary of Reading¹ they appear as two volumes, described as follows :

Liber Anselmi Cur Deus Homo in uno volumine ubi etiam sunt libri ejusdem de conceptu virginali, Monologion, de incarnatione verbi, meditatio nostre redemptionis (cf. original Tabula to vol. i).¹

Proslogion Anselmi in uno volumine in quo continentur hui libri : de concordia prescientie et predestinationis ac gratie Dei cum libero arbitrio, de processione spiritus sancti, de sacrificio azimi fermentati et tractatus de veritate et de libero arbitrio et de casu diaboli et omelie Crisostomi de laude Pauli (cf. Tabula f. 227).¹

They would appear to have been bound in one as early as the 14th century, as the contents of the second volume have been added to those of the first in a 14th century hand. The Letters (f. 104 v) are a further confirmation of the Reading provenance. Nothing is known of how it came into Laing's possession. It was doubtless at Reading till the dissolution of the monastery.

Writing and Illumination. The hand changes at f. 143, and from there onwards possibly two new scribes wrote. All the hands are good examples of 12th century script. The volume has a very dignified appearance, being well spaced with clear rubrics and wide margins. The ornament consists of plain green and red capitals and very beautiful coloured initials to the sections, in green, blue, red, and buff, very finely executed.

Provenance. From its appearance it would seem to be an English MS., but there are no distinctive marks of provenance. On the paper fly-leaf is written W. Herbert, T. Faulkener, 1850, and on the inner board in pencil, Manuscript 48/-.

Writing and Illumination. Written by several hands of the 12th and possibly late 11th centuries, with plain red capitals and rubrics.

21. Summa de Confessione, etc. 183
 Qualis confessor debet esse vide in tuis versibus et ultra. . . .
 Confessio dulcis affabilis atque suavis—ad superiores debent mitti.

Provenance. This is probably an English ms., the latter part, from f. 167, being unmistakably English script of the 14th century. A 17th century hand has written part of a list of contents on the verso of the first fly-leaf. The signature G. (or C.) E. Alva also appears on f. 1. In Anderson's short catalogue of the Laing MSS. it is stated that the Erskine arms are inserted, but, if this was the case, the book-plate has since been lost. It is quite clear, however, that it belonged to the Alva family, and it occurs in Lord Alva's Press Catalogue.¹

Writing and Illumination. Written partly in late 13th century Gothic script, partly in English 14th century hand. The earlier part has blue and red filigree initials.

Provenance. The book belonged originally to the Olivetan Monastery of S. George at Ferrara. It bears the inscription f. 113 v, Iste liber est monasterii Sancti Georgii de Ferrara ordinis Monitis Oliveti. It seems to have been in Italian hands until Laing bought it. There is a list of contents made evidently by an Italian scholar, 'E. or G. Nigrini Luivera [?] 15th July 1826' (cf. Nos. 134 and 173). He suggests that the first treatise is the Confessionale of S. Antoninus, and also states that in the last chapter of the S. Bernard there are some variations from the Paris edition of 1572. This he discovered on comparing it with a copy of that edition in the possession of Count G. Batista Costabili, whom he calls mio ottimo padrone.

In pencil on the inner board is written Antonino de l'Ordine de Frati 5/15/6 No. 6. Lot 38.

Writing and Illumination. The first three treatises are written in good Italian minuscule, the titles, where they occur, being in rustic capitals. The initials are blue and red filigree, with one illuminated initial of plain burnished gold on blue and lake ground, a scroll with gold-rayed discs in the margin. Ff. 81-100 are written by a different hand in a more angular style with rather peculiar initials to the chapters—red and blue filigree, with penwork scroll filling one margin completely. The catchwords are ornamented, and the small capitals touched with yellow. A third hand is responsible for the last treatise, and here the initials are simply red penwork.

Ends f. 104 v, mulieribus illis quae eis auferent vitam (incomplete).

Provenance. This is clearly indicated by the contemporary inscription on the first fly-leaf: Liber domus canonicorum regularium vallis sancti martini. In lovanio. Laing bought the book, it appears, from a London sale.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is good and very characteristically Dutch, as is also the penwork ornament of the initials. The foliation and catchwords are contemporary.

24. Bernardus [?] in Stimulo Amoris.
Ave Maria gratia plena. Tibi domine deus noster.
Ends f. 242 v, dum alloquitur dominam meam.

Provenance. This book belonged to the Benedictine Monastery of SS. Peter and Paul at Erfurt, as is evident from the inscription on f. 1, Liber Beatorum Apostolorum Petri et Pauli in Erfordia. Its connection with Erfurt is further proved by its contents, especially the treatises of Henry of Weimar and John of Hagen, who was prior of the Carthusians there (1457-75).

Some interesting scraps of vellum mss. have been used in binding, including part of an 11th century treatise on language, scraps of a magnificent 12th century ms., and one leaf of a 14th century Life of S. Dorothea.

A small slip of paper pasted in at the beginning has a short note of contents in a hand like that of W. H. Black, but this ms. is not found in his catalogue.

Writing. There are many different hands, some very difficult, all of the 15th or early 16th century. A few of the treatises have rubrics and plain red capitals.

 mensis decembris anno domini 1405 Matheus dei gratia episcopus Wormacensis.

Provenance. The book probably comes from the near neighbourhood of Erfurt, since a note at the end of the first treatise (see Contents), written not long after the book itself, refers to a more complete copy and other works by Gilbert of Tournai, which are in the library of the Majus Collegium there. There are no marks of ownership. The sale entry at the beginning gives the date as 1408, and the price in original binding, £2, 2s. The hand is fair with little ornament.

Provenance. This book evidently belongs to Erfurt. The titles of the treatises have been added soon after the book was written by a monk of Erfurt, as he twice refers to copies of the same treatises in nostra libraria Erfordiae; in nostra libraria; with press-marks. This would seem, from the hand, to be the same annotator as in No. 110. Three of the treatises are initialled by the scribe whose initials are G. B. de S. in L. and dated 1457. Nos. 3 (partly), 5, 6, 7, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14 are written by him. A Sale Catalogue entry (date unknown) gives the price of the ms. as £1, 11s. 6d.

Writing. There are a variety of hands, all fair. The signed treatises and all the others by this scribe are well written. Titles have been added by another hand a little later. The only ornament consists of plain red capitals.

21. Epistola Bernardi ad Magistrum Walterum	311

Provenance. The book belonged to the Carthusians of Erfurt, as is shown from inscriptions on ff. 137 and 189, Ad Carthusienses pertinet Erfordia (probably 15th century hand). Again on the fly-leaf at the beginning, Cartusiae Erfordiensis (17th century). Three treatises are dated (17, 19 and 20). A Sale Catalogue entry (date unknown) gives the price of the book in its original 'ancient wood binding' as £1, 11s. 6d.

Writing. Written by several hands, all fair, and of about the middle of the 15th century. The ornamentation consists of rubrics and plain red capitals.

28. Prose of S. Mary Magdalene	322 v
Gaudie pia Magdalena.
29. Proverbs in German ¹	324
30. Fragments of three English religious poems ²	i and ii

Provenance. This is given on f. i at the beginning of the 'Contents,' which are headed Liber Canonicorum Regularium prope Nussiam. This seems to refer to a House of regular Canons at Nuys, near Dusseldorf. The Collection is a curious one, and contains at the beginning and end a number of curious German Proverbs.¹

The binding seems to be German, but the end papers have been taken from an English ms. of the early 15th century, and contain interesting fragments of English religious verse.² There are no later marks of ownership save the label with the number 290 on the back.

Writing and Illumination. Well written in a clear, small hand, with plain red capitals. The end papers are in English script of the early 15th century.

Veritas evangelica praedicatoribus. . . .
Ends f. 86 v, et diligenter exercetur illuminatur. Laus deo.

Provenance. There are no indications of original ownership, but it is probably an English ms. The name Jameson is written in pencil on the end board in a modern hand.

Writing and Illumination. Very beautifully written on fine vellum in a minute hand, with fine blue and red filigree initials. There are notes in two different hands of the 14th century. The margins have been slightly cropped.

Ends imperfectly f. 174, quod limitacio non est perfectio. . . .

Provenance. An Italian ms. without any indications of local connection.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is Italian Gothic, poor in the first treatise, better in the second. There are fair filigree initials.

117. RAYMUNDI LULLII ARS GENERALIS. Laing 166.

Latin, vellum, $5\frac{1}{2}'' \times 4''$, ff. 47, irregular number of lines to a page. Cent. xv, Italian. Binding: Original, oak boards covered with pigskin, 5 bosses on each board (2 lost from the front), brass mounted strap (broken), lettered 'Ars Generalis.'

Ends f. 35, et sic per complimento, etc. Deo Gracias.
Quia ignorantes propositionem	36
Ends f. 46 v, et hoc de expositionibus dicta sufficient, etc. Deo Gracias.

Provenance. This is probably an Italian ms. Four distinct hands are traceable. There are no early marks of ownership. Laing bought the book at a sale at Puttick and Simpson's, 3 June 1861, its number in the catalogue being 806. This number is still on a label on the back.

Writing and Illumination. All four hands are Italian in type and fairly good. The first treatise has red and blue initials, the second and third plain red capitals, the fourth red, and red and blue filigree initials.

PAULI VENETI COMMENTUM SUPER ARISTOTELIS
LIBRIS POSTERIORUM.

Latin, paper, $12\frac{7}{8}'' \times 9\frac{1}{8}''$, ff. 107, double columns, 50-54 lines to a page. Cent. xv, Italian. Binding: Modern, labelled '109. Paul [. . .] Veneti Commentaria super lib. posteriorum Aristotelis Cartavo Secolo xiv.'

2 f. ars est rectaCollation. a⁹, b¹⁰—k¹⁰, l⁸=107.

Contents :

Ends f. 107, valeamus vitam sempiternam et gloriam. Amen. Deo gracias. Et sic explicit commentum Magistri Pauli Veneti super libris posteriorum domini AR. per me P+G.

Provenance. The script and illumination are Italian in type. Unfortunately the coat of arms on the lower margin of f. 1 has been too much cropped to be identified. An inscription on f. 1, in a 17th century hand, has been partially restored, and reads: Est conventus S. Bartholomei Ba[. . .] ff. Heremitarum Ordinis S. Augustini. The paper label may be by the same hand. About this date also are the bibliographical notes added at the end. The scribe gives his initials in the colophon: P+G.

Writing and Illumination. The script is italic, small and neat, quotations from the original being in a large black Gothic script. Each of the two books has a floriated initial in blue, lake, green, vermillion, and pale yellow, with branching foliage springing from it.

Novellum de Malatestis prohemium feliciter incipit Vellel Malatesta Novelle princeps illustris tantam mihi dicendi. . . . Ends f. 141 v, premium accepissent. Vale finis. Finis Epistoliarum Phalaridis deo Gracias. Amen.	93
10.	Treatise without title Atronarum fortunam accusare quam non nulli omnipotentem vocant. . . . Ends f. 150, quoad poterimus non paciemur. finis.	141 v

Provenance. The script and illumination are Italian, but there are no other marks of origin or indication of ownership. The marginal notes are mostly of a later date than the text. There is a pencil title on the inner board in a 19th century hand.

Writing and Illumination. A good italic hand throughout, with plain red or blue Roman capitals and two illuminated initials of burnished gold, with vine-leaf ornament in green, blue, and lake.

120. LEONARDI ARETINI, ETC.

Laing 141.

Latin and Greek, vellum, $6\frac{5}{8}'' \times 4''$, ff. 46 (+2 fly-leaves), 16 lines to a page. Cent. xv, Italian (from the Aragonese Library at Naples). Binding: Oak boards covered brown stamped leather, 2 straps lost, rebacked.

2 f. Trithonia Pallas

Collation. Two fly-leaves, a², b¹, c¹², d¹⁰—f¹⁰, g¹=46.

Contents :

Some notes, poems, etc., in Latin and Greek (italic hand) on two vellum fly-leaves.
Verses on the Muses, written round a miniature of cherubs playing an organ, headed 'Esto per vigil labor improbus' . . .	f. 1 v
Miniature of Pallas, signed MN. MAN.	2

2. [Opuscolum, ex greco in latinum conversum, De Oraculis Sibyllinis].	35
Turpis Sibilla Eimeria—et conservabitur ut peccator . . .
3. Nomina Officiorum et Dignitatum Urbis Romae ac Officialium.
Primo fuerunt reges—senatus ex populo Romano . . .	37 v
Greek alphabet, etc., and miscellaneous jottings.

Provenance. The script and illumination are Italian. The arms on f. 4 are identified by Mr. Van de Put¹ as those of Alphonso v, the founder of the Aragonese Library.² I have not found this ms. among the contents of this library noted by Delisle.

The statement made in the Sale Catalogue entry, attached to the volume, that the arms are those of Fr. de Gonzague, 4th Marquis de Mantoue, is not correct, nor does the further statement that the figure of Pallas on f. 2, signed MN. MAN., is by Mantegna, done when he was at Mantua, detained by the Gonzaga (after 1468), seem possible. Neither in style nor in execution does it appear to justify this statement.

There are notes at the beginning and end, and an almost entirely defaced list of contents on the vellum end paper at the beginning in an Italian hand of the 17th century. A signature is also found at the foot of the end paper, but I cannot decipher it satisfactorily. The sale entry is taken from a French catalogue.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is Italian minuscule, the ink being very yellow. The small capitals are either red or green, and the rubrics are in square capitals, the words being alternately lake green or gold. There are three sectional initials elaborately floriated in blue, lake, and green, and two miniatures in water colour.

1. Fol. 1 v. Two cherubs playing an organ. The organ has a carved wooden pedestal and case, and two rows of metal pipes. One cherub is playing the instrument standing, the other is blowing for him.

2. Fol. 2. Pallas. Nude figure with an aureole of golden hair, a spear with banner in her R. hand, while the L. hand rests upon a golden embossed shield. The letters MN. MAN. are written below, and have apparently given rise to the idea that this miniature is by Mantegna, a supposition which does not seem to be borne out by its appearance.

3. Libellus cuiusdam philosophi Judeorum Tehel nomine qui scripsit eundem de sculpturis lapidum . . . Hunc libellum Tehel transtulimus in Latinum Quando invenerit laspis. . . . Ends f. 102, pietatem habent super homines.

4. De consecratione lapidum Sicut dicit liber qui continet veterum narrationes—dicat benedictionem praemissio Dominus vobiscum.

Prayer—Quesumus omnipotens deus qui etiam per quasdam insensibiles creaturas. . . .

Ametistus . . . Topasius.
Ends f. 120, ut ex eo Ptolomeus Philodelphus statuam faceret quattuor cubitorum. Laus tibi bone Jhesu optime Christe 1482. Finis adest.

5. Part of a Tabula, very imperfect; Figurae corporum planetarum; Alphabetical index (incomplete), with recipes here and there in same cursive hand in Latin and German 121

Provenance. The German script in notes and recipes, of a date not much later than the ms., would suggest a German origin, as it certainly points to the book's having gone early to Germany; but, on the other hand, the script, which is very round and clear, would rather suggest Spanish origin.

*There are no definite marks of ownership. An erased inscription on f. 122 has the date 1652 still remaining legible.

Writing and Illumination. The script in both main treatises is unfamiliar to me. It may be Spanish. Ornamentation consists of rather roughly ornamented red capitals, ornamental scroll round Roman numerals marking foliation, and occasional hands in the margin. The margins are badly cropped, and some leaves are missing.

Proponimus itaque tibi in presenti libello. . . .
Ends f. 141, laus Deo a quo cuncta bona procedunt. Telos.
Recipe ad Stillandum aurum potabile	141 v

Provenance. The script would seem to be Italian, though from the almost entirely erased colophon the scribe appears to be Franciscus de Galliciis, which might refer to Galicia in Spain. Later notes are all by an Italian hand. There are no marks of ownership earlier than a modern stamp, Bibliothecae S. Johannis in Canalibus, Placentiae.

Writing and Illumination. A fair hand, with no attempt at ornament save plain red capitals and diagrams in Book IV, which are careful and elaborate.

4. Noted Service, In Natale S. Thome Cantuariensis Archiepiscopi et Martyris. (Use undetermined, but not Sarum, Hereford, or York)	155 v

Provenance. The colophon (f. 144 v, see Contents) gives precise details as to the scribe. He seems to have been a writer of legal documents, lucelensis being probably derived from lucellus or libellus, a particular kind of deed of conveyance.¹ The word meticuriensis I have not been able to translate, unless it be a compound of Metae (Metz) and curia, suggesting a court scribe at Metz.

The next mark of ownership is the inscription on f. 1, Ex Bibliotheca Reisachiorum 1809, and, by the same hand, Sec. xii. This bears out the title on the slip pasted on one of the boards with Isidori Episcopi Hispalensis Liber Ethimologiarum, etc. Ex Reis. 3 Feb. 820, No. 14, MS. to. I have not so far identified this library.

Writing and Illumination. The script is good and uniform, rather compressed, with plain red capitals to chapters, and very handsome decorative book initials with conventional foliage and occasional human or animal heads boldly executed in rather unusual colouring, i.e. green, blue, vermilion, lake, and yellowish buff. All the pigments are heavy. There are diagrams throughout, and the tables of relationships are very fully illustrated with pen-drawings of various subjects in red and black on thin buff grounds.

provincia Arragonie custodya hyldensi.

Completa per me Marquardum Roden de Almania nunc parisiis anno domini 1452 in octava Sancti Michaelis Archangeli, etc.

3. Two medical prescriptions [contemporary].

Provenance. From the colophon (see Contents) we learn that the ms. was written by a German scribe, Marquard Rode, in Paris. The device of the original owner is executed in the margin of f. 1, but I have not been able to identify it. It has upon it the initials P. S.

Writing and Illumination. A small, neat hand, rather difficult to read. The ornament consists of blue and red filigree initials and larger floriated initials on burnished gold ground, the colouring being blue, lake, vermillion, green, and yellow. At the beginning of each treatise the initials have partial scroll borders, and the initial on f. 1 has the head and shoulders of a monk, probably a representation of Duns Scotus himself. There are many stains of moisture in the book, especially at the beginning and end.

Contents :

Oret voce pia pro Petro Virgo Maria.

In nomine domini Amen. Incipit liber introductorius ad judicia stellarum, et est non solum introductorius ad judicia, sed est judiciorum astronomie editus a Guydone bonacto de forlivio. Et collegit in eo ex dictis philosophorum ea quae visa sunt sibi fore utilia ad introducendum volentes intendere judiciis astrorum et ea quae videbuntur competere voluntibus judicare secundum significationes stellarum. Et ad alia quibusdam ipsis judiciis pertinencia.

In nomine D. N. J. C. misericordis et pii veri dei et veri hominis —revolutionis sive pluvias et ymbres.

Incipit Tractatus I. Ad ostendendum utilitatem quam possumus sequi de astronomia et de judiciis. Capitulum 1^m.

Anima est nobilis quae reperitur in homine . . .

Ends f. 9, esse scientiam manifeste probatur. Finit tractatus primus de confirmatione hujus scientie, etc.

Incipit tractatus secundus de divisione orbis signorum, etc. 9

Dicam igitur vel vestigia venerabilium predecessorum . . .

Ends f. 13, in aliis temporibus hyemalibus. Finit prima pars secundi tractatus.

Ends 95 v, de ipsis loquentibus invenitur tantum.
Incipit tractatus super praeципuis judiciis astrorum, etc.
In isto primo capitulo agendum est . . .	95 v
Ends f. 167 v, significat augmentum malicie. Explicit tractatus interrogationum seu questionum.

Provenance. Probably an English ms. The Petro who is prayed for on f. 1, at the beginning, may possibly be a scribe. The only marks of ownership are in an early 16th century hand on ff. 165 v and 166 v, Dne Wecarie de Kyr [Keir] [...] legitie Donald McSorolh cum sua quae comperiat coram nobis seu [...] nostris pluribus, and f. 166 v, Be it kenit til al men be yir present letteris yatt Patrik trewlyn [Strewlyn] has solde al his Rychtt of his fadirs buks til his derest lord Jorg of Strewlyne. The significance of the inscriptions is not very clear, but the volume would appear to have been in the possession of the Stirlings of Keir. It was in any case in Scotland in the 16th century, and later came into the library of the Erskines of Alva,¹ and thence into this Library.

The Tabula on the fly-leaf refers to another volume altogether.

Writing and Illumination. A good Gothic hand, with blue and red filigree initials. The first few leaves are damaged at the corners.

Tabula diei Pasche infallibilis.
Dicta quaedam fratris Bartholomei Cartusiensis in Ruremondo de adventu Anticristi incipiunt feliciter, etc.	40

Provenance. The Kalendar is Cistercian with a few Scottish entries. The book belonged to the Cistercian Priory of Coupar-Angus, vide the inscription on f. 1, Liber beate Marie de Cupro (15th century).

The Cistercian Saints and Feasts commemorated are: 10 Jan., Willelmi; 11 Jan., Commem. Episcoporum; 29 Ap., Roberti Abb.; 8 May, Petri Ep.; 20 May, Commem. Monachorum; 11 Aug., Spinee Corone; 20 Aug., Bernardi; 27 Aug., Oct. Bernardi; 12 Sept., Capitulum Generalis; 5 Nov., Malachie; 9 Dec., Commemoratio Fundatorum.

Local Saints and Feasts are: 15 May, Dedicatio; 23 Sept., Adanani (Adamnan); 4 Dec., Medani; 7 Dec., Oct. Andree; 30 Dec., Duthaci. These may have special reference to Coupar-Angus, but there is the same lack of Scottish names in the Kalendar that one finds in the Kalendar of the Culross Psalter,¹ also Cistercian.

For its later history we have a pencil entry on f. 40, Ex Orcadiibus eduxi 1599 Jo. Foulis, and two inscriptions in Drummond's hand: f. 1, Academiae Jacobi Regis Edinb. Gulielmus Drummond, D.D.; f. 40, Academiae Jacobi Regis Edinb. Gulielmus Drummond, D.D. 1626.

Writing and Illumination. Written in fair script by more than one hand, the Kalendar being rather carelessly written. There are many diagrams and one pen-drawing (16th century).

127. RAYMUNDI LULLII DE ASTRONOMIA. Laing 161.

Latin, paper, $8\frac{1}{2}'' \times 5\frac{1}{8}''$, ff. 48, 34-45 lines to a page. Cent. xv, French (Celestins of Amiens). Binding: Oak boards covered red leather.

Contents :

Raymundi Lullii de Astronomia	f. 1
Deus cum virtute tua et ad honorem tuum incipit iste novus tractatus de astronomia (autore Raymundo—inserted).
Cum plures sunt homines qui strenue desiderant veritatem—cum arte geomancie.
Astronomia in duas partes dividitur . . .
Ends f. 47 v, supponere quod tabula sit vera.

Provenance. This is given on f. 47 v in a 15th century hand, Iste liber est Celestinorum de Ambianis F. 28. The inscription is repeated on f. 1 by two later hands. That it belonged to the Halliwell Phillips Collection is shown by the stamp on f. 1 and f. 48 v, Bibliotheca Halliwelliana, and by the Sale Catalogue entry pasted on the inner cover.¹ A second Sale Catalogue notice, probably of later date, also appears, and notes the price as £3, 3s.

Writing and Illumination. A fair hand, with rubrics and plain red capitals. Inside the board is a Volvelle, or series of movable dials on vellum, representing the orbits of the planets.

128. JOH. DE SACROBOSCO DE SPHAERA. Laing 167.
AVEROES DE SUBSTANTIA ORBIS.

 [I]n hoc tractatu intendimus perscrutari de rebus ex quibus . . .
 Ends incompletely with a diagram and a title added on the fly-leaf, 'Tractatus de Substantia orbis Averois.'

Provenance. The two hands are probably Italian, but there are no marks of local origin. A previous shelf-mark has been 712.

Writing and Illumination. Fairly written by two hands, with diagrams, but initials have not been inserted.

129. THEORICA PLANETARUM (Groseteste). Laing 162.

Latin, vellum, $6\frac{3}{4}'' \times 4\frac{3}{4}''$, ff. 14, 23 lines to a page. Cent. xv, Italian. Binding: Modern, lettered 'Theor. Plan.'

Provenance. The Kalendar contains a large number of saints connected with North Germany. The variety of names is so great that it is difficult to determine any particular locality. Special prominence is given to the following saints: 6 Jan., The Three Kings [Cologne]; 7 Jan., S. Valentine Bp. [Passau and Apostle of Rhoetia]; 15 June, S. Vitus M.; 13 Oct., S. Kolman M.

There is one mark of ownership on f. 1, Das puech ist mir Hansen Apfelbeckh geschenkt vorden, with a shield very roughly sketched quartered one and four, 'three plánets'; two and three, a star of six points (16th or 17th century).

Writing and Illumination. Written by two hands, both fairly good, with rubrics and red capitals. The treatise on the Signs of the Zodiac, ff. 54 v-59, is illustrated by small square pen and water-colour pictures of a rough kind.

Provenance. An Italian book, collected and written by Bernardino Tontolo in 1478 (vide ff. 49 v and 171). It contains marginal notes by an Italian hand of the 17th century, and has a coat of arms pasted on a fly-leaf, which is probably an ex-libris of a later owner, about 1700. I have not succeeded in identifying the device, but it seems to be a foreign coat. A title and tabula has been inserted by James Dennistoun of Dennistoun, who states that he bought the ms. in Rome in 1839. A printed notice of the sale of his library, 14 April 1855, has been inserted, so that probably the ms. was acquired by the Library by purchase or gift from the sale.

Writing and Illumination. The script is a good specimen of the italic hand signed by the scribe, Bernardino Tontulo. The rubrics are red Roman capitals. The larger initials have only in a few cases been completed:

Provenance. This is difficult to determine. The volume is very carelessly written. The only mark of ownership is Laing's signature with the date 1825 and a number 94.

133. LEONINI DE PADUA DECAS LOYCA. Laing 150.

Latin, vellum, $10\frac{1}{2}'' \times 7\frac{1}{2}''$, ff. 35, 37 lines to a page. Cent. xiv (late), Italian. Binding: Modern.

Quoniam loyca est doctrina principalis . . .

Ends f. 33, de omni vel de ullo procedere est inscripta prius forma et efficacia sill[ogism]i expositorii (5 books).

Provenance. The script and illumination are Italian, and on f. 35 v the following names appear in three different hands (15th century) :

Subjectum hujus libri dicitur ens contractum Sebastianus de Janua [Genoa].

Subjectum hujus libri dicitur ens contractum frater Marcus Patavinus [Padua].

Subjectum hujus libri dicitur ens contractum frater Joannes dominicus Monsciliensis [query if Mons Ilcinen=Montalcino, Siena].

The next mark of ownership is on the paper fly-leaf, a signature of the 19th century, W. G. T. [?] Barter E. Soc. Grays Inn.¹ A Sale Catalogue entry, date unknown, is pasted on the cover. On the back is a label with the number 669.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is fair Italian Gothic, the smaller initials being blue and red filigree, while initials of books are floriated on square burnished gold grounds with gold balls in margin. The first initial has the figure of a black monk at a desk expounding to a class of monks from a book, and there is a floriated border round three sides of this page.

Provenance. Italian script and illumination. The earliest mark of ownership is a book-plate on the inner cover which has written upon it Biblioteca S. Giustina Padoa, and below the name Mabillon. The Monastery of S. Justina is a well-known Benedictine House.

On the last paper fly-leaf, under a modern printed title, are bibliographical notes and particulars of the ms. in Italian by E. Nigrini Luivera [?], written in 1843 (cf. Nos. 108 and 173).

Writing and Illumination. Well written, small Italian Gothic hand, with blue and red filigree initials on burnished gold grounds with some foliage.

Provenance. This is written in Italian script by two different hands, and has a title (16th century), Scritti di Logica, written on f. 1. An Italian letter of the 16th century is inlaid on f. 88, written by one signing himself Vester Ludovicus to his father, concerning one Messer Galeazo. Its connection with the ms. is not clear. A note on the fly-leaf refers to the Libri Catalogue of MSS., lot 1183, for a description of the ms.,¹ which lot was sold to 'Willis' for £2, 10s. in its original oak boards.

Writing and Illumination. Neither of the hands are more than fairly good. There are filigree initials.

Provenance. This is an English book. On the first fly-leaf there is an inscription, partially cropped but still decipherable, which establishes its provenance: Hic liber est ecclesie Sancte Osythe de Chic. This refers to a Priory of Austin Canons dedicated in honour of S. Osyth at Chich (Essex), founded before 1118 and erected into an Abbey¹ c. 1150.

The following indications of later ownership are found. On the inner cover there is the name Tho. Martin, and the book-plate of John Towneley, Esq., and Laing's signature. The first refers to Thomas Martin of Palgrave, who got most of his books from Peter le Neve of Norfolk, and whose books were sold in 1769 and 1771. This may then have passed to the Towneley Collection, which was sold in its turn in 1814-15 and 1817. Laing may have obtained it then or later. Martin inserts on a paper fly-leaf a complete Tabula and some bibliographical notes. A second page of bibliographical notes by a more modern hand has been pasted in at the beginning.

Writing and Illumination. The book is written by various hands, all typical of the period. Initials have never been inserted.

Provenance. This is another volume from the library of the Carthusian monastery at Erfurt. The evidence for this is found in three inscriptions :

(1) The heading of an almost contemporary list of contents,
Hic libellus est Carthusiensium prope Erfordiam.

(2) A 15th century inscription on f. 309, Ludwig Waldeck de Franckfordia dicit gratiarum actionis [?] domino Johanni [.] . . . in Carthusia Erfordiensи.

(3) The inscription Cartusiae Erfordiensis, by a 17th century hand, the same which appears in other Erfurt books.

The two sale entries at the beginning are misleading on several points: e.g. Alanus de Insulis is not the author of this Doctrinale, though on the authority of the printed entry his name appears in the title. The price at this sale, in the original binding, was apparently £2.

Writing. There are many hands, all poor and very difficult. Spaces for initials are left blank almost throughout.

8. Casus breves constitutionum Clementis pape quinti . . . Incip. De Receptis. Abbates, etc. . . . Ends f. 109, vel a jure et sum judiciali strepitu commissa. Explicant casus breves constitutionum clementis pape quinti. Deo gracias. Bonifacius episcopus servus servorum dei dilectis filiis universis scolaribus parisiensibus comorantibus salutem et apostolicam benedictionem.	104

Provenance. An English ms. The Kalendar in its shortened form is English, but not apparently Sarum. Besides most of the usual Sarum saints there are the following : March, S. Chad, praesul ; April, S. Guthlac ; June, S. Etheldreda ; October, S. Frideswide.

There are a good many 17th century additions throughout, but no marks of ownership.

Writing. A good, uniform 14th century Gothic hand, with very good filigree initials and rubrics. The book has been a good deal soiled by use in parts.

 Ends f. 140 v, ut ursi, leones, pantere, elephantes autem . . .
 (Wants part of lib. iii, and lib. iv and v).

Provenance. This may be an English ms. There are no marks of ownership, and it is imperfect both at the beginning and end. An 18th century hand has written at the beginning, This is a book of Canon Law. It was apparently one of Lord Alva's books.

Writing. A round, legal hand without ornament, all spaces for capitals being left blank. The book has suffered much from damp, especially the first thirty folios.

Text. Gregorius Episcopus	f. 1
Firmiter credimus.
Gloss. In hujus libri principio quinque precipue.
Lib. ii, f. 118; lib. iii, f. 219 v; lib. iv, f. 317; lib. v, f. 347.
Text ends f. 456 v, facere quis homagium compellatur. Explicit lib. v. Deo gracias.
Gloss ends, inducitur S. de pactis pactiones.

Provenance. There are no marks of early ownership. The illumination looks like French work. The ms. was in Lord Alva's library.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is very good uniform Gothic, the gloss partly by the same hand, partly by others, but contemporary. There are very good blue and red filigree initials, and a historiated initial to each of the five books (that of Book v having been cut out). The first few leaves are much soiled, and the margins badly cropped, but on the whole the condition of the book is good.

Historiated Initials:

1. Fol. 1. Book i. Burnished gold ground. Pope Gregory and listeners.
2. Fol. 118. Book ii. Burnished gold ground. Figure seated in centre discussing with two others, one on either side.
3. Fol. 219 v. Book iii. Burnished gold ground. Priest in alb and amice with white apparel, lake chasuble with Ψ cross orphrey, standing at altar, the end and the corner of the mensa of which may be seen projecting from beneath an ample linen cloth embroidered and fringed at end. A small square cloth represented as spotted, and perhaps intended for a corporal, lies on the top of the altar and hangs over the edge for a short distance. A clerk with raised rod or switch warns a layman, who is standing under a Gothic arch, from approaching the altar.
4. Fol. 317. Book iv. Burnished gold ground. Priest similarly vested marrying man and woman. He joins their hands.
5. Fol. 347. Book v. Initial cut out.
The Gloss has an elaborate filigree initial at the beginning of each book.

Provenance. A French book. The hand is French. The colophon is signed Javignolle in notary's fashion. A 17th century hand scribbles the name James at the end. It came from Lord Alva's library.

Writing and Illumination. A good French hand, with plain and filigree initials and line-endings. The book is much soiled at the beginning, and at ff. 28 and 29.

	Ends imperfectly f. 103 v, qui importunes non modo . . .

Provenance. This is an Italian ms. from its script and general appearance. There are few marks of ownership. A title and note in Italian on the inner cover may date from the 18th century, Manca un folio in mezzo e alla fine, and Joann. Cassianus Mo del 1300.

Laing's signature appears twice. The title on the back is obliterated, but the number 30 remains.

Writing and Illumination. Written in clear Italian Gothic, with rubrics and plain blue and red capitals and ornamental catchwords. There are marginal notes in a modern hand.

Lib. ii, f. 65 ; Lib. iii, f. 109 ; Lib. iv, f. 165 ; Lib. v, f. 179 ; ends f. 257 v (wants three chapters of Book v).

Provenance. There are no definite indications of provenance, but it is an Italian ms. There has been an inscription on the end paper, but of that there now remains only the two words Iste liber. At the end of Book vi the name William has been several times scribbled. No other marks of ownership appear.

Writing and Illumination. The script is Italian Gothic, fairly written, with rather crude filigree initials to books.

Colophon. Explicit summa de casibus conscientie. Consumatum fuit hoc opus in civitate pijsana per fratrem Bartholomaeum ordinis praedicatorum doctorem decretorum, anno domini m^{cccc}xxxviii die mensis decembris tempore sanctissimi patris et domini domini Benedicti pape duodecimi, praedictus autem frater Bartholomaeus, compositor hujus libri optimi, obiit anno domini m^{ccc}xlvii die secunda Julii, cuius anima requiescat in sancta pace. Amen dicant omnia.

Provenance. There are no marks of ownership. The appearance of the book suggests German origin. The date in the colophon refers to the composition of the work itself, not to the date of the ms. The title is to this extent misleading. A Sale Catalogue description pasted in the book gives its price in original wood binding as £2, 2s., but seller and purchaser are unknown.

Writing and Illumination. A good uniform Gothic hand throughout, with plain red and blue capitals, some filigree initials and good rubrics.

Ends f. 191.
8. Extracta de lectura domini panormitani archiepiscopi super primo Decretalium	193
9. Alia extracta super variis decretalium.

Provenance. This volume is written by many very difficult hands, and its contents are difficult to describe. The list of contents at the beginning seems to be written by John of Haghen, Prior of the Carthusians of Erfurt, and the volume is annotated freely throughout by the same hand. This establishes its provenance, and there is also, on f. 1, the usual 17th century inscription found in the Erfurt books, Cartusiae Erford. A sale entry, date unknown, indicates that its price in the original wood binding was 10s. 6d.

Writing. As has been said, the hands are many and very difficult, part of the volume being written, and the whole annotated, by John of Haghen. There is no attempt at ornament.

Provenance. The hand is English, but there are no more definite indications of provenance. Two descriptive notes are on the paper fly-leaf at the beginning, both probably by Italian hands: Codex Continent Codex iste Regulam Canonicorum Regularium conscriptam a S. Codegrando Episcopo, Seculo viii, quo florebat, obiit enim iste vir anno Domini 766 Vide Spicileg, to which is added later, *Sunt Statuta Canonicorum Regularium a Benedicto xii praescripte, et in Bullario Romano 20. Scottish [Convent of Sciennes, Edinburgh]. Binding: Modern, lettered 'Const. Soror. Ord. Frati. Predi. MS.'

Contents :

Ends f. 52, sine licentia magistri ordinis vel prioris provincialis. Tu autem. Finis. Explicant constitutiones Sororum ordinis fratrum predicatorum. (1 f. missing before f. 48.)

Provenance. There seems to be no doubt that this MS. was written for the Dominican Convent of Sciennes in Edinburgh.¹ The Gospels are for reading in chapter; they include only one for a specifically Scottish day, viz. that for S. Monan (f. 12 v).

From the inscription on f. 24, i.e. the first leaf of the Constitutions, which reads, Liber Academiae Edinburgene qui cum sex aliis repositus est pro Bellarmino dat[us] Academiae, 1593, we gather that it was given to the University, together with six other books, in exchange for the works of Bellarmine. It is therefore one of the first, if not the first, mediæval ms. the Library acquired.

Writing and Illumination. A fair Gothic hand (large), with rubrics. The first few pages have been mutilated, but are now carefully inlaid.

 memoriam. Quorundam exigit cece scrupulositatis . . .
 Ends f. 98 v, Data Avinione nonas Octobris pontificatus nostri anno secundo. Explicit declaratio domini Johannis xxthii super [varia] fratrum minorum (1317).

Provenance. An Italian MS. written by several hands. There are no marks of ownership prior to a sale entry of unknown date, and Laing's signature and annotations. One end paper is an interesting fragment from an Antiphoner of the 9th or 10th century.

Writing and Illumination. The first part of the volume is written in good Italian Gothic by three different hands. Folios 1-13 have blue and red filigree initials, and two lines of ornamental capitals at the beginning; ff. 14-51, a larger hand, have floriated initials and two partial borders of Italian type, the first initial containing Pope Nicolas with a book and a Franciscan, while another Franciscan kneels in the margin. Two other initials contain figures either of S. Francis himself or a brother of the Order. Folios 61 onwards are written by various Court hands, with many marginal additions, which have been badly cropped in binding.

In eadem forma juravit Reverenda D. Elizabeth de Garzonibus A.D. 1566 die 28 mensis Aprilis.	49

Provenance. This seems to be a Venetian ms., written for the Benedictine Convent of S. Laurence, Venice, in the first quarter of the 16th century (see f. 22). The Forma Juramenti at the end, of date 1530 and 1566, has been added. The only other mark of ownership is the inscription both at the beginning and end, Ex Libris Aloysii Caligo St's Veneti Anno 1818.

Writing and Illumination. A fine example of late ornate Italian Gothic script, with rubrics, blue and red filigree capitals, and ornamental catchwords. There is a change of hand at f. 33.

and on f. 49. Folio 1 has an ornamental floriated initial on a dull gold ground, and a complete border of conventional foliage in blue and gold on a dark lake ground, all of a late type.

Colophon. Finitus est tractatus praesens in vigilia omnium sanctorum A.D. 1459 per Jo. Rössler.

Provenance. This volume was written for the Carthusians of Erfurt by John Rössler of Hall in Schwabia. The treatises are by John of Hagen, Prior of Eisenach and of the Carthusian monastery at Erfurt (1457-75), and the volume has been annotated by him in his own hand. He inserts the inscription on f. 1:

Hic liber est Carthusiensium prope Erfordiam. There are no later marks. Its price, 'in ancient and stamped wood binding,' was £1, 1s.

Writing. A good, uniform hand, written by John Rössler of Hall in Schwabia in 1459, with some notes throughout in the difficult hand of John of Hagen himself.

Ends f. 140 v, causa abesse non potest Dom. justiniani sacratissimi principis perpetui augusti. Juris enucleati ex omne vetere jure collecti. Digestorum seu pandectarum Lib. l. Feliciter.

Provenance. May be English, but has no marks of definite provenance or ownership.

Writing and Illumination. A fine small minuscule script, with minute contemporary gloss as well as later notes. The rubrics are good, and the ordinary capitals plain red, the first words of books and chapters being in semi-uncial capitals. Book initials, where they are filled in, are finely outlined with the pen in brown ink and filled with interlaced scroll work or grotesque animal forms. They are without colour. The margins are badly cropped, the pages occasionally stained with moisture, and the right top corner nibbled away slightly. From the pencil foliation in the lower right-hand corner, it would seem to have been fairly recently part of a much larger volume.

Ends f. 47 v, FF. proempto qui fundus qui bona.
[Folios 1 and 48-51 are fly-leaves, and seem to belong to another legal ms., an Index to Justinian.]

Provenance. There are no early marks of ownership. All hands look like Italian type. The hand changes three times in the book. It belonged to Lord Alva's library.

Writing and Illumination. All the hands are good, the first very small and uniform. There are plain red initials and rubrics throughout. The chapters of the first treatise have been added later in Roman figures.

Ends f. 123, et eciam bona villanorum predicte persone ad vicesimam praedictam taxentur juxta ordinationem inde factam et vobis ex parte nostra liberatam, etc.

Provenance. There are several inscriptions. At the end, Iste liber constat Thome Bathe ad reversionem ad Thomam Blerweye inde spectante (14th century). On a fly-leaf at the beginning, Liber Johannis Whyte per Johanne Wclbek (15th century). On the verso of the last leaf some fragmentary notes remain, possibly of the 14th century: (1) . . . et Johanni Greyne de Presteleigh de parochia de Doulby[ng]. . . . Johanni Drynkewater de Hoyningesham octo libras quas . . . (2) . . . ne Som[er]cotes uno commisionario domini Henrici Ducis Lancastrie Comitis Derbie et Leicestrie. The first probably refers to the parish of Doultong in Somerset, which includes the hamlet of Prestleigh.

One fly-leaf at the end has some contemporary shipping accounts. The end papers are taken from an Italian paper Service-book of the late 15th century, showing a Table of Golden Numbers and part of an Ordinale containing rules for Festa Duplicia and Semi-duplicia, Officium beate Virginis, etc. Prominence is given to feasts of S. Anthony of Padua; S. Louis (Franciscan), and S. Francis, and the probability is that it was a Franciscan book. Laing inserts the title and sale number, No. 343 London Sale.

Writing and Illumination. Written by a variety of 14th century Court hands. There are a few filigree initials, but most of the capitals are left unfinished.

Writing. Written by various 14th century legal hands.

There are also rules to be observed by those about to receive the Eucharist, with some other liturgical material.]

Provenance. The Kalender (Jan.—Oct.) is identical with the Kalendar of Linköping,¹ the significant names being—19 Jan., Henrici Ep. M.; 15 Feb., Sigfridi Ep. C.; 18 May, Erici Regis M.; 28 May, Translacio Sancte Birgitte; 17 June, Botolphi Abb.; 10 July, Kanuti Regis M.; 29 July, Olavi Regis M.; 1 Sept., Egidii Abb.; 6 Oct., Translacio Eskilli M.; 7 Oct., Birgitte.

There are various Swedish inscriptions in which the name Christopher Paulsen, a native of Samland, is frequently repeated. F. 106 v, Iste liber Pauli Nicholai natus in Salmia [?] et ensula domo; Iste liber Cristofferus Paulii natus in Smalandia et insula domo; Cristoffer Paffuelshoun; Thenne bock horer mag. Christoffer Pauvelshoun. On the second, Anno Domini 1589 Thenne 10 Junii blefv jagh Cristoffer Pauvelshoun kallatt afv altingeman sampft borgemästare och Råd [. . .] till stadzskrifvare embette. (On the 19th June 1589, I, Christopher Paulsen, was appointed Town Clerk by the Altingsman, Mayor, and Town Council.)

These inscriptions certainly refer to one 16th century owner. The next mark of ownership is the statement in D. Laing's hand, From the Collection of Erskine of Alva.

The book has been examined by Dasent, who describes it on a paper fly-leaf as The Borough Law of Sweden. G. W. Dasent, D.C.L., Sept. 20th, 1859. A very curious MS.

Two fly-leaves of vellum are fragments of a noted breviary of the 13th [?] century, containing portions of the lessons from the Book of Judith and Responds of the 4th Sunday in September.

Writing. An average Gothic hand, with rubrics and plain or roughly ornamented red capitals, with a few marginal scrolls.

Provenance. A ms. written in the north of France or in Flanders, which has had Spanish owners. On the fly-leaf, in a

17th century hand, is written Elamano J. Plumademi Don Migel de Cortes Vº de la Ciudad Doanberes [?] F. natural de lamaima Ciudad. Hernando Siprian de Cortes. On the recto of the same leaf is found Dios lamano J. Plumademi Fernando del [. . .]. In both cases the hand resembles a notary's. The Plate of Alexander Deuchar, Edinburgh, Steel Engraver to His Majesty, is upon the inner board with the number 95 and G. 25 on it.¹

Writing and Illumination. A good characteristic Flemish or northern French hand of the 15th century, with plain dull gold initials on alternate blue and red grounds, and larger and more elaborate gold initials on red or purple grounds.

Provenance. The ms. is of the northern French type. The arms on f. 1¹ are those of Louis II, Duke of Orleans, grandson of Louis of Valois and Valentina Visconti of Milan, who reigned as Louis XII of France, 1498-1515. They bear the quartered coat of Orleans and Visconti. The arms of Orleans alone appear in the border on f. 5, along with the scroll Le Duc Dorlien.

The ms. must have been executed for the Duke of Orleans on his election to the Order.¹

Writing and Illumination. The script is a good example of the characteristic northern French or Flemish hand of the period, as is also the illumination. The initials are dull gold on dark lake grounds with gold scroll work. On f. 5 there is a complete border of fleurs de lys on an azure ground, with the arms of Orleans occurring twice, and also the figure of a knight in armour emerging from his tent, wearing a tunic of azure brodered with fleurs de lys and a jewelled ducal coronet, and bearing a sword. This is doubtless meant to represent Louis, Duke of Orleans himself.

Provenance. This MS. was in all probability written at Perugia. It bears four coats of arms—the arms of the city of

Of later marks there is a sale entry, from which we learn that it sold for £18, and underneath, in pencil, Laing writes *From Dr. Wellesley's Collection No. 7.*² This must refer to Henry Wellesley, Chancellor of Oxford and Curator of the Bodleian Library (1791-1866).

Writing and Illumination. The hand is of a good italic type, the title being in burnished gold Roman capitals, the ordinary initials blue and red or red and purple filigree, with three more elaborate illuminated initials of lake, blue, green and buff on gold grounds, embellished with gold rayed discs, and containing the three coats of arms, the arms of the city of Perugia standing alone in the centre of the title.

Provenance. A 13th century inscription on f. 1 states that a certain 'magister bartolomeus' gave this book to the monastery of Bury St. Edmunds—Hunc librum dedit magister bartolomeus sancto edmundo. This is followed by a 14th century Tabula and an easily identified Bury press-mark, M. 48. Again, on f. 2 v, a Tabula has been added in the 15th century, headed by the same press-mark and the following inscription : Liber sancti Edmundi Regis in quo continentur. Both Tabulae contain three additional treatises, which, according to a 17th century note (f. 2 v), were already missing at that date.

The next mark of ownership is a faint pencil note on the first paper fly-leaf, On vellum, from H. Spelman's Library. Sir Henry Spelman (1564-1641) was a Norfolk antiquary,¹ and author of the well-known book The History and Fate of Sacrilege. His library seems to have passed into the hands of Cox Macro of Bury,¹ whose MSS. were in turn sold in 1819 to a Norwich bookseller for £150, resold by him at Christie's in 1820, and purchased by Dawson Turner and Hudson Gurney for £700. That this particular volume was bought by Dawson Turner is evidenced, (1) by Sir Francis Palgrave's description of the ms. in 1842 on first paper fly-leaf, Palgrave being Dawson Turner's son-in-law;¹ (2) by Laing's statement (second fly-leaf), From the Collection of Dawson Turner. Dawson Turner's Collection was sold in 1859. In his Sale Catalogue² there is a long description of the ms., embodying Palgrave's Notes. Along with Laing's signature is a price, £3, doubtless the amount for which he bought it.

Writing and Illumination. A beautifully written ms., well spaced and with wide margins. The ornament consists of plain red or green capitals, with blue and red or green and red filigree initials to the different books. The third treatise is written in single narrow columns, space being left for a second version.

Liber Medicina [?]	secundum Petrum de Musandia	.	.	.	f. 1
Circa omnium egritudinem genera . . .
Ends f. 58 v,	tertiane de colera atro.

Provenance. There is a partially erased inscription, written in the late 13th or early 14th century, on f. 1, Liber monasterii [.] cuiusdam [?] venerabilis magistri Gerardi de Hammont Canonici Sancti Andree [.]. So much of this inscription is undecipherable that it is impossible to know whether it refers to St. Andrews in Scotland, but that supposition is perhaps confirmed by the resemblance of the ms. to a Coupar-Angus ms. of Bede and S. Patrick's Purgatory, now in the Vatican Library.¹ I do not find the name Gerardus de Hammont in the St. Andrews Chartulary.

On the fly-leaf is the signature of Alex. Walker, Dean of Guild, Aberdeen (d. 1903).

Writing and Illumination. Well written, with plain red capitals, one decorative initial at the beginning in red touched with blue. (Compare with the Coupar-Angus ms.¹)

Provenance. This is probably an English book, the illumination being of the Anglo-Norman type. Two early inscriptions have been cut out on ff. 1 and 3. On f. 3 the end et patrōni is left. There are three inscriptions on fly-leaves, inserted in the 16th century, which prove quite conclusively that the book was in use in Scotland then, and probably earlier. One refers to a transaction between a certain Robert of Tynningham and John Dunning concerning property in St. Andrews: Memorandum quod ego Robertus de Tynnyngham vendidi tenementum meum situatum in civitate Sancti Andree pro xl solidis magistro Johanni Dunnyngh nisi oppignoratum fuerit citra nunc et sinod [. . .] Dunkeldensem, et reddiderem eidem magistro Johanni Dunnyngh prenominatam summam pecuniarum in testimonium hujus rei posui librum meum in pignus. Scripta manu propria.

The other two refer directly to owners: Iste liber pertinet episopci Orkad[ensi]; Iste liber pertinet Abbatii Sancte Sedes Anmarum. Andrew, Bishop of Orkney, 1476-1503, was also Vicar of Kirkbean in Galloway. It is therefore probably permissible to suppose that he either received the volume from the Abbot of Souleseat, or presented it to him. I am not sure which of the two inscriptions is of earlier date.

A long inscription by William Henderson, Librarian, records the gift of the ms. to the Library by David Bruce, a citizen of Edinburgh, in 1676.¹

Writing and Illumination. Well written and well spaced, with rubrics, blue and red filigree initials, very fine decorative initials of the best late 13th century type in blue, lake, buff and gold, with animal forms, birds, fish, etc., woven into the ornament. Each book has either a historiated or a decorative initial.

1. Bk. I, f. 2 v. Professor in black biretta and pupil.
2. Bk. II, f. 64. Professor in blue cloak with cape and hood, two pupils.
3. Bk. III, f. 123 v. Ornamental initial.
4. Bk. IV, f. 298. Doctor in cloak and black cap, feeling patient's pulse.
5. Bk. V, f. 378. Doctor and pupil, beside the doctor a trident.

17. 4 ff. containing Chap. iii, 'De Morbo et Accidente,' which should properly follow f. 4 at the beginning 271

Provenance. There are no definite marks, and from its appearance the book may be either English or French. On f. 1 there is a modern shelf-mark, No. 22, and on the fly-leaf the number 693, and the price £2, 10s. in pencil.

Writing and Illumination. Extremely well written in fine black ink on fine vellum by two scribes. There are good decorative initials in blue, lake, and gold, and also blue and red filigree initials with saw pattern in the margins. Some rubrics are not filled in. The marginal notes are mostly of the 14th century.

Provenance. Probably an English MS., but with no indications of original ownership, and very imperfect. The names of several successive later owners are found. On a vellum fly-leaf is the following inscription, 1431 Sum liber Robarti Glaspulli cui semper dejunctus ero. Quisquis oberrantem cernis fac deum. On the last end paper in a 17th century hand the name Ex libris Ja. Hutcheson, and the price 37/6. Below the first inscription, in a very minute hand, Samuel Mason, Yarmouth, Norfolk, 1773, the same hand writing the description of the contents on the previous fly-leaf, and adding the price 7/6. On the first end paper is a dim inscription, Bibliotheca Naiulasiana [?]. Also, in pencil, '1212.'

Writing and Illumination. There are three or four different hands, all of the 13th century. The ornament consists of plain red capitals with occasional attempts at filigree work.

Provenance. The whole volume is written by one hand, with the exception of the recipes. Many of the treatises are signed and dated by the scribe, Robert of Sherburn. The recipes are signed Franciscus Cox. All later marks are erased, except for a contemporary signature on f. 143, Grocynn Schyrburn. Laing seems to have acquired the volume in 1865.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is very minute and beautiful. There are a few ornamental initials, and a full-page illustration at the beginning.

Provenance. The provenance is difficult to determine. It would seem, from the script, to be either an Italian book or written in France under Italian influence. There are no marks of ownership. The number 982 and the name Serapio are written in pencil in a modern hand on a fly-leaf. There are some medical notes on the paper fly-leaves at the end which look like Italian script of the 16th century.

Writing and Illumination. Very well written in black lustrous ink in a hand which suggests Italian influence. The illumination is more like French work. There are good decorative and pictorial initials, but four of these last have unfortunately been cut out. The margins are badly cropped.

1. Fol. 1. Good spiral decorative initial in blue, lake, green and buff.
2. Fol. 1. Initial to Bk. 1. Lake ground. Professor sits at desk teaching. He hands a book to one of his pupils.
3. Fol. 87. Good decorative initial.
4. Fol. 87 v. Blue ground. Doctor sits by bedside of patient, a medicine bottle in hand. Patient's body and face are spotted. A woman stands by the bedside.
5. Fol. 111. Good decorative initial.
6. Fol. 111 v. Pale lake ground. Doctor sits by patient's bedside holding his arm, possibly feeling his pulse.

Provenance. Of this there are no distinctive marks. The hand may be Italian. On the paper fly-leaf are bibliographical notes in the hand of E. Nigrini Luivera [?]. (Compare Nos. 108 and 134.) On the inner cover in pencil the number 676.

Writing and Illumination. Well written in Italian Gothic hand, with rubrics and plain red capitals. Some spaces have been left for illumination. Gloss by more than one hand, contemporary and later. The margins are a good deal cut.

Provenance. There is no clear indication of origin, but the hand suggests Italian provenance. According to Laing's list it was one of the mss. from Lord Alva's library, but it does not appear in the Press Catalogue.¹

Writing and Illumination. The hands are all pretty good, and the volume is enriched by many good red and blue or red and purple filigree initials.

Provenance. An Italian MS., but with no indications of more definite provenance. An almost illegible inscription can be discerned on f. 1, which seems to read, L. Gregorii Gyraldi Ferrarien. dono dedit Fr. Falloppidus [?].

Writing and Illumination. There are three distinct hands. The first writes ff. 13-75 in round minuscule, with blue and red filigree initials. The second is responsible for ff. 76-120, which is Italian Gothic, blue and red initials. The third writes ff. 121-190 in italic hand, with plain red capitals, space being left for ornamental initial at the beginning.

Provenance. The script is Italian. The arms of Humphrey Walrond, Deputy-Governor of Barbadoes, created Marquess de Vallado by Philip IV, 1653, are stamped upon the margin of f. 1, but they may belong to a descendant, as the stamp has a very modern look. On the verso of f. 8 there is a memorandum in Italian of various purchases. The number '173' is on a label on the front board.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is good Italian Gothic with plain red capitals. There are illustrations occupying the lower half of each page, probably inserted at a late date. They are very roughly drawn and crudely coloured, and in some cases unfinished. The landscape where it exists is of Italian scenery, but always crude and unfinished.

GERALDUS SUPER LIBRUM NONUM ALMANSORIS.

Latin, paper and vellum, 11" x 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ ", ff. 157, double columns, 36 lines to a page. Cent. xv, Flemish. Written for Archbishop Schevez. Binding: Original, rebacked, oak boards covered stamped leather, bearing familiar stamps of a Louvain binder, viz. Tudor Rose, Pelican, Eagle, Holy Face, etc., and a rebus composed of a bird, the letters ve, a bent bow and stars.¹ The title is inset on a vellum slip in a brass frame; two broken brass clasps remain.

Ends f. 156, et sic est finis istius libri pateati per me Geraldum de brossos clericum, decima die mensis Julii Anno Domini 1391 et sic benedictus deus in secula seculorum. Amen. Explicit Giradi de Solo. Amen.

Provenance. Archbishop Schevez was evidently the first owner of the book. Under the colophon is his name Schevez, and further, Liber Willelmi Sancti Andree Archiepiscopi, etc. Both inscriptions are in his own hand, which is also found in several incunabula in the Library. The binding corresponds with that of other books of his, many of which he seems to have acquired in the Low Countries.

A 17th century hand has written underneath a memorandum referring to the colophon. Memorandum That printing was inventit in anno 1442 swa that this buik was wrytin befoir printing about fyftie ane yiers. In point of fact, however, the colophon refers to the composition of the work, not to the date of this ms. On the verso of the last leaf is a scrawl, Channos Jehan 1556, and on the first folio in a 17th century hand, Jas. Wood.

On f. 1 v Dr. M'Crie notes the fact that the book belonged to Archbishop Schevez, and adds some facts about him. Below Laing adds, The above note is in the handwriting of Dr. M'Crie. The book was in the Library of Dr. John Jamieson and purchased at his Sale¹ by Dr. J. Lee.

Dr. Jamieson died in 1838, and Dr. Lee in 1859. The latter became Principal of the University in 1840. The book must have been bought at his sale.²

Writing and Illumination. A fair hand with red and purple rubrics and capitals. The original foliation remains, and the volume is in good preservation, though it has lost two leaves.

Provenance. Probably an English ms. There are no specific indications apart from the script.

Writing and Illumination. A very good 12th century hand, the initials all unfortunately unfinished. The only ornaments are the rubrics and some faint sketches of animals, etc., in the margins made with the stylus.

 Ends incompletely at Chap. 2, Lib. ix, et pertinet quicquid ad obturbanam. (Wants two books.)

Provenance. There are no definite marks, but the hand is almost certainly English. The book seems to have come into the Library with other MSS. from Lord Alva's library.

Writing and Illumination. A very good 12th century script. The initials, where they are inserted (i.e. only in a few places in Books I and II), are either plain red or red and green. The rubrics have in some cases run a little, the margins are badly cropped, and at the beginning the leaves are worm-eaten and stained. It is unfortunate that so much is missing at the end.

have been part of a much larger volume. There are many entries denoting later (19th century) ownership, from which we discover that, prior to its acquisition by W. H. Black in 1851, it was in Germany.

On a paper slip pasted on the inner board is the following description: Gualteri ab Insulis Alexandreidos Libri (deest finis) Cod. Membran. Saeculi xiv. Cod. membranaceus versus 1380 scriptus. Prodivit e libris Mathiae Directoris Gymnasii Moenofr. [Frankfurt on Main] numero 1910. Ruf Loder [?]. A correction of the date on this slip is made by W. H. Black, who suggests 13th century.

On the fly-leaf opposite is Black's signature, Guil. Henrici Nigri, Codex, Londini, 7 Feb. 1851, followed by a pencil note, Olim Klaussii, referring possibly to the previous owner. The table of contents and bibliographical notes which follow are inserted by W. H. Black, as are also some pencil entries, from which it is just possible to pick out the date 1255 and a price 10s.

Laing notes that he got the ms. from Black's Sale in July 1873. The Catalogue of Sale¹ mentions the purchaser, 'Saunders,' and the price 14s.

The printed slip pasted on the inner board is not taken from Black's Catalogue.

Writing and Illumination. A fair hand, with plain red book initials and smaller capitals touched with red. The gloss is contemporary.

Provenance. An English ms., the earliest mark of ownership being the signature on f. 1, C or G. E. Alva (cf. No. 107). This, with the heraldic book-plate of Charles Areskine of Alva, Esq., Lord Justice Clerk (1680-1763), bearing the motto Je Pense Plus and a shelf-mark g. 2. 46, show that it belonged to the Alva family. It appears in the Press Catalogue of Lord Alva's library,¹ and must have been bought by Laing when this collection was dispersed.

Writing and Illumination. The hand is typical of the late 14th century, fairly good, possibly written by two scribes. The ornament consists of red and blue filigree initials with simple border on ff. 1, 47, and 53. In the verse part of the Chronicle the ends of the lines are marked in red, and proper names throughout are frequently underlined in red. The ms. is much soiled and stained at the beginning and end, the vellum is rough, and the margins badly cropped in parts.

This is a collection of precedents for letters extracted from a portion of the correspondence of the Kings of England. It consists of copies both of letters arising under the Privy Seal and the Signet, and of letters received by the king from abroad, which the compiler thought useful as models of style. Most of the letters are consequently undated. The letters under the Privy Seal belong to the latter years of Richard II, for the most part when Edmund Stafford was Keeper, and the collection contains a certain number of Stafford's own letters relating to his transference to the bishopric of Exeter. The Signet letters, which are undated, seem to belong for the most part to an earlier date, apparently about the tenth year of Richard II. There are, however, both earlier and later letters, the extreme dates of those which are dated being 26th July 1340 and 24th January 1410.

Provenance and Notes. The letters are in various hands, presumably those of the copying clerks of the Privy Seal and the Signet, and a few of them have the subscription of John Prophete, but this may be copied. Other subscriptions occur, notably that of Michael Sergeant, Dean of Arches (f. 99). Prophete, however, seems a likely owner of the book, since he was a king's clerk for the greater part of the reign of Richard II, being successively Clerk of the Privy Seal, Secretary, and Keeper of the Privy Seal, and dying as Dean of York in 1416.

There is an inscription on the last leaf, of a date not much later than the ms. itself, which refers to an early owner, Thomas Nicolls, probably a notary. It reads Sum liber Thome Nicolls.

Laing bought this ms. from the sale of Arthur Taylor, F.S.A., in 1871, when it was bound with No. 178 (see description of that ms.).

This is a collection of great importance, but it is difficult to give a more detailed description of its contents without calendaring it fully. It is hoped, however, that the Royal Historical Society will shortly publish it in the Camden Series, so that further detail is unnecessary here.

Ends f. 125 [1419], and rested hym in þe castell till þe cyte wer sette in good rule and governaunce. Deo gracias.

Provenance. This is an English ms. There is a note on f. 1 in the same 17th century hand which annotates Nos. 107 and 181, which are from the Alva library, and the ms. occurs in Lord Alva's Press Catalogue.¹ The entry is as follows: Cronicon Angliae a Willelmo Rows Warwicensi Warwic, and may refer to the Historia regum Anglie of John Rows of Warwick. That, however, is a Latin chronicle, and I think a different work. This seems to be the Brute Chronicle extended to about 1480.

There are a number of names on f. 125 v, which may belong to early owners, Elizabet Moncke, Edward Lynley, George Barton. On f. 36, Thomas Jackson; f. 83 v, Robert Banks, Edward Linley; f. 90 v, Liber Henrici Wyllamson; f. 104, Memorandum that I Wyllam Curtes hathe resaved . . .

Laing's signature is found on f. 1.

Writing. A fair, characteristic English hand with plain red capitals. The first folio is soiled, six leaves are missing, and the edges much mended.

Provenance. The name of the scribe and date of writing are given in a colophon at the end of the genealogies on f. 346. Et finitur liber xv^{to} die mensis maii, hora octava post meridiem A.D. m^ov^cx^o, etc. Rob[er]t[us] Scot. Unfortunately an inscription giving the name of the original owner has been cut out of the lower margin of f. 1. An erased inscription on f. 346 by the hand responsible for the foliation is also not decipherable. The name David occurs on f. 131. The record of its gift to the Library by William Colville, Primare, 1670, is inserted by William Henderson, Librarian, on a fly-leaf at the beginning.

Hic liber Manuscriptus in Pergaminis (empt. ex libris magistri Jo. Sibbald Perthensis 106lib. 13sh. 4d) cui Titulus Scotichronicon continens Acta et Gesta Regum et Procerum Populi Scoticani nec non Pontificum et rerum Ecclesiasticarum Britanniam quod attinet rationem Libris sedecim comprehensum, quorum quinque priorum auctor erat Jo. Fordenus, reliquorum autem undecim auctor erat McCulloch. Donatus est Academiae Edinburgenae a Domino Guilielmo Colvillo ejusdem Academiae Primario A.D. 1670.

The reference to McCulloch here as 'auctor' of the last part of the history is difficult to explain, unless there has been some confusion with Magnus McCulloch, the copyist of two MSS. of Fordun and of MS. 205 in this Catalogue. (See MS. 205.)

Writing and Ornament. A very neat uniform hand showing strong French influence, with headings in a Gothic hand and very black ink; ornamental capitals touched with red, and smaller initials, either plain blue and red, or blue and red filigree. There are some rough pen drawings of heads in the pedigrees at the end.

CHRONICON JOHANNIS DE UTINO (in roll form).

Latin, vellum, $18\frac{1}{2}$ ft. $\times 18\frac{1}{2}$ ", on 8 skins. Cent. xiv, Italian, written at Utino, 1358. In cardboard case.

Contents :

Hic incipit prologus in compilationem ystoriarum totius bibletam veteris quam novi testamenti editum a fratre Johanne de Utino ordinis minorum.

Reverendissimo in xpo patri et domino domino Beltrando [Bertrando], dei gratia sancte sedis aquileiensis patriarche dignissimo, frater Johannes de Utino vel de Morteglano ordinis fratrum minorum Salutem—et hanc cartam propria manu, Anno domini 1358 in civitate utini aquileiensis diocesani [.] avique scripsi.

Text. Adam primus homo a deo in agro damasceno de terra . . . formatus. . . .

The regular genealogy ends with the Popes Peter and Linus and the Emperor Titus III. Then follows a simple list of Popes and Emperors ending 1346.

Provenance. The prologue gives the original provenance of the ms. with its date. It was written at Utino in the province of Aquileja in 1358. There are no marks of ownership. A 17th century hand writes a title on the outside at the end. Genealogiae Arbor ab Adam usque ad Christum et omnium imperatorum Romanorum usque ad Titum III. There is also a label on the case with the following information: MS. Johannis de Utino Ordinis Minorum Chronicon Mundi Manuscript Roll, measuring $18\frac{1}{2}$ ft. long and $18\frac{1}{2}$ inches in width D/D.

Writing and Illumination. A good round Italian hand, the ink faded and rubbed in parts and soiled at the end. There is much decoration and illustration.

The genealogy proper, down the centre, has at the top a branched tree of raised, burnished gold, outlined in red and green, and, extending from it down the centre at intervals, square medallions of raised, burnished gold and silver, containing the important names from Adam to Christ. Intermediately, branching off from the central stem, are circles of red, green, and brown.

The illustrations proper include a circular Map of the World, with the sun, moon, and planets in their orbits (sun and stars gold, moon silver). The Ark, Egypt [?] and Canaan, both the last being buildings with battlements in red, green, and brown; the Tower of Babel, a similar building; the Altar of Sacrifice, the altar being silver, the table with the holy bread silver and gold; the Ark of the Covenant (gold); Bezaleel's seven-branched Candlestick (silver and gold); the Tables of Stone; the 'Mansiones' of the forty-two peoples of Israel; the Twelve Tribes and their Cities; Rome (a building with battlements); Jerusalem, a flat plan of a circular city with twelve gates all leading to the Temple in the centre (gold, silver, and colour).

The two initials at the beginning, i.e. of prologue and text, are raised, burnished silver. All the silver is tarnished.

 [This arrangement of letters does not exactly correspond with any of the printed editions, though all the letters in the ms. seem to be printed. There is much missing in the ms., as well as much that is illegible.]

Provenance. An Italian ms., on the evidence of script and illumination, but with no indications of early ownership. A modern hand writes on the fly-leaf, The date of this book is 1443 as seen on 1st page. The date in question, which, since rebinding, appears on f. 2, is the date when the particular letter was written, the script being of a considerably later date. There are two other pencil marks on the fly-leaf, the number 2801 and A.G. price 15s.

Writing and Illumination. A fine, uniform minuscule, written on fine vellum, with wide margins. The initials in Part I are of burnished gold on grounds of lake, blue or green with gold scroll work. All have suffered much from damp. The initial of Part II, on f. 99, is gold with a vine design prolonged in the margin, the colours being green, blue, and lake, but it also has been blurred by damp. The whole volume has suffered much damage and loss, many leaves being stained and worn to illegibility.

Finis. Amen.

[This is a compilation (author unknown) from Marcus Fabius Pictor (Roman chronicler) and Filino (Carthaginian), Polybius and Livy.]

Provenance. An Italian ms., but with no indication of locality. There is a 15th/16th century inscription on f. 1, .S. abieta in domo domini S.E.M. On the paper fly-leaf is the number 2805, and again at the end the price 15/-.

Writing. A good uniform hand, with plain blue and red capitals.

Provenance. Italian, but with no local connections apparent. A slip at the beginning suggests an early date for the ms., i.e. 12th century. Laing has corrected this in pencil, This MS. is not earlier than the middle of the 15th century. D. L.

Writing. Italian minuscule. The initials have never been completed. The spaces have been filled in later with simple capitals. The first folio is much stained.

Contents :

In nomine D. N. J. C. Incipit liber dictus Trojanus.
Licet cotidie vetera recentibus obruant—seriem accedatur . . .	f. 1
In regno Thesalie . . .
Ends f. 136, ad praesentis operis perfectionem efficaciter laboravi.
Factum est autem presens opus anno dominice Incarnationis 1287 ejusdem primo ind ^e feliciter. Laus tibi sit Christe quoniam liber explicit iste.
Incipit epistola Sancti Bernardi de Regimine Domus . . .	136
Gracioso et felici militi—Reverendo Domino Raymundo castri ambrosi bernardus, etc.—sic agendum est quoniam . . . (incom- plete).

Provenance. This is not clear. From its appearance it might be of Dutch origin. There are no marks of early ownership. Bibliographical notes have been inserted in the 17th century on a fly-leaf at the beginning, and in the margin of f. 1. Laing's signature is on f. 1, and a note by him, T. Rodd, 513, Sale No. 362, indicating that it was bought by him at Rodd's Sale.

Writing and Illumination. A fair hand, with good filigree initials in red, blue, and purple, also some penwork illustrations.

1. Fol. 1 v. Eson crowning Peleus. King Eson seated, crowned, crowns Peleus kneeling and hands him the sceptre; four attendant figures, one carrying the orb and sword.

2. Fol. 2 v. Peleus sends Jason forth. King Peleus seated, legs crossed, holding a sceptre, addresses Jason, who kneels before him; four attendant figures.

3. Fol. 3. The building of the Argon. Argus building the boat which is represented with mast and sail.

4. Fol. 3. The Sailing of the Argonauts. Four figures seen on board with spears and shields.

5. End paper. Achilles and Hector. Two mounted knights in full armour, with vizors down, facing each other.

exaravit. Deo gratias. Amen.

Provenance. The colophon (see above) fixes the provenance of this ms. so far as the scribe is concerned. Florius Infortunatus may possibly be the Jehan Fleury of Paris who wrote ms. Douce 356, Bodleian Library. I have not, however, been able to compare the two mss.

The occurrence of the Royal Arms of Scotland in the border (f. 65) shows that the book must have been executed for a Scottish owner, or owners, to whom must belong the initials P. L., which occur frequently in the same border, united by a lover's knot. The arms¹ may probably be assigned to James III of Scotland (1460-88), but they present a notable variant in the crest.

The ms. was presented to the Library by John Colville in the year of his graduation 1654. (Vide inscription.)

Writing and Illumination. The hand is a very beautiful one, showing Italian influence. The ornament consists of small initials, for the most part of burnished gold on blue and lake backgrounds ; six-line book initials on gold grounds, floriated in blue, lake, vermillion, and green, with partial or complete floral borders in which acanthus foliage, wild flowers, fruit, birds, and animals are combined with ivy-leaf branch work ; one historiated initial (Aeneid, bk. vi), and three large miniatures at the beginning of each of the three poems.

Miniatures :

1. Fol. i. Bucolica. Half-page miniature enclosed by lines of lake and gold and surrounded by an elaborate floral border, woven into which is a hunting scene. In the foreground of the picture Tityrus plays his pipe under a tree, while Meliboeus, leaning on his staff, his goats following him, converses with him.

Behind, across a blue river to L., is Rome, a mediæval city with towers, and a river flowing through and round it. From its gates come forth Augustus in imperial robes, and his train. Virgil, dressed as a shepherd, kneels to him proffering a request. To the R. is a ruined city, and in the distance Mantua can be seen. In the floriated initial below are two heads, probably those of Tityrus and Meliboeus.

2. Fols. 18*v* and 19. Georgics. Two three-quarter-page miniatures enclosed within gold lines and surrounded by floral borders.

(a) In the foreground a man is tending bees. There are three hives, and the bees are sucking honey from the flowers with which the grass is carpeted. In the centre of the picture Maecenas reclines, and is approached by a dryad. Further back, across a stream, a man and woman with dogs are tending cattle. On a hill in the distance is Pan with his pipes, and in the far distance a city or castle in a lake.

(b) In the foreground one man is filling a wine-cask, another treads the wine-press, others are harvesting the grapes. Behind, one can see ploughing and sowing. Ceres, half-length in cloud, scatters seed; Minerva, also half-length, crowned with olive wreath, presides over a grove of olives. City in the distance.

3. Fol. 65. Aeneid. Three-quarter-page miniature, with floral border in which is a variant of the Royal Arms of Scotland, and the initials 'P. L.' united by a lover's knot. The miniature depicts the reception of Aeneas by Dido at Carthage. Eight or nine boatloads of soldiers are arriving. Aeneas, having disembarked, is seen kneeling to Dido, who, with her court, is at the gate of the city. Workmen are engaged in building walls of brick by the gateway, and within the city servants are preparing a feast in an open loggia. Musicians are also seen. The first two lines of the Aeneid are in gold capitals on a blue ground.

4. Fol. 144. Aeneid, Bk. vi. Historiated initial. Aeneas in full armour with the sibyl and a faun with spear.

Provenance. An Italian ms. presented to the Library by J. Wood Brown in 1914, containing a note of the presentation, Almae matri suae J. Wood Brown 1914, and a further note as to the history of the ms., MS. found by me at Naples 1880 in the binding of a xv Century book. J. Wood Brown.

Writing. Written in a fair minuscule, without ornament.

There are many marginal and interlinear contemporary notes.

Provenance. An Italian book. Two inscriptions are found. One, on the first fly-leaf, reads, Di Giovanni da Nobili de Malavolta[a] Ppo, and the hand might be contemporary. Underneath, in a later hand, is written, Questo Giovanni fu gonfaloniere della chiesa al tempo di Pio secondo nella spedizione della guerra di Napoli e morì in quella. The other is a 17th century inscription on one of the fly-leaves, Dono dedit Perillustris Dominus Ubaldinus Malavolta *domini Stephani Pape Eques mihi Alphonso Lando anno domini

Writing and Illumination. Written by several hands of only average merit. All the initials are left unfinished.

Provenance. Written in an italic hand not of the best type, and with no other marks of origin. The only mark of ownership is the monogram A. L. B. which has been pokered at the beginning and end and on the binding, but it is a later addition. Two pencil jottings on the first leaf give a number 605 and a price, £3, 3s. Initials throughout are left blank.

199. JUVENALIS SATYRE.

Laing 438.

Latin, paper, $6\frac{9}{16}'' \times 4\frac{1}{8}''$, ff. 88 (+1), 24 lines to a page. Cent. xv (late), Italian. Binding: Paper boards covered vellum, lettered 'Juvenalis Satyr: ms. Cum Argumentis antt. Codex Saec. xv.'

Argumentu[m] in hac satyra—mortui sunt.
Text. Semper ego auditor tantum . . .
Ends Satyra xvi, f. 88, et ventri indulxit non omne legumen. Telos.

Provenance. The script is Italian, but there are no marks of early ownership. The book belonged to Mr. W. H. Black, whose signature is found on the inner board, and who also contributes bibliographical notes on a fly-leaf. In these notes he states that the book was bought in London, May 1871. Iustum codicem Londinio emebat Melas Miliarensis xv Maii Anno 1871. It is to be presumed that Laing bought it at his sale in 1873.¹ The B.M. Catalogue of this sale indicates that it was bought by 'Saunders' for £1, 3s.¹

Writing and Illumination. Written in a good italic hand, the Argumenta in pale red, the titles in purple or green capitals, the initials plain Roman capitals touched with a thin wash of colour, blue or lake. The initial at the beginning is of flat gold and contains a figure like Pan playing a lyre, a helmet and armour beside him, a landscape background, and all in water colour.

Provenance. An Italian ms. with no marks of original ownership. Some names appear on margins and on fly-leaves, mostly of the 17th century.

On f. 65 v, John Murray; on f. 185 v, Carolus dei gratia 1657, Ex libris Rober . . .; on the end fly-leaf, Margareta and Alexander Carmichill; on the first fly-leaf a shelf-mark, Pr. 4, Sh. 2, N. 43 (18th century), and below the name Rangle. On the inner board there is a number 2314, and the book-plate of an Earl of Breadalbane (possibly the second Marquis, 1796-1862). On the back is still another shelf-number, 1349. Laing's signature is of date 1865.

Writing and Illumination. Written in a good italic hand on fine vellum, well spaced, and with wide margins. There are plain blue capitals, faint red rubrics and marginal headings, and the book initials are burnished gold on pale lake, blue, and green grounds.

Provenance. There are no marks of early ownership. The illumination may be English. There is a name on f. 1 (17th or 18th century), W. Stonehouse, and a modern note in pencil on a fly-leaf suggesting the 13th century as the date of the MS.

Writing and Illumination. A fair Gothic hand with elongated letters, some ornamented with elaborate penwork; plain blue and red capitals and elaborate blue and red filigree initials throughout. There is one illuminated initial of burnished gold, floriated, but very much defaced. One or two leaves are badly damaged, a few are missing, and the margins closely cropped.

Provenance. An English ms., very typical of the period. Contains some 15th century scribbles on a fly-leaf mainly in English, but no names or marks of ownership. The first library shelf-mark is an 18th century one, and it is not known how the ms. came into the Library. Laing annotates it on the paper fly-leaves at the beginning and end, and refers, for the missing stanzas, to a similar complete ms. in the Advocates' Library.¹

Writing and Illumination. A very typical English hand of the first half of the 15th century, with plain blue and red capitals, one illuminated initial with partial border of feathery branch work, much rubbed but also typical. The ms. is considerably soiled, and lacks at least two folios at the end.

The name Mabinus Makullog, and on the last fly-leaf I. purde.

Provenance. The ms. was written in Louvain by a Scottish student named Magnus Makculloch at various times during the year 1477. Abundant evidence for this is found in colophons noted in the 'Contents' (ff. 17, 85, 120, 136 v, 154 v, 177, 181, 198 v, 200). The colophon on f. 120 contains per me Magnum Makcullocht de Rossia in lovanio residentem, which may be compared with a similar colophon in the ms. of Fordun (B.M. Harl. 712) which reads per me Magnum Mackulloche clericum Rossensis Diocesis. There is little doubt that they refer to the same person, namely, Magnus Makculloch, clerk to Archbishop Schevez, who transcribed two mss. of Fordun (ms. Brechin Castle and ms. Harl. 712¹), and is mentioned in error as 'author' of the last eleven books of the history in a late inscription in the Edin. Univ. ms. of Fordun (vide ms. 186 in this Catalogue).

On f. 136 v the colophon has per me Johannem de tayn alias Makculloch, and on f. 202 v we find the name Mabinus Makullog. It has been suggested² that these probably refer to relatives of Magnus who were in Louvain at the same time.

The chief interest of the ms., however, is to be found in the additions written on blank leaves and fly-leaves, which include three poems of Henryson and one of Dunbar. They are by a later hand, possibly of the early 16th century. From the colophon on f. iii, to the Tale of the Cock and the Jewel, we learn that the writer's name was John (nomen scriptoris Johannes plenus amoris). It is possible that he may have been the I. purde whose name appears more than once as owner of the volume³ and who probably lived in Brechin (vide f. i). The name John Purde appears in the Chartulary of Brechin, but under dates 1577 and 1585-6.⁴

Laing acquired the ms. in 1854.

Writing and Illumination. It is written in a fair, rather minute hand, with the headings and quotations in large, black, Gothic script, and ornamental headpieces to the books in red and black, the initial being in the centre and the opening sentence written round it in various ways. Into one or two of these are introduced shields bearing the arms of Scotland, England, France and Flanders, with one or two other coats, possibly of Flemish origin, but all are very poorly drawn and coloured. There are also one or two crude attempts at pictures: a Virgin and Child, Coronation of the Virgin, the evangelistic emblems, etc.

The script of the additions I am inclined to assign to the early 16th rather than to the late 15th century.

Provenance. The book contains now no indications of original ownership. It would seem to have been written about the middle of the 15th century. It contains on the vellum fly-leaf at the beginning a note in a 16th century hand of what is lacking in the ms., which note has been transcribed in a recent hand and inserted on the inner board. It was presented to the Library by Mr. William Henderson in 1673.

Writing and Illumination. A fair uniform hand with rubrics and plain red capitals. Certain additions have been made in the 16th century supplying some of the blanks.

Provenance. The ms. was probably written towards the middle of the 15th century, and soon after it was written it belonged to one Henry Clerk. This we gather from inscriptions on ff. 1 and 8, pertinet henrico clerk codex iste magistro. In the 16th century it was in the possession of R. Alexander, a law clerk, who made many legal additions and notes in margins and on blank leaves. His signature, R. Alexander cause clericus, manu sua, is on ff. 70 and 205 v, and a still later hand has inserted the name Guthrie after Alexander in the above inscriptions and also on ff. 1 and 6, from which it is to be presumed that it passed into the hands of an Alexander Guthrie. It came into the Library with the Aeneas Mackay Collection in 1912.

Writing and Illumination. The script is very moderate with coloured capitals, and the paper is now very soft and difficult to handle. Additions, both marginal and other, have been made at various times in the 15th and 16th centuries.

Provenance. The first part of this MS. appears to have been written about the beginning of the last quarter of the 15th century; the rest, according to a colophon at the end of the Laws of Alexander which is now missing, but is referred to in the analysis of the MS. by Cosmo Innes,¹ was 'endyt and wrytyn at Ynglis Terwatt the first day of Marche, the zer of God imiiiiicnynty and vi zeris.' The earliest mark of ownership is, I think, the inscription among some pen trials on f. 251, Liber honorabilis viri Jacobi fletchir, which is repeated in Scots on f. 335. Many inscriptions (ff. 87 v, 89, 175, 240, 335) testify that in the latter part of the 16th century it belonged to Thomas Scott, and had been given to him by his father, David Scott of Spencerfield, whose arms appear on f. 87 v with the date 1575. The fullest statement is on f. 175, bis buk pertenis to Dawyd Scot, son to Jhon Scot of be Spenserfield writtyn wt my awin hawnd and gyffen it to my son thome Scot conform to my hand wt ane gyft, writtyn be me in be forn end of his buyk to be samin effect. Dawe Scott wt my hand.

The following inscription occurs on f. 129 in the lower margin,
And . . . of þir persounis above vryttin to David Gybsoune my mayster, burgis of Disert. And on f. 335 still another 16th century owner's name is found, Magister Robertus Dawing est hujus libri possessor.

commendatarius (Commandator of Culross, 1566-1580). This is the justification of the name 'Colville ms.' used by Cosmo Innes.¹ Presumably the Commandator received the volume from Thomas Scott. In 1817 it belonged to Alexander Boswell, Lord Auchinleck, and later still to Mr. J. A. Maconachie, from whose hands it passed to David Laing.

Writing and Illumination. Written by two hands, both of which are characteristic, the last and latest being of known date, 1496. Initials in the first part are left unfinished, but the last part is rubricated and has good coloured capitals.

13. Albertani Tractatus de arte loquendi et tacendi	268
Printed Heinrich Quentell, Cologne, 1487. 4to. [Proctor 1288, Hain 403.]
14. ms. Salutes plurimas quas non	276
Ends f. 277 v, Deo Gracias. [14]90.

Provenance. These treatises have been bound together in the 15th century, and the ms. parts added for the most part by one hand about 1490. The Tabula on f. 1 is by this hand also, possibly that of George Herman [?], a monk of All Saints, Schwarzwald (vide colophon on f. 261). The name of a possible later owner occurs twice: on f. 187 v, F. Jacobus Holtzwart Mannensis, and on f. 3, F. Jacobus Holtzwart me manu suo habet.

On f. 3 there is also a modern stamp, Dem Kloster Roggenburg, which possibly refers to a monastery of this name in Swabia. From a sale entry we learn that its price in 'original wood boards' was 10s. 6d.

MISCELLANEOUS FRAGMENTS (chiefly from bindings).

I. Two leaves of a Bible, Latin, vellum, $15\frac{1}{2}'' \times 10\frac{5}{8}''$, written in double columns, 48 lines to a page. Cent x, English (possibly Winchester School). Contains the end of Sapientia and the Prologue and Capitula of Ecclesiasticus.

The whole appearance of these two leaves very closely resembles the work of the Winchester School. The rubrics are for the most part uncial, the colophons rustic capitals. Both leaves have been used in binding and folded horizontally.

II. One much mutilated leaf of a Bible, Latin, vellum, measuring roughly $20\frac{1}{2}'' \times 10''$, written in double columns, 39 lines to a page. Cent. xii, English (?). Containing Ezekiel xxiii 8-42.

A very fine ms. with semi-uncial titles and one coloured initial.

III. Three mutilated leaves of a Bible, Latin, vellum, measuring $8\frac{5}{8}'' \times 6\frac{1}{4}''$, in double columns, 53 lines to a page. Cent. xiii (late), French. Contains, f. 1, end of Genesis and Exodus i-v (v incomplete); f. 2, Exodus xxxix, xl, and Levit. i-iv (part of iv wanting); f. 3, 1 John ii(incomplete)-v; 2 John; 3 John and Jude (incomplete).

Both script and illumination show French workmanship at its best. The hand is small, clear, and uniform, the ink black and lustrous, and the vellum of the finest. The decorative initials show the usual type of spiral floriation with small animal heads, executed in blue, lake, vermillion, and buff on burnished gold grounds. One initial at the beginning of Leviticus is historiated, showing Moses horned and nimbed, the Tables of the Law in his hand, the head of the deity in a cruciform nimbus in the upper corner. The smaller filigree initials are also good. All three leaves are mutilated.

IV. Four leaves, measuring roughly $11'' \times 7\frac{3}{4}''$, of an Antiphoner written in Scotland, c. 1340, with later additions, containing parts of the services for the feasts of S. Columba and Corpus Christi, as follows :

S. Columba.—Part of ninth respond at Matins; anthems, chapter, hymn, anthem to Benedictus at Lauds; anthem to Magnificat at 2nd Evensong; rubric for Octave; respond and anthem for 1st Evensong, one anthem for Matins and Lauds of Sunday within the Octave; seven anthems for other days in the Octave; responds and anthems to Magnificat at 1st and 2nd Evensong of Octave Day.

Corpus Christi.—End of hymn Pange lingua at 1st Evensong and rest of services to ¶. Non est alia nacio of 7th respond at Matins, including proper anthems for psalms and Nunc dimittis, and Collect at Compline and hymn Sacris solemniis at Matins; all the rest as in Sarum Breviary.

The full noted service for an Octave of S. Columba (which has no Octave in the Aberdeen Breviary or other extant breviary used in Scotland) points to an important church dedicated in his name. This is confirmed by an allusion in the anthem to the Magnificat of 1st Evensong of the Octave Day, locumque istum tibi deditum. The fact that the Corpus Christi service (written in the same hand on the same leaves) is not Sarum Use, excludes Dunkeld Cathedral, and Iona is excluded because the Use is not Benedictine. There remains only one other church of any great size in Scotland for which such a service would be required, viz. that of the Augustinian Priory of Inchcolm. The prayer te laudantem serva chorum ab incursu anglicorum also points in the same direction, for Inchcolm was sacked by the English in 1335, and this service was evidently written not long after that date.

The service shows no connection with that in the Aberdeen Breviary. The proper anthems and Collect for Compline of Corpus Christi suggest a church of Canons Regular. The fact that the services of S. Columba, belonging to the Sanctorale, and Corpus Christi, belonging to the Temporale, are written in the same gathering and at the same time, point to their being an addition to a manuscript which was no doubt written in England at a date too early to contain Corpus Christi.

V. Two fragments of a Missal, probably of Sarum Use, containing :

- (1) Part of the Passion and Gospel for Wednesday in Holy Week, with Collect and part of the Epistle for Maundy Thursday.
- (2) Part of Gospel, Secret, and Communion of Maundy Thursday, and of Prophecy, Collect, and Lesson of Good Friday.

Such rubrics as remain are exceptionally short. The writing is possibly Scottish of the middle 15th century.

VI. One leaf of an English 12th century Grail, measuring 8"×5 $\frac{3}{4}$ ", 10 lines to a page.

Contains the end of the Communion of Friday after Ash Wednesday, and thence to the beginning of the Tract on the first Sunday in Lent. The contents are common to most Latin rites except the Grail, Domine, refugium factus es, on Saturday, which is that in the Missals of Durham and St. Albans, and is substituted for the usual Unam petii in the Whitby Missal.¹

¹ Uses collated by Dr. J. Wickham Legg in Missale Westmonasteriense (H.B.S.), vol. iii, p. 1459.

VII. Fragment of an English Lectionary of the 14th century, probably of Sarum Use, containing parts of the 4th, 5th, and 6th lessons from a sermon of S. Maximus, appointed in the Sarum Breviary for the 6th day after Christmas when a Sunday, and part of the first lesson for S. Silvester.

VIII. Two leaves of a 14th century English Collectar, $13\frac{1}{2}'' \times 9''$, in double columns of 21 lines. It is apparently of Sarum Use, and contains part of the Sanctorale from the Collect of Lady Day (25th March) to the Chapter at 1st Evensong of SS. Philip and James (1 May), including the Proper of SS. Richard, Ambrose, Tyburcius and Companions, Alphege, George, Mark and Vitalis.

IX. Two leaves (2nd imperfect) of a 14th century Sarum Grail, $11\frac{7}{8}'' \times 7\frac{3}{4}''$, 12 lines to a page, containing part of the Temporale from near the beginning of the Sequence Dic nobis quibus of Thursday after Easter, to Alleluia V. of Saturday after Easter (including the greater part of the Sequence Victime paschali).¹

X. Two leaves of an English 15th century Processional, $6\frac{1}{2}'' \times 4\frac{1}{4}''$, almost certainly of Sarum Use, containing :

- (1) Last part of R₇. Tristis est anima, V. Ecce appro- pinquabit hora, followed by R₇. *Ecce vidimus eum.*²
- (2) Part of V. Ostium abundavit, R₇. Revocabunt ccli, V.
In die perditionis, followed by much abridged rubric preceding Reproaches on Good Friday.³

This Processional must have contained much less than that printed by Dr. Henderson.

XI. Two leaves of a 14th century Sarum Missal, $11'' \times 7\frac{1}{2}''$ (much cut), in double columns of 34 lines, containing : Part of Gospel and the rest of the Mass of the Common of a Virgin; In natali plurimarum virginum, including Collect, Secret, and Post-communion Plurimarum virginum non martirum; Commemoratio b. marie quotidie in capella et in choro . . . officium, Rorate, etc.,

to middle of Post-communion. All as in printed Sarum,¹ but with very few rubrics, and Quinque prudentes given as alternative Alleluia V. in Common of many Virgins, as in Arbuthnott Missal.²

XII. The lower half of a leaf of a very fine illuminated English Antiphoner in double columns, perhaps c. 1430, probably of Sarum Use, containing part of Lauds, Sext (iii is an error for vi), None, and 2nd Evensong of the Common of Apostles.

XIII. Fragment of leaf of an English 15th century Grail, apparently of Sarum Use, containing parts of two Grails and of three Alleluias with their Verses, from the Common of Many Martyrs, as in the printed Sarum.³

XIV. Leaf, probably of a Cluniac⁴ Missal of the early 14th century, $10\frac{1}{2}'' \times 6\frac{7}{8}''$ (much cropped), containing Proper for SS. Eucherius (16 Nov.), Anianus and Gregory (17 Nov.), Odo, Abbot of Cluny (19 Nov.), Edmund K.M. (20 Nov.), Columbanus (21 Nov.), Cecilia (22 Nov.). The inclusion of S. Edmund suggests a House in East Anglia, but the hand appears to be French.

XV. Two leaves of a Portiforium, or abridged Breviary, with exceptionally short Lessons, $6\frac{1}{2}'' \times 4\frac{1}{4}''$, French [?], 14th century [?], containing the Sanctorale from S. Thomas (21 Dec.) to S. Agnes (21 Jan.), and from S. Scholastica (10 Feb.) to Lady Day (25 March), including Proper for SS. Silvester, Felix, Marcellus, Prisca, Fabian, Sebastian, Anthony (added in margin later), Scholastica, Valentine, Chair of S. Peter, Matthias, Perpetua and Felicitas, and Gregory.

XVI. Two leaves, $7\frac{1}{2}'' \times 4\frac{7}{8}''$, perhaps from the end of a French Book of Hours, of the late 15th century, containing the Hymn Gaude pia magdalena with Collect Largire nobis clementissime pater for S. Mary Magdalene, and Anthem Supernus hospes intravit and V. O beata Martha, with Oremus before Collect, which is missing.

On the second leaf there are some 18th century pen trials in which the name Gerbier is repeated.

XVII. Four leaves of an 11th century Sacramentary, measuring roughly $11\frac{3}{8}'' \times 8\frac{1}{2}''$ (but 3 are mutilated), 23 lines to a page, not English, taken from the binding of ms. 222, containing part of the Temporale and of the Commune Sanctorum, as follows :

Fol. 1. Ad Complenda (as for In natale Domini ad Sanctum Petrum in Gregorian Sacramentary);¹ Dom. i post Natale Domini (as for Dom. ii, in Gregorian Sacramentary);² Missa de Sancta Maria (as for Dom. i post Natale Domini in Gregorian Sacramentary).³ A 14th century hand has inserted the Postcom. Haec nos Communio, which is taken from In Octabas Domini ad Sanctam Mariam ad Martyres, in Gregorian Sacramentary);⁴ Kal. Januarii, Circumcisio Domini.

Fols. 2, 3, 4. In natale unius martyris; Item unius martyris; De martyre pontifice; In natale plurimorum martyrum (as in Gregorian Sacramentary);⁵ De martyribus episcopis; In natale confessoris episcopi (as in Gregorian Sacramentary⁶ for In Natale unius confessoris); De episcopo doctore; De confessore non episcopo; Item de confessore non episcopo; De confessoribus episcopis; De confessoribus non episcopis; De uno confessore (partly). The Commune Sanctorum here is much fuller than that of the Gregorian Sacramentary, but agrees with it in certain parts.

XVIII. Two leaves, both mutilated, possibly from a Psalter of the 11th century, taken from the binding of ms. 74, containing part of the Service of the Dead, viz. Collects, Anthems, Responds, and Verses preceding Matins, and Matins to the middle of the 3rd lesson of the 3rd nocturne.

The usual Psalms, Anthems, Responds, and Verses are found, though occasionally the order varies. The lessons are very unusual, and being much mutilated are difficult to trace.

XIX. Two fragments of a 12th century Grail, each containing one folio and a half, $12\frac{1}{2}'' \times 10\frac{3}{4}''$ (much cropped), in double columns, taken from the binding of ms. 123, containing :

(1) From the Off. Ad te domine of Dom. x post Pentec. to Gr. *Converte*re of Fer. vi^a Jejunii, and parts of 4 Sequences as follows :

Juste judex Jhesu Christe rex regum et domine.

End of a Sequence. Et tecum trip . . . diae in regno cui nullus persecutor ad propinqu . . .

Johannes Jhesu Christo multum dilecte virgo (Nat. S. Joh.).

Verbum dei deo natum (S. Joh. ante portam latinam).

(2) From Ps. Domini est terra et plenitudo ejus In Vig. Nat. Domini to Gr. Exit sermo In Nat. S. Joh.; and one half-folio containing Off. Gloria et honore, Co. Qui vult venire post me; Oct. S. Agnetis; Procession, Anthems, and Introit In festo Purificationis; and Off. and Co. In Cathedra S. Petri; Sancti Gregorii Papa; Annunciationis S. Marie and Introit Circumdederunt me of Dom. in Septuagesima.

The only variation from Unreformed Roman Use¹ is in the Alleluia Verses, the Grail of Fer. iii^a Jejunii, and the Introit and Grail of the feast of the Annunciation.

It is well written in a clear round hand with red or red and blue capitals. One floriated initial begins the Introit for Christmas Day. The colouring, blue, red, green, and pale yellow, is somewhat crude and the workmanship also, but the result is effective. The music is in neums.

XX. One leaf of a 12th century Grail, $10\frac{7}{8}'' \times 8\frac{1}{8}''$, containing part of the Temporale from Ember Friday in Lent to Thursday after the 2nd Sunday in Lent. The music is in neums.

It does not agree with any of the Uses collated by Dr. Wickham Legg.²

XXI. Fragments of a noted Missal of the 12th century, English (?), containing part of the Temporale from the middle of the Gospel of Wednesday in the third week after Easter to the end of the Epistle of the Mass Cantate of 4th Sunday after Easter.

Corresponds as far as it goes with Sarum and not with York, Hereford or Roman.

XXII. Four fragments of a noted Missal of the 12th century, viz.:

(1, 2, 3) forming parts of a leaf containing from the middle of the Passion on Tuesday to end of Introit on Wednesday in Holy Week; Sec. Grata tibi sint, dominic, munera quibus (see Gelasian Sacramentary, ed. Wilson, p. 217, where it is assigned to an Advent Mass); Postcom. Repleti, domine sacri muneris; Super Pop. Tua nos misericordia. The rest is common.

(4) containing parts of 1st Prophecy on Easter Even.

XXIII. Upper part of leaf of a noted Breviary of the 12th century, containing portions of anthems, responsories, and lessons from a Common, probably that of Many Martyrs.

² Missale Westmonasteriense, iii. (H.B.S.)

XXIV. Leaf of a noted Missal of the 12th century, containing the Epistle Non cessamus, Gospel Loquente jhesu ad turbas exce princeps unus accessit, Sec. Sacrificiis qs. dne. intende placatus ut et devotioni nostre proficiat et saluti, Postcom. Qs. ops. ds. ut illius salutaris capianus effectum, cuius per haec mysteria pignus accepimus. Per of the 23rd Sunday; ferial Epistle Nolo vos ignorare ministerium and Gospel Interrogavit ihesum unus de scribis quod esset primus; Mass of 24th Sunday after Trinity or Pentecost, with choir parts as on Dom. 23 at Sarum; Collect Epistle and Gospel as on Dom. 25; but Secret Propicius esto and Postcom. Concede nobis qs. dne ut per hec, as on Dom. 25 at York; beginning of ferial Lesson Si fuerit populus meus Israel.

XXV. Two fragments of a late 14th century noted Missal containing

(1) End of Gospel to beginning of Secret Ds. de cuius gracie tue rore of Thursday; part of Collect, Lesson and Gospel of Friday; end of Epistle, Grail, part of Gospel, Offertory and part of Secret Concede qs. ops. ds. of Saturday after the 3rd Sunday in Lent, and parts of the Mass of 4th Sunday.

(2) Parts of Prefaces, noted; rubric Hic sacerdos inclinato toto corpore ad altare dicat Te igitur usque benedicas primus ordo Te igitur; and a few lines of Canon.

XXVI. Two portions of a vellum leaf of a 14th century Ordinale, containing part of the Temporale following the Feast of the Epiphany.

XXVII. Leaf of a 15th century Breviary containing part of the Sanctorale from 2nd Evensong of S. Augustine to Lauds of the Beheading of S. John Baptist.

XXVIII. Four leaves of a 15th century Augustinian Breviary, $6\frac{1}{4}'' \times 4\frac{1}{4}''$, in double columns of 46 lines, containing part of the Sanctorale from 1st Evensong of the Feast of the Holy Lance, to 2nd Evensong of Conversion of S. Augustine, including the Proper of S. Monica.

XXIX. One leaf of a 15th century noted Missal of a central European or possibly Scandinavian Use, containing part of the Sanctorale, from the Introit of the Vigil of the Assumption of B.V.M. to the Secret of the Octave of S. Laurence. The Choir parts are noted.

[In vig. Assump. Introit] Salve s. parens; Ps. Quia concupivit; Col. Ds. q. virginalem aulam; Ep. Sapientia laudabit; Gr. Ben. et venerabilis vgo. d. genetrix; Ev. Extollens; Off. Beata es virgo maria; Sec. Munera nostra d. apud clementiam; Co. Regina mundi; Postco. Concede misericors ds. fragilitati nre presidium.

In die [Assump.] Gaudemus; Col. Veneranda nobis; Ep. In omnibus req.; Gr. Propter veritatem et mansuetudinem; ¶. Audi filia; All. ¶. Post partum; Seq. Congaudent angelorum; Ev. Intravit; Off. Diffusa; Sec. Intercessio qs. dne.; Co. Dilexi; Ps. Mense celestis particeps effecti.

In oct. Laurencii Introit Probasti; Ps. Exaudi dne. justiam; Col. B. Laur. nos, saciat dne. passio; Ep. Qui parce seminat; Gr. Posuisti; All. ¶. Levita; Ev. Nisi granum; Off. In virtute; Sec. B. Laurencii martyris tui honorabilem passionem.

XXX. Two vellum fragments of a leaf of a 15th century Antiphoner, probably Dutch, but possibly German, containing portions of the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th responds from Matins of the Common of the Apostles.

XXXI. Two leaves of a 13th century theological ms., $12\frac{1}{2}'' \times 9\frac{1}{4}''$, in double columns, 50 lines to a page, probably English, with marginal gloss and headed Cap. xxxiii.

XXXII. One vellum leaf, measuring $12\frac{1}{4}'' \times 7\frac{3}{4}''$, in double columns, from a 14th century moral treatise on the Decalogue. Well written, with good filigree initials. English or French.

XXXIII. Three mutilated leaves of a very fine early 14th century ms. of the Decretals of Gregory ix, measuring roughly $11\frac{1}{2}'' \times 10\frac{1}{8}''$, but much cut, in double columns of 44 lines, with marginal gloss, either English or French workmanship, with decorative initials in blue, lake, and buff, and good filigree initials.

Contains f. 1, Decretalium Gregorii IX, Lib. i, Tit. xxxii, De Officio Judicis. Ex litteris vestris accepimus—civitas capetur Constantinopolis . . . (Tit. xxxiii, Cap. viii).

F. 2 and 3, Ibid. Lib. ii, Tit. vi, middle of Cap. v. [Sed] si actor non convenerit—qui salvis exceptionibus sibi competentibus in . . . (Tit. viii, middle of Cap. iv).

XXXIV. One leaf of Norwegian Law Book, $10\frac{1}{4}'' \times 6\frac{5}{8}''$, 25 lines to a page. Bears a note to this effect—MS. from about 1310. The general law of King Magnus IV, book vii chap. 26 sqq. (Edition vol. ii, p. 119 sqq.)

XXXV. One leaf of Moral Poem written in Norman French, closely resembling the Manuel des Péchés of William of Waddington, but not apparently part of that poem. It measures $8'' \times 6\frac{1}{8}''$, but is badly cropped, written in double columns of 25 lines. Cent. xiv, English.

Contains Cap. vii—middle of Cap. xi, the rubric of Cap. vii wanting.

[Com]ment a dunkes dit unc.

End illegible, but rubric of Cap. xi reads, Si Adam e Eve auereient lie si engendrassent en parais.

XXXVI. Miscellaneous fragments which do not appear to be of sufficient interest to be described in detail.

212. KALENDAR.

Laing, Div. ii. 387.

Latin, vellum, $5\frac{1}{4}'' \times 3\frac{1}{2}''$, ff. 12. Cent. xvi, French-Flemish.
Binding: Paper, lettered 'Calendarium Romanum ms. c. 1510.'

Provenance and Notes. This is a late and very full Kalendar, and only general assumptions can be made from its contents as to its exact provenance. Its connections are mainly with the borders of France and Flanders, but it has also many English saints and not a few connected with Brittany, especially with Quimper.

In the 16th century it was in the possession of the family of Hugues Comte de Noyelle (at the mouth of the Somme), governor of Limbourg, Finance Minister of the Netherlands, and Marguerite de Bourgoigne, his wife, daughter and third child of Herman de Bourgoigne, Count of Falais.

A series of birthdays and obits of this family, from 1621-1666, are written in the Kalendar.¹ It is not unlikely that the Kalendar may have been in their possession earlier, if, indeed, it was not written for an ancestor. It contains an 18th century inscription on the first leaf, Ex Biblioth. C. R. Jardel.

213. ARNOLDI CREVECERODT SERMO. Laing 499^a.

Latin, paper, 8"×5¹¹/₁₆", ff. 8, 30 lines to a page. Cent. xvi (1521), German. Unbound, in leather case.

Contents :

Hic sermo extat editus per dominum Arnoldum Crevecerodt Augustinianum Misiensem [?] Episcopum ac Hildensemensem suffraganum quem recitavit in benedictione Domini abbatis monasterii sancti Michaelis. In die decem milium martyrum Anno domini millesimo quingentesimo vigesimo primo. Incipit sermo.

In nomine sancte trinitatis, etc. Venerabiles patres Domini spectabiles . . .

Ends f. 7, Quod ipse prestare dignetur cuius regnum et imperium sine fine permanet in secula seculorum Amen.

Provenance. The script is probably German; a clear hand, with a good rubric and a plain red initial.

214. SERMONES, ETC.

Laing 499^b.

Fragment of a 14th century theological ms., 7¹/₂"×5³/₈", ff. 8, in double columns of irregular length. Script French or Italian, containing various short sermons and other theological material. Unbound, in leather case.

216. FRAGMENT.

Laing 499d.

Twelve leaves of an abbreviation or summary of the Decretals of Gregory IX, measuring $8\frac{3}{4}'' \times 5\frac{3}{4}''$, written in double columns, 40 lines to a page. Cent. xiii, English or French, well written with blue and red filigree initials. Unbound, in leather case.

Contains a single leaf of Book I and Book III (Tit. xxxiv, De voti redemptione, to Tit. xli, De celebratione missarum).

217. CHRONICLE.

Laing 499e.

Two leaves of a vernacular version in verse of the prose chronicle of Guillaume le Breton. Folio I measures $12\frac{3}{8}'' \times 8\frac{3}{4}''$, f. 2, $12\frac{3}{8}'' \times 9''$, in double columns, 32 lines to a page. Cent. xiv (c. 1380), French. Each leaf is bound separately between glass.

Contents :

Puiʒ vous fis de Garenne conte,
 Et conte d'Aubemarle puiʒ f. i
 Ends f. 2 v, Lois trente mille livres,
 Et s'en revint ainsinc delivres.
 Et fu absolt et . . .
 The leaves are not consecutive.

Provenance and Notes. Certain clues to the history of the fragments are contained in inscriptions and jottings on the leaves as follows :

- On f. i (a). An erased inscription, Thomas Hutton or Hatton ex dono George Gascoigne (c. middle of 16th century).
 - (b). Two names, John Pekham and John Temponief [?] (end of 16th century).
 - (c). Four lines of notes in the same hand as those on f. iv.
- On f. iv. A series of notes in a late 17th century hand in Law French, referring to statutes, charters, and inquests from Henry III to Henry VI.
- On f. 2. The entry Pretrim 1£, 15s. anno 1670, in the hand of the above notes.

From these it is evident that the fragments must have been in England in the middle of the 16th century. They must have been part of the binding, a fly-leaf probably, of a book which belonged to a certain George Gascoigne (not improbably the famous writer of The Steele Glas), and was afterwards presented by him to Thomas Hutton or Hatton. In the 17th century the margins of f. iv were used for jottings by some one using Law French (the book they were attached to was probably a law book), and the book was either bought or sold in 1670 for £1, 15s. Afterwards the leaves were pasted down as end-pieces. The utmost care has been exercised in removing them from the binding, so that the script is still quite legible.

The vernacular translation of Guillaume le Breton's Prose Chronicle, of which these fragments are evidently a part, has been unknown hitherto. It is possible that it may have been the lost 'roman' of Jehan de Prunai, referred to by Guillaume Guiart in his poem La Branche des Royaux Lignages (written in 1306). This hypothesis has recently been worked out in some detail and the fragments printed in full.¹

218. FRAGMENTS OF AUCHINLECK MS. Laing, Div. ii. 1.

Four vellum leaves measuring $10\frac{3}{8}'' \times 7\frac{7}{8}''$, in double columns, 44 lines to a page, English (North). Cent. xiv (not later than the middle), bound in cloth, lettered 'Fragments of the Auchinleck ms.'

Contents :

1. Fragments of 'The Liif of Adam.'
Liȝtbern þat angel briȝt (l. 1).

þat may on min errand gon (l. 352).
2. Fragments from Romance of Richard Cœur de Lion (headed lvi).
(a) R[ichard went agayn] wel stille (l. 1745, acc. to Weber).

After him priked on her stede (l. 1918, Ibid.).
(b) And of whete grete plente (l. 2579, Ibid.).

Erl, baroun, squier and kniȝt (l. 2762, Ibid.).

Provenance and Notes. The first fragment has been printed by David Laing in A Penniworth of Witte, etc., Abbotsford Club, 1867, pp. 49-60 (as is noted in the Preface to this volume, enclosed with the Fragments).

The other two fragments of the Romance of Richard Cœur de Lion correspond, as indicated, with Weber's edition of the poem,¹ though the text varies slightly.

Two of the leaves were given to David Laing as specimens of old writing, and were in his possession some time before he discovered them to be part of the Auchinleck ms. Other two were secured by him later. They seem to have been used as covers for books which were purchased as notebooks by a professor at St. Andrews before 1750. (See Preface referred to above and enclosed with Fragments.)

APPENDIX I

Short Notes on the Greek mss. in the Library, contributed by H. J. W. TILLYARD, M.A., University Lecturer in Greek.

219. GOSPELS.

D. b. III. 6.

Perg., 14cm × 10cm. At the beginning a Table of Lessons. Text ends John xx 18. Two painted and gilt miniatures remain, both damaged, representing SS. Matthew and Mark. Date probably 12th century.

Contains the inscription ex libris Domini Johannis Chesselaci, and seems to have been presented to the Library by Sir John Chiesley about 1650.

220. GOSPELS.

Laing 6.

Perg., 24cm × 16cm. Large bold writing, headings and initials red, incomplete at the beginning (Matt. vii 7), 14th century.

From Woodhouse MSS. (vide Laing Catalogue).

221. GOSPELS.

Laing 667.

Perg., 19cm × 14cm (Aliquot Chart. poster.). Dates and headings red. Table of Lessons at the beginning incomplete, as is the text itself, which goes from Matt. i 17 to John i 42. The date 1712 appears on f. 1, but is obviously not that of the ms. itself, which may belong to the 15th century. Of the section numbering only 1α', f. 54b; 1β', f. 55; 1θ', f. 79b, can be made out.

222. GOSPEL LECTICONARY.

Laing 9.

Perg., 29cm × 22cm, double columns. Text in black, musical recitation marks (Ecphonetic) in red. Rubrics and headings in red, some illuminated initials. Begins with lesson for Easter Sunday. Cent. xii. Red plush binding.

The musical recitation of the Gospel is still used in the Greek Church, though it rests wholly on tradition, the Ecphonetic signs being of uncertain meaning. Probably they showed the rise and fall of the voice and indicated certain stereotyped phrases, but did not give the precise notes used. (Cf. J. Thibaut, Origine byzantine de la Notation neumatique de l'Eglise Latine, pp. 15 ff.)

223. PSALTER.

Laing 12.

Chart., 19cm × 14cm, 148 ff. Dated 1591. Headings and initials red.

At the end two poems on the Psalms.

224.

Laing 811.

'RITUAL ORDINANCE' OF NEOPHYTUS.

Perg., 16·4cm × 12cm, written in Cyprus in 1214 by Basil, a priest and notary of the diocese of Paphos; an early copy of the original ms. of Neophytus.

Fully described by the Rev. Frederick Warren, B.D., in Archeologia [1882], vol. 47, p. 1 et seq.

225. ACTS OF SAINT THECLA.

Laing 123.

Perg., 41cm × 30cm, 14 pp., double columns. Fine writing, probably 13th century.

Title: + "Αθλησις τῆς Ἁγίας πρωτομάρτυρος Θέκλης.

On p. 6 appears a section number $\kappa\epsilon$ (=25). This, being a direction for the binder, shows that our MS. is a fragment of a large book of Synaxaria or Acta Sanctorum.

226. ZONARAE LEXICON.

Laing 178.

Chart. bombaz., 29cm \times 22cm. Begins at $\alpha\kappa\rho\sigma\tau\omega\mu\beta\iota\sigma\nu$. Cent. xv-xvi.

According to a note by Laing it was 'brought from Constantinople by the Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Liston.'

227. CHRYSOLORAE EROTEMATA.

Laing 184.

Perg., 14.5cm \times 9cm. Initials and headings red (one illuminated). Probably 16th century.

Was in Dr. Askew's library (sold 1775 and 1785), and later seems to have been sold at 'Bearcroft's Sale.'

228. CHRYSOLORAE EROTEMATA.

Laing 572.

Chart., 20cm \times 14cm. Initials and headings red. Writing western in appearance, perhaps 16th century.

229.

FRAGMENT OF ONOMASTICON OF JULIUS POLLUX.

Chart., 22.4cm \times 14.8cm. Title on f. 1, 'Ονομασίαι θεῶν καὶ δαιμόνων καὶ τῶν περὶ αὐτὰ καὶ τιμῶν καὶ τόπων καὶ χωρῶν καὶ τῶν περὶ αυτ . . . καὶ τὰ τῶν τεχνητῶν καὶ τῶν θεραπευτῶν.

At beginning and end a fragment by a later hand, apparently on same subject. Probably Cent. xv, since there is a late 15th century inscription on the inner board, Conventus Santi

230.

D. b. VI. 13.

CASSIANI BASSI GEOPONICA SIVE DE RE RUSTICA.

Chart., 25·7cm×17·4cm. Treatise on Agriculture (Libri xx).

Presented 1630 by Mr. Alexander Johnstoun, 'jurisprudentie studiosus.' Written probably late 16th century.

APPENDIX II

The following notes upon certain Coats of Arms which occur in some of the manuscripts are contributed by Mr. A. VAN DE PUT of the Victoria and Albert Museum.

(1) MS. 35. Two shields :

1. Paly of six argent and azure a bend gules, for Viry ; on the bend in chief a crescent gules (for difference).
2. Quarterly : 1, 4, Viry (as above) ; 2, 3, gules on a cross or five mullets (6) azure, for Des Clets.

Both houses are of the Genevois. Pierre de Viry appears as grand-prior of Saint-Oyand in 1495, and he is mentioned after the death of Abbot Pierre Morel in 1510 ; but was never abbot of the monastery, as is alleged in Gallia Christiana Nova (iv. col. 252).¹ An Etienne de Viry was 'chambrier' of Saint-Oyand in 1447.²

Authorities.—¹ D. P. Benoit, Histoire de l'Abbaye et de la Terre de Saint-Claude, vol. ii, pp. 225-6, 1892. ² Ibid., pp. 150, 152.

(2) MS. 38. Barry of four argent and sable a chief gules ; arms of Manzoli, of Bologna.

For an account of this family see Dolfi, Cronologia delle famiglie nobili di Bologna, 1670, p. 510.

(3) MS. 45. Azure three fleurs de lys or, for France ; impaling ermine, for Brittany ; the shield ensigned by a royal crown and within a collar of the Order of S. Michael.

Arms of Anne of Brittany, Duchess of Brittany, Queen of France. She married, 1491, Charles VIII ; he died 1498-9. Secondly, 1499, Louis XII ; she died in 1514. The representation of the arms within the collar of S. Michael is somewhat unusual.

(4) MS. 49. Azure a bend of the same tincture semy of fleurs de lys or, fimbriated argent.

The insignia of the Nobili family, of Florence.

(5) MS. 51. Argent a chevron sable between three roses gules, seeded or ; the shield is charged upon a mitre and crosier and encircled by a laurel wreath. For Pierre de Lancrau, Bishop of Lombès, 1561-98.

The Bishop was of an Angevin family.

Authorities.—Gallia Christiana Nova, xiii, 326 ; Revue historique, littéraire et archéologique de l'Anjou, 1876, pp. 202, etc. ; Denais, Armorial général de l'Anjou, ii, 238, 1855.

- (6) MS. 68. Gules a chief argent over all a lion rampant azure crowned or; the shield charged upon a crozier.

The arms exemplify an Abbot of the important baronial house of Mareuil of Périgord. Pierre de Mareuil, Bishop of Lavaur (Languedoc), 1544-56, was Abbot of Brantôme (Périgord), in the Order of S. Benedict, from 1538.¹ Jean de Marevil was Abbot of Quinçay from about 1526, and of Noaillé, 1540-74, both Benedictine Houses of Poitou. Of the same family was Raymond de Mareuil, Archbishop of Bordeaux, 1558-59. The arms were occasionally borne per fesse and the lion uncrowned.

Authorities.—¹ Baron de La Batut, 'Notice sur les prélates issus de familles périgourdines avant 1789,' Bulletin de la Société historique et archéologique du Périgord, x, 377, 1883 (cf. xxv, 227, 1898). Also Gallia Christiana Nova, ii, 1292, 1494; xliii, 345.

- (7) MS. 120. Quarterly: 1, 4, or two pales gules, for Aragon; 2, 3, argeni a cross potent sable, for Calabria.

Léopold Delisle¹ and G. Mazzatinti,² the principal authorities, agree in attributing MSS. with these arms (technically the insignia of a Duke of Calabria of the Aragonese line of Naples, and heir apparent) to Alfonso v (d. 1458), rather than to his successors, of whom Ferdinand i (d. 1494) was a bibliophile. The royal Aragonese library was brought to France by Charles viii after his conquest of Naples, and was kept at Blois. Thence, and from the volumes sold by Queen Isabella del Balzo to Cardinal Georges i d'Amboise, is derived the collection of works of this provenance in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris. The last Aragonese prince of Naples, Ferdinand, Duke of Calabria, died at Valencia in 1550, bequeathing his library to the monastery of San Miguel de los Reyes, at the dissolution of which a certain number of volumes found their way into the University Library at Valencia,³ and the remainder were dispersed without record.

Gutiérrez del Caño, Catálogo de los manuscritos existentes en la Biblioteca Universitaria de Valencia. 1913.

- (8) MS. 161. Quarterly: 1, 4, azure three fleurs de lys or, a label of three points argent, for Orleans; 2, 3, or a serpent azure, ondoyant in pale, devouring a child gules, for Milan. The shield is ensigned by a jewelled circlet, and surrounded by the collar of the Order of S. Michael.

Arms of Louis ii, Duke of Orleans, b. 1462, son of Charles, Duke of Orleans and (titular) of Milan (d. 1465-6), by his third wife, Mary of Cleves; and grandson of Louis of Valois, Duke of Orleans (d. 1407) and Valentina Visconti. The date of his election to the Order of S. Michael, which is uncertain, was under Louis xi (d. 1483), i.e. between the first promotions to the Order upon its foundation by that monarch in 1469, and before the first promotion under Charles viii in 1485.¹ Louis ii of Orleans reigned as Louis xii from 1498 till 1515. The date assignable to the arms is consequently circa 1470-98.

Authorities.—¹ Revue historique, nobiliaire et généalogique, 3rd series, iv, 202. 1879.

(9) MS. 162. Four Coats :

1. Gules a griffin segreant, langued and crowned or, for the city of Perugia.
2. On a bend azure between two laurel (?) may branches vert three stars of the field; the arms ensigned by a mitre, for Alessandro Numai, Bishop of Forll, 1470 (d. before August 1485).
3. Azure a lion rampant argent debruised by a bend or; the shield ensigned by the papal tiara, for Paul II, Pope (1464-71).
4. *Per fesse (i) two lions affrontés each supporting with one paw a rose gules, in chief a martlet sable, and (ii) bendy of six or and gules; a divide vert upon the partition line, charged with a barrulet wavy or; the arms ensigned by a red hat, for Cardinal Giovanni Battista Savelli, of the line of Palombara. He was raised to the purple by Paul II towards the end of his pontificate, but reserved in pecto till 1480, Governor of Perugia, 1466-8, legate to Perugia and Umbria circa 1481-2. He died in 1498.*

(10) MS. 195. Or a lion rampant gules, crowned or, within a double tressure flory counterflory; the shield is ensigned by a barred helmet affronted, surmounted by the crest—out of a crown, a demy lion (in profile), gules, crowned or, grasping in the sinister paw a sword in pale; the shield is encircled by a chain or double cord knotted with rosettes. Supporters two unicorns, as from the reign of James III (Stevenson, ii, 379).

The achievement may be assigned to James III of Scotland (1460-88), but presents a notable variant in the crest.

APPENDIX III

The following notes on the script of the Celtic Psalter, ms. 56, are contributed by Professor W. M. LINDSAY, St. Andrews:—

Irish script would be used in Scotland up to the 15th century in those parts where Gaelic was spoken; but tests have not yet been discovered which will enable us to distinguish Scoto-Irish script from native Irish script.

After the Old Irish period, i.e. from the 10th century, Irish script is not easily dated. For the dating of this ms. we have

1. A 'terminus ante quem' supplied by entries on f. 141 v and 48 v. These entries are in Continental script which can be dated with some certainty.
2. A form of open 'a' used in this ms., and similarly of 'q,' not, I think, found in Irish script after the 11th century. (See Nat. mss. Ireland.)
3. Abbreviations.—Irish abbreviations, which first appear in the 10th century, are f= 'for' (in Latin words, e.g. ftis= 'fortis'), us= 'usque,' cli= 'caeli,' etc., cp= 'caput,' etc. etc. These are of so frequent occurrence in this ms. that it must be later than the 10th century.

For later mss. a useful milestone is supplied by the Coupar-Angus Psalter, a ms. in the Vatican Library which is described (with plates) in vol. ii of the Series Minor of the Codices Vaticani selecti phototypice expressi (Rome, Danesi, 1910); its abbreviations published by the Rev. Dr. H. M. Bannister in Zeitschrift für Celtische Philologie, vol. viii, pp. 246-58. Its date (century xii, xiii) is fairly certain; for the Coupar-Angus librarian's entry in Continental script at the beginning is (Sir G. Warner has said it) of the 13th century, and the ink of this entry is manifestly, to those who have seen

I. Fragments of English Verse on ff. i and ii.

f. i So þat at myn endyng day
 Cl[ene] [o]f synne dye i may,
 With shrift and hosel at myn ende ;
 So þat my soul mai wende
 In to þat blys empere
 Þere þu reynest lord and sere.
 Swete lady seynt Mary,
 Full of al cortesy,
 Modir of mercy and of pitē,
 Myn hope of help is al [in þe].
 Wel y wote born þu were
 In help of us wrecchis here ;
 Wel y wot þat al thyng
 Pi son doth at pi biddyng.
 Biseke him for þe love of þe þat he have mercy on me ;
 Biseke also floure of alle
 Pi sone for my frend[ys] alle, þat he hem kepe with his grace
 Fro alle peryles in every place,
 Gif hem good lyf and good ende

And joye qwan þei shul hens
 we[nde] ;
 And also alle crysten men
 Swete jhesu amen amen.
 Seynt myhel and gabriel
 And alle good angels [also wel],
 Preyeþ for me with oure lady
 þat jhesus on me have mercy.
 Holy patriarkes and prophetes
 All y pray ȝow and bysekes :
 Preyeþ for me with oure lady
 þat jhesus on me have mercy.¹

f. ii (a) God shild þat day my soul fro care
 Quhan yt shal fro my body fare ;
 And have mercy on me ;
 As wise y leve and wil y wot
 On gode Fryday pi riȝt fot
 Was nayled to þe tre.
 As wys as hard to þe tre
 Pi lift fot was nayled for me,

 Pat me ne dere no wight. Ave.]
 Mary þat hath no pere,
 Here to-day my preyere,
 Thow y unworthy be;
 To þe y clepe and calle,

As þu art floure of alle þu have mercy on me.
 Mary moder maydyn weke,
 For þat joye y þe byseke þat gabriel þe grette.
 Kepe me bothe day and nyȝt
 Fro ye devyl and al his myȝt,
 And of my mysdede me lette.
 For þe joye þat god [was] bor[en]
 Of þe lady let me be . . .
 þat þi sone bouȝt dere.
 [Bot undersong] to-day [my boede], þat yt may . . . þe . . .
 Porwh þi swete preyere.¹
