

A GREAT START TO AN EXCITING NEW CHAPTER

The Broadcom and VMware leadership teams spent the past week connecting with employees, customers, partners and shareholders of both companies. There’s clearly a lot of enthusiasm about this combination and its impact on the future of infrastructure technology.

Headlines Across the Media Landscape

Bloomberg

“VMware bolsters Broadcom’s software offerings -- a key part of Tan’s strategy in recent years.”

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL

“Its integration with the large cloud platforms has put VMware in a position to be a partner for organizations moving data from their private data centers to the cloud. VMware has also become an important player in the multicloud business, where organizations mix and match the various cloud platforms to get better pricing and service.”

The New York Times

“The resulting combination of chip company and software maker would be one of the most important suppliers of technology to the cloud computing market.”

FT FINANCIAL TIMES

“... will help transform Broadcom, an acquisitive semiconductor group, into a diversified tech company ranging from chips to cloud computing services.”

The Economist

“A chipmaker buying a software firm may seem strange. But Broadcom has done the same thing in the past with striking success.”

CNBC

Better Possibilities for Partners + Customers

“By having more strong players and hybrid cloud, it accelerates growth and will lower prices over time. It’s procompetitive, not anticompetitive.”

–Marty Wolf, Managing Partner at Martinwolf

Recognition from Financial and Industry Analysts

KeyBanc Capital Markets

“We believe this deal would make strategic sense for AVGO and would: 1) be highly complementary to the Company’s infrastructure software franchise and to AVGO’s semiconductor franchise in the data center; 2) position the Company well to capture the growing trends toward private/public cloud and hybrid/multi-cloud; 3) further increase the Company’s annual cash flow and diversify the software franchise; and 4) enhance scale and drive margin expansions with COGS/OPEX synergies, cross-selling, and channel integration.” 5.26.22

RAYMOND JAMES

“The acquisition bolsters AVGO’s software ambitions and strengthens its exposure to the hybrid cloud market.” 5.26.22

BERNSTEIN

“We have long been fans of Broadcom’s M&A strategy, and believe the deal can continue to drive the company’s operating metrics higher, while also providing further diversification and helping to offset potential semi cycle risk.” 5.27.22

451 Research | S&P Global

“Broadcom’s rebranding shows that it will (rightly) position VMware as its flagship software offering, and work hard to maintain the unit’s identity.” 5.26.22
